APPLIANCES FOR SAFETY

Must be Installed at Street Crossings by Railroad Companies.

Applies to Case of Duluth vs. the Northern Pacific.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—A decision of far reaching importance was filed today by the state supreme court, in which the right of the state to compel railroads to install safety devices at street crossings was upheld.

The case was the state ex rel city of Minneapolis, appellant, vs. the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad company et al, defendants and respondents. In the Minneapolis district court, the decision was against the city, but the supreme court reverses the decree. The supreme court, in reversing the decision of the Minneapolis courts says:

"The state may, in the exercise of its police powers, impose on railroads, whose lines cross intersecting streets laid out after the construction of the railroad, the uncompensated duty of constructing and maintaining at such crossings such safety devices as are reasonable for the protection of the traveling public."

In the case of Duluth vs. the Northern Pacific railroad the court held the same rule should apply.

ROOT TO SAIL IN A CHILEAN WARSHIP

To Skirt West Coast of South America in One.

Washington, June 29.—Secretary Root will accept the hospitality of Chile and make part of his trip along the west coast of South America in a Chilean warship. The United States cruiser Charleston, on which Secretary Root will sail for South America, is too large a craft to work its way along the inside passage of the straits of Magellan to Valparaiso, Chile, and consequently the American secretary of state and his party will probably leave the Charleston at Sandy Point, in the straits of Magellan and go aboard a Chilean man of war which can work its way along between the islands of the west coast and the mainland, thus shortening the trip by several hundred miles and enabling Mr. Root to remain longer in Chile.

Secretary Root will probably be in Rio Janeiro for about ten days. His stops on the West Coast of South America will be Vapuraiso, Chile; Callao, Peru; and Guayaquil, Ecuador. From Vaparaslo he will journey by rail to Santiago, the capital of Chile. He will also take the rail trip from Callao to Lima, the Peruvian capital. The distance from Guayaquil to Quito, the capital of Ecuador, is so great that Mr. Root probably will be unable to make the trip.

After crossing the isthmus of Panama Mr. Root will go to Cartagena, Columbia, to pay his respects to that government. The Colombian secretary of state will doubtless be at Cartagena to greet Mr. Root and it is not unlikely that President Reyes himself will make the long trip from Bogota to greet the American secretary of state. Cartagena will be Mr. Roots last stop before returning to New York.

HAS VIOLATED MISSOURI LAWS

Circuit Attorney Would Oust Cella Company From State.

St. Louis, June 29.—Circuit Attorney Sager, acting for the state of Missouri, instituted quo warranto proceedings today in the circuit court against the Cella company of St. Louis, to oust that company and all its franchises and privileges from the state of Missouri, and asking that all its privileges be declared forfeited, and that its property be forfeited to the state. The petition alleges that ever since its organization the Cella company has violated the laws of this state, and has perverted and misused its corporate authority, franchises and privileges, and has unlawfully assumed and usurped franchises and privileges not granted to it by the laws of the state of Missouri. The company's officers are named in Gould's business directory as F. G. Miner, president and treasurer; C. A. Tiller, vice president, and P. A. Stephens, secretary.

LEDERER IS CITED IN DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS.

Chicago, June 29.—George W. Lederer, manager of the Colonial theater, was made defendant in the circuit court yesterday in divorce proceedings by Mrs. Adele R. Lederer. The action is based on statutory charges, but the name of the co-respondent is not given.

Since Mr. Lederer came to Chicago to take charge of the Colonial theater, the complainant has been watching his actions. She asserts that the theatrical man figured in an escapade May 13 last, but avers that the name of the woman on that occasion is unknown to her.

The complainant asks that she be given custody of their child, Maitland Lederer, and she also asks for alimony. The Lederers were married in Jersey City in 1894.

RUSSIAN COURT FEARS TO LEAVE THE GROUNDS OF PETERHOF PALACE

Imperial Family Practically Prisoners Within Small Territory.

Czar Will Not Go to Tsarskoe Selo as Reported.

General Staff Fears Morale of Entire Army is Shaken.

St. Petersburg, June 29.—An official denial is given of the report that the emperor and court are leaving Peterhof and returning to Tsarskoe-Selo owing to the discovery of a revolutionary plot among the palace servants. The report is officially accounted for by rumors following the retirement of Gen. Plesko, the commandant at Peterhof, and the appointment of Col. Lermentoff, commander of the imperial regiment of Uhlans, as his successor. The former's retirement is stated to be due purely to private considerations but several officers of his staff are indignant at the promotion of Col. Lermentoff over their heads and have asked to be relieved. This gave rise to the report of the discovery of a revolutionary plot. While the official explanations are regarded with suspicion as it is beyond question that the terrorists and revolutionists are constantly attempting to gain a foothold in the palace, there is no cause to doubt the truth of the official statement that the court has no intention of returning to Tsarskoe-Selo this summer.

Peterhof in reality is much safer for the imperial family than Tsarskoe-Selo, being located on a gulf, enabling the imperial yacht to be moored at a wharf two hundred yards from the palace, always available to convey the emperor and his family to Finland, or some other place of security. There is an elaborate system of wireless telegraphy connecting the palace of Peterhof with the fortresses of Cronstadt, Viborg and Helsingfors and with the warships in the gulf, thus insuring the emperor against being cut off from the outside world as he was during the telegraph operator's strike of last fall. Since the revelations that disloyalty had invaded even "His majesty's own" regiment the Probrajensky regiment of the Guards), it is asserted here that nothing would be surprising.

Gen. Trepoff, commander of the palace, who is personally charged with protecting the safety of the emperor's person, has redoubled his precautions. The garrison at Peterhof has been strengthened by a guard of Circassians and the detachment of Cossacks about the palace has been doubled. The servants at the palace, as heretofore, are the emperor's faithful mamelukes and Tartars, some of whom do not speak the Russian language. The Russian servants are confined for the time being to tried lackeys and valets, but among these the terrorists have frequently boasted that they had spies. Newsboys carrying sacks are forbidden to enter the grounds of the old palace, to which the public is admitted, and no one is allowed within the walls surrounding the grounds of the small palace, where the imperial family resides, without a permit. Secret police by the hundreds, in civilian clothes, throng the parks and streets. The emperor never drives out beyond the grounds of the small palace, and the members of the court are practically prisoners within its walls. The principal amusement is tennis, but all the customary gaiety of court life has vanished.

The crushing blow inflicted on the emperor by the discovery of disaffection in his favorite regiment, the Preobrajensky regiment of Life Guards, as shown by its adoption of resolutions upholding all the actions of parliament, and announcing that the men wanted no more police duty, entailing the slaying of brothers or fathers, has so affected his majesty that he ordered the name of the disloyal First batallon to be stricken from the roll of the Imperial Guards. In addition, the soldiers and officers of the battallon have been deprived forever of the special rights enjoyed by guardsmen, and hereafter the battalion will be designated "the special infantry battalion."

The general staff no longer conceals its fear that the morale of the entire army is profoundly shaken, and that, with parliament championing the cause of the murderers in each instance as it arises, the first big test may find troops line up as the French guards did two days before the Bastile fell, on the side of the people and against the monarchy.

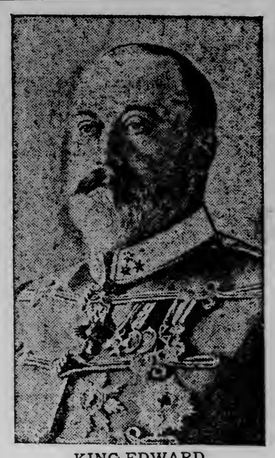

MORE WOE

In Prospect for the Saloon Men of St. Cloud.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 29.—The people of this city are beginning to discuss the lid problem since Adolph Lindenberg, proprietor of the Grand Central saloon, was arrested and brought up to Sauk Center for a hearing.

The arrest of Lindenberg by an officer out of the city, the preliminary hearing in Sauk Center, the attitude of County Attorney J. B. Himsl, and last, but not least, Judge David Wilcox of Sauk Center. All these have made the lid business worth talking about.

And now comes the Rev. C. W. Stark, the Methodist pastor of St. Cloud, who is looked upon as the yeast that will raise the lid, and he states that he has cases against twenty-one saloonkeepers of St. Cloud, and that just as soon as the Lindenberg trial is over he will have the next man arrested, and keep the good work going till the finish. Rev. Stark claims that he has two cases of violation of the Sunday law against each saloonkeeper, making about sixty cases in all. One of the remarkable features about the case is that all of the attorneys for the state are out of town men. They are County Attorney George W. Peterson of Todd county, L. R. Barto of Sauk Center, and M. C. Kelsey of Sauk Center.

KING EDWARD.

CELEBRATION IS CANCELLED

London, June 29.—Most of the arrangements for the public observance of King Edward's birthday were cancelled today on account of a severe rain storm which visited this country during the early hours of the morning. Over two inches of rain fell in London in eight hours, constituting a record. Many districts were flooded, people were driven out of their houses, the underground railroads were inundated and traffic was stopped. In some of the suburbs of this city the streets were impassable to pedestrians and the imprisoned occupants were rescued by firemen in boats. The king ordered the cancellation of the ceremony of trooping the colors on the royal guards parade and the abandonment of the reviews of troops at Aldershot and elsewhere.

A great amount of damage was caused by the storm in the agricultural districts.

RESCUED BY NEGRO.

Norfolk, Neb., June 29.—Mrs. Charles Eble, a widow of three weeks and mother of fifteen children, attempted suicide by jumping into the Northfork river at a secluded spot at 5 a. m. By a queer fate, John King, a colored fisherman, was near at hand baiting hooks for the day. He jumped in and rescued the woman. She begged to be allowed to drown, and fought his efforts to save her. She is 60 years old. Her husband died June 4, and she has been unable to sleep since.

CONCESSION BY SENATE

Likely to be the Outcome on Meat Inspection Bill.

Beveridge Has Withdrawn His Objections to House Substitute.

Washington, June 29.—Senator Beveridge who introduced the original meat inspection amendement to the agricultural bill, has withdrawn his objections to the house substitute and this is taken as an indication that the senate will so instruct its conferees to accept the house provision. The Indiana senator said he was in favor of compelling the packers to pay the cost of inspection and requiring them to place the date of inspection on cans of meat. He said that the house substitute retained all other features of the senate bill and that in the interest of practical legislation to purify meat products he would not stand in the way, because the government is required to pay the cost of inspection.

The senate leaders believe that the outcome must be a concession to the house.

When the conferees on the agricultural bill met today the house representatives announced that under the instructions voted by the house they would be compelled to insist upon the house provision in regard to meat inspection without compromise of any kind. The senate conferees stood out for the compromise proposition offered by Senator Proctor to divide the expense of inspection between the packers and the government, by retaining the $3,000,000 appropriation but taxing cattle five cents and swine, sheep and goats 3 cents a head, which would result in revenues of about $1,500,000 annually. The conference broke up at 11:15 o'clock. Senator Proctor announced that he would ask the senate for instructions.

BAD STORM AT MELLEN.

Gertrude Whitney Receives a Very Severe Shock From Lightning.

Mellen, Wis., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the most terrific electrical storms of the season struck Mellen at 11 a. m., yesterday. Telegraph poles were torn down and signs blown away. The 155-foot brick chimney at the United States Lumber company's plant was struck by lightning. Gertrude Whitney, a domestic at the Central hotel, received a bad shock, and has not been able to speak since, but the doctors think she will recover.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED.

Plaintiff in Big Damage Suit Passes Away Suddenly.

Crookston, Minn., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Anderson was found dead in his bed this morning. Anderson had three ribs broken while repairing cars on the Great Northern tracks here, a few months ago, and his suit against that road for damages in the sum of $30,000 was to have been tried today. He was 24 years old and single.

THAW ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY OF MURDER OF STANFORD WHITE

HARRY K. THAW,

With Reservation That It May be Withdrawn Later.

Emotional Insanity Will be the Defense of Murderer.

Thaw Accepts Discipline of Prison in a Graceful Manner.

New York, June 29.—An announcement that the defense will make "emotional insanity" the basis for its fight for the release of Harry K. Thaw, in jail indicted for the murder of Stanford White, set at rest the speculation on this point. Justifiable homicide and the straight plea of insanity had been suggested as a line of defense, but Thaw himself made the insanity move impossible by his refusal to consider it, and by declining to allow alienists to question him. It will not be claimed that the young man is insane now. Such a plea would mean a sentence to the asylum for criminal insane at Matewan.

This new line means a trial, and if the plea of "emotional insanity" is justified, Thaw will be a free man. The defense, it has also been announced, plans to bring out the whole story of White's life, of his relations with Evelyn Nesbit, before she married Thaw, and of his subsequent actions, which the defense claims, annoyed Mrs. Thaw and goaded the husband on to the shooting.

District Attorney Jerome, who is on his vacation, left Cape Breton yesterday for New York. The arraignment of Thaw today in the court of special sessions is simply for the purpose of receiving the prisoner's plea of "not guilty," and Mr. Jerome's return, it is expected, will hurry the actual trial. It is suggested today that the district attorney may personally conduct the prosecution.

Mrs. Thaw will be a witness for her husband at the trial. She has declared her willingness to tell all she knows. She fully realizes that in doing so she will subject herself to a searching cross examination. That Thaw bought a revolver to kill White, or that the killing was premeditated, will be denied. The defense is prepared to prove that Thaw had been accustomed, for more than two years, to carry a revolver. About two years ago, according to evidence in its possession, Thaw was atacked by thugs while out late one night, and since that time had carried the weapon.

Thaw's action in telephoning Anthony Comstock yesterday aroused much interest. Mr. Comstock, in an interview, is quoted as saying that he is willing to appear for the defense if called upon and give evidence as to White's character.

The strain of yesterday's proceedings seriously affected Mrs. Thaw. She had hardly reached her apartments when she fainted, and it was necessary to call a physician to revive her.

While waiting for the opening of court, Thaw sat near an open window in the Bridge of Sighs, which connects the prison with the criminal court building. He talked freely with newspaper men and others during his brief stay, but declined to say anything whatever concerning his case. He appeared to be in good physical condition, and said that he slept fairly well last night.

"How do you find the beds?" Thaw was asked.

"Well," he replied, "they are not just what I have been used to, but I guess I'll get accustomed to them."

Thaw was taken into Justice Cowing's court, where he was to plead to the murder charge behind three other prisoners; one of them was a negro, charged with larceny. He was clothed in the same suit which he wore yesterday, with a white shirt and collar and a black tie. His appearance was very little different from that of yesterday, except that he was slightly paler. He stood with his back to an open window, at the north end of the court room, and chatted to a court officer while the other prisoners were being arraigned. When his case was called, Thaw stepped briskly to the barrier, inside of which his counsel, ex-Judge Olcott and T. J. McManus, were siting at a table, with Assistant District Attorneys Garvan and Nott.

When Clerk Tenny read the charge of murder in the first degree for the killing of Stanford White he asked Thaw what he had to say in regard to the indictment and the prisoner answered distinctly "Not Guilty." His counsel immediately interposed an amendment to the plea, asking of the court leave to withdraw the plea anytime up to next Tuesday. This was granted and a moment later the prisoner was led away from the bar and re-entered the prison. Thew was remarkably cool and collected during his brief visit to the court room and prior to the ordeal when he sat a time in the Bridge of Sighs, he was under the watchful eyes of several policemen and prison keepers, but apparently he was unaware of their continuous scrutiny of his every movement. His face was pallid but his eyes were bright and every glance he took at the passing to and fro of the prisoners showed that he was keenly alert and more than interested in the surroundings. The only carelessness in the prisoners makeup that was noticeable was the fact that his hair was ruffled as if it had not been combed for over a week.

Mrs. Thaw, according to the prisoner's lawyers had not been down town during the forenoon but she was expected to call upon her husband as well as his legal advisers some time later in the day.

UNPLEASANT IN PRISON.

Thaw, However, Accepts the Discipline in a Graceful Manner.

New York, June 29.—Thaw has had several unpleasant experiences with prison discipline since his confinement in the Tombs, but his keepers say that on each occasion he has met them gracefully. He had considerable difficulty in getting to sleep last night because of the intense heat in his cell and about midnight called a keeper and asked permission to walk in the corridors. "I'm sorry" replied the keeper, "but the regulations forbid prisoners leaving their cells during the night."

"Then I guess I don't walk" was Thaw's comment as he returned to his cot.

An hour later he told the keeper he was hungry and asked for a lunch, but again the prison regulations were called to his attention.

"Then I don't eat, either" said Thaw with a smile and a few minutes later he was sound asleep. He was up early this morning and by the time the gong sounded at 7 o'clock was ready for the morning exercise in the corridor.

Talking to a keeper about the exercise he got in prison, he said it was hardly enough for him, as he had been in the habit of swinging Indian clubs every morning when he first got up. He asked if it would not be possible for arrangements to be made for him to have either a pair of clubs or dumb bells brought to him so that he could get more exercise.

"Not on theis tier" was the keeper's diplomatic way of informing Thaw that prisoners charged with murder are not allowed to have weapons of any kind or anything else with which they might possibly do themselves or others an injury.

DEATHS BY DYNAMITE

Eight Men Killed on Mesaba Range by Deadly Explosive.

John Shogren of Virginia Electrocuted by Live Wire.

Aurora, Minn., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Six men were killed in a dynamite accident at the Mohawk mine, about 12 o'clock last night. There was an accidental explosion of dynamite, but just how it occurred no one appears to know. Following are the names of the men:

Oscar Carlson, Abraham Zaara, Isaac Mattson, Helmer Erickson, J. Alvis and an unknown Austrian. It is said that all the men were single.

The mine authorities say the accident must have been the result of the men's own carelessness. Some attribute the cause to an explosion of a machine used for thawing dynamite.

One of the men was literally blown to pieces. The others were more or less cut and bruised, but were in such a condition that their identity could be easily recognized.

TWO KILLED AT HOLLAND.

Man and Boy Meet Death From Dynamite Explosion.

Biwabik, Minn., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ralph Cari and Joe Fabrich were killed by an explosion of dynamite at the Holland mine last Friday night. The news of the accident has just been made public. Cari, who was an Italian, was working in the open pit with two Austrians. A charge of dynamite was set, and the Austrians left Cari to fire it off. After the explosion his dead body was found in the pit, and it was not until half an hour or so afterwards that it was known that Fabrich had been killed. Then his body was also found. The latter was a 16-year old boy whose parents live at Biwabik. He was supposed to be working in another part of the mine, and the officials say he had no business around the pit. It is supposed that he came along and entered into conversation with the Italian, the latter forgetting that he had ignited the fuse leading to the charge of dynamite.

FATAL ELECTRIC SHOCK.

John Shogren Killed in Hamilton's Hardware Store at Virginia.

Virginia, Minn., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Shogren, 30 years old, was killed by an electric shock in the basement of Andrew Hamilton's hardware store some time last night. The body was not discovered until this morning. Shogren came in contact with a live wire. The young man was a bookkeeper in the employ of Hamilton. He worked late last night, and for some reason went into the basement. In turning on the electric light his hand came in contact with an electric current. His left hand placed on the iron water pipe near by made the current the more effective. Shogren leaves a wife and child. He had been a resident of Virginia for 21 years, and had been in the employ of Mr. Hamilton five years. He was a member of the Woodsmen order and of the Canadian Aid society. His funeral will probably be held Sunday.

TERM OF LIFE WAS SHORT.

White Could Not Have Lived More Than Two Years.

New York, June 29.—Standford White was buried yesterday with simple ceremonies at St. James, L. I., where he had a summer home. The services were held in the St. James Episcopal church and interment was made in the graveyard surrounding the quaint little edifice.

In the opinions of physicians who performed the autopsy on White's body, the life of the architect was shortened not more than two years by the bullets from Thaw's pistol. He was found to be suffering from Brights disease, from incipient tuberculosis and from fatty degeneration of the liver.

HEAVILY IN DEBT.

Stanford White Had Been Living Beyond His Income.

New York, June 29.—According to the Globe today investigation has brought to light the fact that Standford White who was supposed to be wealthy had been living beyond his income and was heavily in debt, owing $200,000 to one young member of a prominent family and as much to other persons. In addition to this the Globe says White had drawn so heavily from the architectural firm of which he was a member that he had been notified he could draw no more but would be alloted a weekly sum, which was not to be exceeded.

THE MUTUAL LIFE WILL WITHDRAW FROM FRANCE.

New York, June 28.—The Times says: "It was announced last night that the Mutual Life Insurance company had decided to withdraw from writing new business in France on account of the new French law compelling reserves to be kept there against all the French business both of the past and future.

"A bitter fight has been made against this law and Vice President McClintock of the Mutual, made it one of the objects of his present European visit to see what he could do to prevent its being declared retroactive. The French government, however, and the people of France generally have been greatly stirred up by the insurance disclosures in this country and public sentiment was strongly in keeping the measure to its fullest stringency."

WILL VOTE ON GROUNDS

Sentiment Seems to be Favorable—Will Know by July 15.

The committee appointed by the Federated Trades' assembly, with the object in view of securing for the unions of the city grounds and a pavilion for picnic and rental purposes, believe that the scheme advanced will be adopted by the unions of the city. The matter has been submitted to a referendum vote of the unions for their adoption or rejection, and during the present week the members of the committee are engaged in visiting the various unions on their meeting nights, explaining the matter and urging its adoption. Next week will be spent in the same way, and it is generally believed that the matter will be brought to a successful conclusion.

The committee decided upon five lots next to Fairmount park, at West Duluth, out on the West Third street car line, as the most favorable place for such grounds. They could be obtained at a reasonable price. The plan of the committee is to expend about $700 for grounds, and about $2,500 more for a pavilion, should the unions agree to it. It is planned to form a corporation for operating the grounds and pavilion, the governing board to be formed of one director from each union subscribing toward the purchase and building price $250, or a fraction thereof, each director to be elected for one year. Also, these directors are to elect each year a permanent manager for the pavilion.

The unions have for several years had trouble getting suitable grounds for Labor day, and usually at the last minute have had trouble over transportation, in view of the fact that the state fair comes about the same time, and the railroads use all of their rolling stock for that exhibition. It is pointed out that with grounds of their own within easy reaching distance of the city, the unions will be in an independent position, and will always have good grounds and a comfortable place for speeches and dancing. The members of the committee say that the unions can very easily, if they wish, subscribe the money, and each year have good interest on it, as such a place, it is believed, will readily rent frequently during the year to other societies and organizations. The land being right beside Fairmount park, makes the park available for basket lunches and picnicking, while the grounds will be big enough for the ordinary kinds of sport.

Henry DeRoche, chairman of the committee, and original pusher of the idea, says it looks as though the plan will be adopted, the unions readily recognizing its value. The vote on the subject is to be in the committee's hands not later than July 15.

DRIFTING INTO AN UGLY FUED

Des Moines, Iowa, June 29.—Iowa is reeling in the throes of the fiercest governorship campaign in its history. The feud between the "progressives" and the "stand patters" has spread and intensified, until the Republican party throughout the state is seething with factional strife, the rancor of which bids fair to lead to a hand-to-hand fight in the state convention, Aug. 1, the placing of two tickets in the field and a struggle at the polls in November, in which neither side will be content with less than the extermination of its rival.

An analysis of the campaign arguments of both sides fails to disclose anything in the nature of the specific issue to mark the cleavage between the two wings. Cummins insists on making "corporation domination" the basic issue of his fight. The Perkins men argue that the tariff question is the only one worth while discussing.

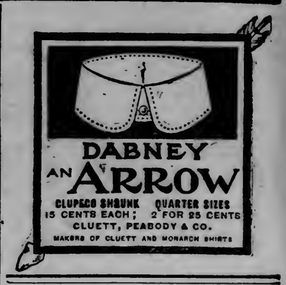

The "stand pats" have adroitly seized the old "Iowa idea" as the strongest issue within their reach, and are flooding the state with literature denouncing the executive as a "Democrat," for advocating tariff revision four years ago. In the farming communities, particularly in the lower third of the state, which is controlled politically by railroads, the voters have been told by scores of stump speakers that the governor is a renegade from his party, because he advocates adjusting tariff schedules whenever it becomes necessary. The governor retaliates by laying stress on the manner in which the railroads are seeking to insert the stiletto between his clavicles.

The Cummins campaign is based on two comprehensive issues: (1) Shall the corporations dominate the state? In other words, shall the railroads select a governor and elect him? (2) Shall the rights of the electors be extended and safeguarded by the enactment of a uniform primary law?

On the "stand pat" side Mr. Perkins asserts that there is no issue of more than local importance. His supporters, however, are basing their efforts on three points that, in speeches and circulars, are given the following partisan color: (1) The tariff question—shall the Republicans elect a governor who is at heart a Democrat? (2) The third term—Will the Republicans gratify the ambition of Governor Cummins to keep in the political limelight by electing him for another term in violation of the unwritten law of the state? (3) Official extravagance—Why have taxes gone up during the Cummins administration?

The campaign of Governor Cummins is based on the contention that his opponent, Mr. Perkins, is being supported by the railways of the state; that they are managing the "stand pat" campaign, and that they are seeking to secure absolute control of the next state administration. This is his "corporation domintion" issue.

The "stand pats" make rejoindor that the railroads are no more energetic this year than during and other campaign, and that the corporation politicians who are backing the Perkins candidacy worked as strenuously for Governor Cummins in other campaigns.

Following the Flag

When our soldiers went to Cuba and the Philippines, health was the most important consideration. Willis T. Morgan, retired commissary sergeant U. S. A., of Rural Route 1, Concord, N. H., says: "I was two years in Cuba and two years in the Philippines, and being subject to colds, I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which kept me in perfect health. And now, in New Hampshire, we find it the best medicine in the world for coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and all lung diseases. Guaranteed at all druggists. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

LADY CHURCHILL IN SWIM AGAIN

King Edward Finally Relents and Makes up With Her.

London, June 29.—Ever since Lady Randolph Churchill became Mrs. George Cornwallis West she and the king have scarcely been on speaking terms. His majesty has a positive horror of a woman marrying a man younger than herself. When Lady Randolph announced to the king her engagement to Mr. West (who is just a year younger than her son, Winston Churchill), he said to her something to this effect:

"Jenny, I always regarded you as a clever woman. It is a great regret to me to find that you are going to make a fool of yourself. Such marriages as the one you are about to make never turn out well."

As every one knows Mrs. West ignored the king's remarks, with the result that his majesty "dropped" her. She was never invited to country houses to meet him, never asked as hitherto to Sandringham or Windsor. But the other day the king relented and motored off to see his old friend, telephoning first that he intended to do so. I hear it was Consuelo, duchess of Manchester, who induced his majesty to "make it up" with Mrs. "George" and gave him no peace until he had promised to do so. On hearing from the king, Mrs. Cornwallis West wired to Consuelo, duchess of Manchester, and to Lady Mar and Kellie, another of "Bertie's" friends, and both arrived on the scene in good time to greet him. It was a great reunion! Champagne was broken—an unusual circumstance, for the king and the ladies in question never touch this wine at lunch. The occasion, however, had to be celebrated.

"So you are glad you did not take my advice four years ago," said the king to his hostess.

"G. and I are still on our honeymoon," was Mrs. West's reply.

Ever since the king has been to see his old friend invitations have flown in upon her from people who have never invited her since her remarriage. Mrs. West, who has all of the American woman's keen sense of humor, has been enormously amused. A king's smile today in England makes a man or woman. The king's frown means destruction. Todayism is the order of the hour. Mrs. George West is triumphant. For her wit and originality, she has always held a place in his majesty's regard, and in allowing her to drop out of his circle of friends it is quite an open secret that it was a case of the king's cutting off his nose to spite his face.

COULD NOT REST NIGHT OR DAY

With Irritating Skin Humor—Whole Body Affected—Scalp Itched All the Time and Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From

APPLICATION OF CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I am never without Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment since I tried them last summer. About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors; but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body; and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured, and my hair stopped falling out, but I continue to use the Cuticura on my scalp. It keeps all dandruff out and scalp is always clean. I always use Cuticura Ointment on my face after shaving, and have found nothing to equal it. I will never be without it." D. E. Blankenship, 319 N. Del. St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Oct. 27, 1905.

RECOMMENDED TO ALL MOTHERS

"I have used Cuticura Ointment for chafing of infants, and as they grew older all skin diseases were given treatment with that and the Cuticura Soap. I never found it necessary to call a doctor, as these Remedies are a sure cure, if used as directed. I am glad to recommend them to all mothers." Sincerely yours, Mrs. F. A. Kennard, St. Paul Park, Minn.

What We Warrant the BOHN To Do.

THESE claims are not mere paper talk. Not exaggerated advertising statements, but service we Absolutely Guarantee THE BOHN to perform.

One food will not taint another. For example, celery or muskmelons will not contaminate milk or butter.

Milk, the most perishable food, will remain fresh and wholesome in a BOHN 72 hours or more.

The food compartment is larger than in any other similar-priced refrigerator, size for size.

The air circulation can be actually proved by holding a lighted match at the bottom of the food compartment where the current starts.

The interior is perfectly dry as may be proved by storing matches in the food section any length of time after which they strike readily.

The temperature is 10 degrees lower than others and with the same or less amount of ice. The enamel of opalite is as easily cleaned as a piece of china. What does your refrigerator do? Do not jeopardize headth by being without a BOHN! Now on sale.

TO FINISH HOME.

Dynamiters Go to Fond du Lac to Do Interior Work on Bungalow.

The members of the Dynamite club will go up the river tomorrow to finish the work on their Bungalow there. The interior work will be finished on this trip and it is expected that the inside of the building will be something of a novelty. It will have as ornaments death's deads, figures of goblins and other things which depict the character of an organization of this kind.

John Lauermann, now of Aberdeen, S. D., and who is a member of the club has been honored for this occasion by being elected superintendent of the work for tomorrow and it is expected that he will furnish more hot air and criticism than work on the occasion.

ATTORNEY CONFIDENT

That No Liquor Will be Served in Kansas City, Kas.

Kansas City, June 29.—C. W. Trickett, assistant attorney general who is fighting the saloons in Kansas City, Kas., conferred today with Judge W. G. Holt of the common pleas court on a new scheme to close the joints. "I predict," said Mr. Trickett, "that there will be no liquor served in this county within thirty-six hours after we launch our new campaign," the nature of which he declined to make known.

In the meantime, the attorney general continued collecting evidence preparatory to final action in the case of the forty jointists who had previously been served with writs of abatement.

WEST DULUTH

BAPTISTS IN SESSION

Several Addresses and Many Reports Made—About to Close.

The members of the Lake Superior Baptist association opened their annual meeting at the West Duluth Baptist church last night by electing officers for the ensuing year, as follows:

Moderator, Rev. A. E. Peterson of Superior, who succeeds Rev. J. W. Loughridge of Duluth; clerk, H. V. Holmes of Duluth; treasurer, J. O. Milne of Duluth, and auditor, Rev. Arthur J. Hoag of West Duluth.

The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. S. L. Mitchell of the First church, Duluth, and Rev. A. E. Peterson talked on "The World's Field." Miss Hannah Ritzman reported on foreign missions, and the report was very gratifying.

This morning's session opened at 10:30 with a devotional service, led by Rev. J. W. Loughridge, and was followed by the report of the treasurer, G. H. Giffin of Superior; of the committee on systematic beneficence, read by Mrs. J. O. Milne; of the commitee on ministerial education, by J. D. Holmes of Duluth; of the commitee on obituaries, by Rev. Arthur J. Hoag of West Duluth; of the commitee on publication society, by Merton Giffin of Superior; and of the commitee on state work, by H. V. Holmes of Duluth. E. R. Pope of Minneapolis closed the meeting with an address on "A Few Facts and Figures." The addresses have all been excellent, and the reports have been very encouraging.

This afternoon's session will deal with the work of the women of the district, and this evening the Baptist Young

WATTS WAS DESERTED

By Ellen Terry, Whom He Married When Only Sixteen.

She Went to Dinner in Tights and Then Left.

London, June 29.—Ellen Terry's jubilee has brought up the story of her marriage to Watts, the painter—the one thing in her life which has always been more or less of a mystery. That the marriage took place and that a legal separation was obtained by Watts many years after the pair had parted are about the only facts known to the general public.

Miss Terry was only 16 when the then middle-aged artist fell in love with her golden hair, her dancing blue eyes and her graceful form. A woman who was at the wedding says it was a sight never to be forgotten, as Ellen Terry walked, or rather skipped, down the aisle on the arm of the dignified, distinguished man, she looking like some fairy from the realms of the sprites as the sunlight caught her hair and her roguish glance flew from one friend to another.

Watts lived in a big house with two maiden sisters, who managed his simple but stately establishment with all the rigid decorum which only English people seem capable of maintaining in their everyday existence. This was the home to which Watts took his bride, a sunny-faced, undisciplined, wayward child, reared in an atmosphere of Bohemia and totally unable to comprehend the serious people who undertok to order her life.

Watts had an abhorrence of the stage as a fit place for his wife, but Miss Terry had already tasted of the excitement and success of the theater and was not prepared to give it up altogether. She was now removed entirely from any association with it, and her time was purposely filled by her husband with a succession of visits among friends as conventional as himself, and by humdrum domestic duties when at home.

Watts was a man of great nobility of character, but he was not broad in his sympathies and was inclined to be harsh and stern in his judgments. He never understood Ellen Terry and had very little influence in restraining her.

She played pranks all over the house, to the open disgust and amazement of the servants, and she horrified the two maiden sisters every hour in the day.

At last matters came to such a pass that she determined to leave the house and return to her life on the stage. She managed to get her clothes out; then she arranged her farewell with the consummate mischievousness which characterized her. There was a big dinner party at the house, as staid and formal as the circle of people in which Watts moved. Every guest was in place, but the young wife had not appeared. A servant was sent for her and all waited.

Finally she came, audacious and dimpling, her graceful figure outlined in pink tights. She made her bow and then fled.

Watts never saw her again, but for years he cherished the hope that she would give up everything and return to him. He acknowledged that he probably was very largely to blame, and he never ceased to care for her.

An artist friend who was traveling in Egypt with him a few years before his death tells a story of coming across a beautiful young girl in Cairo, an English girl with Ellen Terry's face and hair and manner. Watts turned deathly pale when he saw her and nearly fainted, but gathered strength to get back to his hotel, where he shut himself up for the rest of the day.

Miss Terry's children, to whom she gave the name of Craig, are very unlike. The daughter Edith is quiet, rather plain, and spends her life in making stunning stage gowns. She has a little house in the Westminster quarter with her lifelong friend, a woman known to the London literary and dramatic world as "Christopher St. John."

It is well known that Miss Terry is poor because of the numerous establishments she maintains—her own house in town at Chelsea and her country home in Surrey, her daughter's home, a flat for her son Gordon Craig and another for his wife and children.

Gordon Craig is Miss Terry's pride and joy, though he has lost her dear in money and in worry. He has a pretty and charming wife and four lovely children, but he has practically deserted them, and his mother supports them.

Gordon Craig has many curious ideas about stagecraft. Many will remember how Miss Terry jeopardized her success at the Imperial theater a few years ago in order to introduce his innovations.

Irving was always very kind to the Craig children, and was godfather to Gordon Craig's son.

Irving had a broad-gauge view of life and an infinite fund of sympathy. He and Miss Terry never had a serious quarrel until the one which separated them. And this was really brought about by the maneuverings of a good-looking young woman who had gained a temporary influence upon Irving. When it was too late Irving bitterly regretted the estrangement, for Miss Terry, with her old willfulness, was difficult to reconcile. But a reconciliation did take place before Irving's death.

Of Watts, Miss Terry was never known to speak, and so far as her outward life is concerned her marriage is as if it had never been.

DESPERATE COMBAT WITH WOUNDED RODENT.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 29.—A doctor, a high school professor, a student and the doctor's young son had a desperate fight with a rat last night. Cedric Turner, young son of Dr. William F. Turner, keeps a number of rabbits and pigeons. Thinking thieves were in the yard, Turner and his father got a revolver and a rifle and went for Prof. William M. Duncan and Harry S. Keat, a student, who turned out to assist in capturing the thieves. The men found a rat "bigger than a squirrel." The doctor and his son opened fire, but they only succeeded in wounding the rat in one leg. The wound enraged the rat. It flew at the doctor, gripped his shirt with its teeth and tore it down the front, and then tried to fasten its teeth in the doctor's hroa. Prof. Duncan had a combat with the rat, which tore his trousers legs with his teeth. The rat then attacked Keat and bit him on the finger before it was killed.

WOMAN PRESIDENT OF A PAYING RAILROAD.

St. Louis, June 29.—One of the richest and most capable women in Missouri is going to make this city her home. She has bought a residence at No. 5135 Washington boulevard, into which she will move as soon as possession may be had.

Mrs. Holladay is the only woman in Missouri who is the president of a railroad. She is at the head of the Williamsville & Greenville road, succeeding to the presidency after the death of her husband, who had held that position. He owned a majority of the stock. The stock descended to Mrs. Holladay and she made up her mind to take her husband's place.

She went after the office and got it. She has measured up to the requirements of the position and the railroad has prospered under her direction.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Holladay also became the president of the Holladay-Klotz Land & Lumber company, but less than two years ago she sold her interests in that company for $1,000,000 in cash.

WESLEY RELICS GO TO LONDON AUCTION ROOM.

London, June 29.—Personal relics of John Wesley and his family are soon to be placed on sale in Sotheby's auction room. Among them is a small shagreen card case, with about a hundred cards with many precious words written in the great preacher's hand. It was his wont to set down on a plain card words of hope and good cheer, and, when he called on one of the faithful, to leave such a card by way of friendly exhortation. Then there is his modest writing-desk of mahogany, with baize-colored flap, and there is also his brother Charles's comparatively pretentious bureau—bookcase and escritoire—with secret drawers. Most interesting of all is the mourning-ring worn by John Wesley in memory of his father, the vicar of Epworth. This contains a coffin-shaped crystal, under which is the tiny form of a skelton, with a diamond at the head and another at the feet.

You May Say Warner's Rust-Proof Models

Are so well known that it is a waste of good material to sound their praise.' Not so. You doubtless wear a chic model of this make, but we are talking to the 'don't know's—there are still some of them. A few are culled from the ranks of the "growing-up's." All must be corseted, and our aim, as first-class merchants, is to start them right. Unique in their perfection of fit and finish, they unite all that is best in the French shapes with the proper proportions for the American woman's form. From the chic little tape girdle for the dainty young girl, to the strong, firm model of statuesque lines for the fashionable matron, inclined to generous proportions, the Rust-Proof line shows the best shape for every type of form. Note the "Security" Rubber Button Hose Supporters. Every pair guaranteed.
$1.00 to $3.50 per pair.

Why Many Women Suffer From Constipation

The Natural Remedy.

The delicate and intricate character of the female organs make them most susceptible to irregularity, and for the same reason it is most important that each one should be kept in condition to perform its functions in a normal manner. At all of the special periods when womankind is performing the functions peculiar to her sex there is a decided tendency to sluggishness of the bowels. Nature then requires a gentle assistant. Not powerful and expensive drugs, that must be taken at frequent intervals and are so drastic as to damage the tender lining of the stomach and bowels and do more harm than good, but a pure and harmless laxative such as is the famous Natural Mineral Water—HUNYADI JANOS—one dose of which will move the bowels gently but copiously in a natural manner. The dose is ½ a tumblerful drunk on arising in the morning (slightly warmed for best results). One bottle contains many doses and costs but a trifle at all Druggists.

CONTRACTS FOR STATE DITCHES

Awarded by Drainage Board—One for St. Louis County.

St. Paul, July 29.—The members of the state drainage board at their meeting yesterday found themselves overwhelmed with requests for state aid in cleaning out and repairing the county ditches in the Red river valley. These ditches are county ditches and under the law under which they were built the county must care for them and keep them in repair. The heavy rains this spring have played havoc with the ditches, washing them full of dirt in some places and at other places flowing over the land and doing damage to the crops. The people are looking in every possible direction for relief. The state board is powerless to extend any aid.

Several contracts for ditches were let at the meeting. John Kohler of Frazee was given the contract for the Itasca state ditch at 15.9 cents per cubic yard, which will make the ditch cost $4,474. He also got the contract for the Floodwood ditch in St. Louis county at 13.9 cents per yard which will make the cost of construction of that ditch, $7,688 for a distance of fifteen miles. There is hardly this amount of money, but G. G. Hartley of Duluth appeared before the board and promised if they would complete the ditch, including two arms of one mile each, he would guarantee $2,600 toward the work and send a certified check if necessary. The board appropriated $5,000 for this ditch.

D. H. Falconer of Aitkin was the only bidder for the Sun Lake and Hebron ditches, but his bid of 12 cents for the former and 14 cents for the latter was the same as the engineer's estimate and was accepted. The cost of the Gun Lake ditch will be about $960, and of the Hebron ditch $4,400. Engineer Ralph submitted an unfavorable report on the Bow String ditch in Itasca because there is not enough fall to carry off the water.

FATHER'S MISSION FAILS.

Runs to Hospital With Sick Baby, But It is Dead.

The 7-months-old child of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Olson, 913 London road, died yesterday afternoon from convulsions, while the frantic father was running with the stricken child to St. Luke's hospital, near by.

Bearing the child in his arms, he rushed madly into the hospital and summoned help at once. But despite the swiftness with which he ran and the appeal in his pleas to the hospital attendants to save his child, it was too late. The tot was dead.

When the baby had convulsions the parents became alarmed, and as the hospital was near at hand, Dr. Olson determined to take the child thither. He was overcome with grief when he learned that his mission had failed. No arrangements for the funeral have been made as yet.

WOMAN CHARGES JOCKEY WITH GRAND LARCENY.

New York, June 29.—Robert Gilmore, formerly a jockey, was arrested at Sheepshead Bay race track yesterday on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Laura Bunert, charging grand larceny. Mrs. Bunert, who is a widow, and who formerly lived in Ohio, alleged that Gilmore took $5,000 from her the day of the suburban handicap. He went to the betting ring to place the money on the big race, she says, and never returned.

Gilmore said: "The woman gave me the money to play on the races and I lost it. I did play the money strictly fair."

Opening Shoshone Indian Reservation.

THE RAPID INCREASE

In the Use of Automobiles Shown by Official Statistics.

About $4,000,000 Worth Imported and Over $26,000,000 Manufactured.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—More than $4,000,000 worth of automobiles have been brought into the country during the fiscal year which ends with the present week, and more than $3,000,000 worth exported during the same time. Figures of our foreign commerce in automobiles, as announced by the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, show the value of automobiles imported in the eleven months ending with May to have been $3,502,244, and of parts thereof, $387,389, while exports thereof during the same months amounted to $2,957,748. It is apparent, therefore, that the figures for the full fiscal year which ends Saturday of this week will show more than $4,000,000 worth of automobiles and parts thereof imported and more than $3,000,000 worth exported.

Meantime the manufacture of automobiles in the United States has amounted to presumably more than $26,000,000, since the bureau of the census has recently issued a preliminary statement which shows the value of automobiles manufactured in the United States in 1905 at $26,045,964. This figure includes amounts received for custom work and repairing and value of products other than automobiles; but as it does not include automobiles, valued at $879,205, manufactured in establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of other products, it may probably be safely set down that the value of automobiles produced in the United States approximates $26,000,000, and the imports $4,000,000, and that out of this total of $30,000,000 there was exported about $3,000,000 worth.

The rapid increase in the use of automobiles is shown in a marked degree both by the figures of the bureau of statistics and those of the bureau of the census. The value of automobiles manufactured in 1900 is given by the census figures at only $4,748,011 and in 1905, as above indicated, at $26,045,964. The bureau of statistics figures will show approximately $4,000,000 worth of automobiles imported in the fiscal year 1906, against less than $2,500,000 in 1905, about $1,500,000 in 1904, and about $1,000,000 in 1903.

Of the $3,000,000 worth of automobiles exported in the fiscal year just ending, about one-half goes to Europe and most of the remainder to Canada, Mexico, the West Indies, and Australia. The details of distribution havo only been worked out for ten months of the present year, but they show the value exported to the United Kingdom at $616,177; to Canada, $455,850; to Mexico, $293,002; to Italy, $227,388; to West Indies and Bermuda, $224,976; to France, $170,691; to Australia and New Zealand, $148,124; to South America, $61,780; to Germany, $57,259; to British East Indies, $31,946, and to Africa, $26,925. Of the imports, fully two-thirds came from France and practically all of the remainder from the United Kingdom, Germany and Italy, in about equal proportions.

The industrial effect in the United States of the increased use of automobiles (while it can not be fully measured because of the large number of people employed in their care, repair, etc.) is indicated in some degree by the figures of the census, which show that the number of wage-earners in the automobile manufacturing establishments of the country increased from 2,242 in 1900 to 10,239 in 1905; that the wages paid increased from $1,350,658 to $6,178,950; the salaries of officials, clerks, etc., from $294,770 to $1,069,425; and that the materials used, which of course largely represent labor, increased from $1,804,287 to $11,658,138.

The importance of the automatically propelled vehicle in its relation to the commercial and industrial development of the undeveloped sections of the world is suggested by a study of the figures of exports of automobiles to the various countries and continents. Lack of transporting power whether in the form of horses, canals, or railways has been one of the greatest obstacles in attempts to develop the mountain, desert, and tropical regions of the world, and the fact that the automobile, whether built primarily for passenger transportation or transportation of freight, is being rapidly adopted in those regions in which animal power is scarce suggests great possibilities in production and commerce through the use of vehicles of this character.

Reports from United States consuls and others have shown the practical application of automatically propelled vehicles in many of the comparatively undeveloped countries, especially in the Tropics, including Mexico, the West India islands, South America, Africa, India, the Malay peninsula, Java, China, Japan and the Philippine islands, all of them sections in which animal power for transportation is extremely scarce and development delayed by reason of that scarcity. The proportionately large exportation of automobiles to sections of this character is a suggestion of the practical uses apparently being made in those countries of this class of vehicles. About 20 per cent of the automobiles exported from the United States in the year just closing went to Mexico and the West Indies, while only about 7 per cent of the other exports went to the countries.

The export trade in automobiles has advanced rapidly in recent years and suggests a probably rapid growth in the near future. The total value of automobiles exported from the United States in the ten months ending with April, 1906, was $2,472,206, against $1,876,063 in the corresponding months of 1905 and $1,542,535 in the corresponding months of 1904, and thus indicates that the automobile may take the place in our export trade of bicycles, of which the exportation has fallen from $7,065,223 in 1897 to $1,378,428 in 1905. The exports of automobiles from France were, in round terms, $10,000,000 value in 1903 and $20,000,000 in 1905.

INQUISITOR BREAKS SHEEPSHEAD RECORD.

New York, June 29.—In a terrific drive Inquisitor, a 20 to 1 shot, won the Sheepshead Bay handicap, one mile, yesterday, and in doing so broke the track record for the distance by stepping it in 1.37 3-5, which is one-fifth of a second faster than the best previous time over this course, and within 1-5 of a second of the world's record. The finish was very close, the first four horses, Inquisitor, Von Tromp, Halifax and Dishabille reaching the wire heads apart in the order named. Halifax, the favorite, set a terrific pace for seven and a half furlongs, while Miller brought Inquisitor up on the outside, and won.

Peter Pan, second choice, won the Surf stakes. By the victory of Capt. Emerich in the fifth, the ring received the hardest blow it has experienced in some time. The colt opened at 10 to 1 and closed at 5 to 1, but while the horses were at the post he was again pounded to 2½ to 1, and in many books he was at even a shorter price.

YVETTE GUILBERT IS GOING TO BE AN ACTRESS.

London, June 29.—"This is the last season I shall devote exclusively to songs," Yvette Guilbert tells an interviewer. "Next October I shall enter upon my new career as a dramatic artist, appearing in Brussels in 'L'Eau Trouble,' a play written for me by Edmond Guiraud and Jean de Hinx of Paris.

"I want to supply the stage with a character, a type which it does not possess—the demi-vielle. The type is representative of the woman of forty, with her ardent joy of living, because she knows how to live, knowing life. I shall not imitate those actresses who refuse parts which make them the mothers of girls of twenty under pretense that it ages them. I shall truly devote my face, my figure, my brains and my heart to an art which I consider will not be perfect in the eyes of the public unless it is sincere and genuine.

"I shall make my debut in the part of a woman, a true woman. I am not forty years of age, and yet my purt will give to me five years over forty and I shall have a son of twenty-six.

"Nor do I intend to limit myself to any 'specialty,' for I am desirous of doing in dramatic art what I have done in song. I shall play both tragic and comic parts; all kinds of characters tempt me; in brief, I am going to attempt fine, true and sincere art, I give myself three years to become what I dream of being."

COLONY OF WEALTHY HERMITS LIVE IN CAVES.

Geneva, June 29.—The strange colonies of hermits who have taken up their abode in the neighborhood of Locarno, Ronco and Orselina are increasing in numbers. One group, which occupies the wooded plateau known as Mount Verita, is 125 strong, and counts in its members, six German professors, three military officers, one of whom is married to a countess who also belongs to the sect, two doctors and a priest.

The majority are well-to-do, and some are wealthy. As these pay well for any thing they buy and do not trouble about making converts, the inhabitants are on friendly terms with them.

They sleep in caves, are vegetarians, and do not wear ordinary clothing. A linen hood and a shroud of the same material are the only garments they wear. Their feet, legs, arms and neck are uncovered, and the hair is never cut, though the men trim their beards in a patriarchal way. The women allow their tresses to float in the air.

The motto of all is "Back to nature."

"The height of wisdom and philosophy," they say, "is to understand nature; that alone brings peace and happiness."

They rise at dawn and go to sleep with the setting of the sun; they eat only fruit and vegetables and drink only water. In the summer they have daily sun baths, and in the winter snow baths.

Some of them have extraordinary theories, which they carry out with great perseverance. One beautiful woman of thirty, who was formerly a well-known singer at the Berlin opera, refuses to touch money, which she says is the root of all evil. Her theory often lands her in difficulties, from which she occasionally extricates herself by singing to her debtors.

Another member only eats vegetables that ripen underground. A third confines himself strictly to raw eggs and potatoes.

A fourth spends $25 a week among the poor villagers and keeps the doctors busy by bringing to their notice cases for which he pays.

All the colony are in the best of health, and always appear perfectly happy, amiable, and polite.

WORKS AS MENIAL IN HOTEL HE WILL OWN.

Los Angeles, June 29.—T. H. Potter is the name of an alert young man who works in the vegetable room at the Van Nuys hotel. In a short time he will probably be the proprietor and manager of an equally fashionable hostelry, because he has a fortune of his own, and a rich uncle who desires to see him a premier hotel man.

T. H. Potter come from Detroit, and his uncle is M. M. Potter of the Van Nuys and the Potter of Santa Barbara.

"My nephew is working now in the vegetable room," said Mr. Potter yesterday, "and in a short time I'll promote him to the salad department and soon to the roasts and entries. Before he takes up the office work I intend that he shall know the business in every detail and will know how to buy potatoes and artichokes, truffles or pork with equal facility.

"In these days of acute competition it is only the man who knows his business just a bit better than any other fellow who gets to the top, and I want my nephew to climb to the top and stay there.

"A man can go through a university and think he knows enough to engage in the big fight of life, but while my nephew has done that and proved himself a good student, he did not learn the qualities and preliminaries of vegetables and sauces and salads, and he will put in two years learning that part of the hotel business before he earns his diploma from the college of practical work."

LORD KITCHENER MADE BY HAGGARD'S BROTHER.

Montreal, June 29.—An interesting story of Lord Kitchener, the ruthless exterminator of the mahdi's forces in Egypt, was told here today by Col. Haggard of the British army, who is a brother of H. Rider Haggard, and himself a well-known author.

Col. Haggard remarked that although he had really started Lord Kitchener on his career there had been a coldness between himself and the famous general for many years past, and this was how it came about:

A quarter of a century ago Col. Haggard had a command with the British troops operating in the Soudan against the mahdi in the expeditions subsequent to the murder of Gen. Gordon. Kitchener, then a lieutenant, was also with the army, and was then chiefly famous for his tremendous appetite.

It became necessary to send an envoy who understood Arabic well to conduct some exceedingly delicate negotiations with a Soudan chieftain, and Sir Evelyn Wood was compelled to ask Co. Haggard to go, as he was about the only man with the army who understood Arabic. But Col. Haggard was badly wanted with the fighting forces, and also wanted to see the fun himself. He recollected that Lieut. Kitchener spoke Arabic pretty well and urged Sir Evelyn Wood to give him a trial, pleading his cause so well that the British general finally agreed to give the youngster a chance. Kitchener was sent, and carried out his mission with such success that there is no doubt this was the real foundation of his subsequent career.

"But," said Col. Haggard, "despite my share in this incident Kitchener and I have never been friends since, and he has not even thanked me for it. You see, I am unfortunately addicted to writing books, and just at this juncture one of my volumes came out which contained a number of military anecdotes. One of these recounted an eating contest between myself and Kitchener. The latter was always noted for his good appetite, and on this occasion he simply put me out of business, being just nicely started by the time I was filled to the limit. But he never forgave me for publishing the story. The incident put an end to any friendship we ever had, and we have practically been strangers ever since."

WALKS 18 MILES TO SAVE INNOCENT MAN.

Toledo, June 29.—One year in the Ohio penitentiary at hard labor was the sentence handed out to John B. Hull, presumably of Kenton, but in fact from all over, who pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing a mail pouch.

Hull is a structural iron worker and his home is in New York state, but he won't tell where, and his people, who are widely known and respected in the neighborhood where they live, know nothing of the predicament the young man is in.

Last February Hull was out of employment and was "hoboing" for a job. A bag of mail was thrown off of a passing train. In his desperation he seized it and ripped it open. While the sack was full of mail and contained money orders and drafts to the amount of $80,000, Hull got but 82 cents in money out of it. To cover up his crime he destroyed the sack and its contents. If he hadn't done that Judge Taylor said he would have been still more lenient with the young man.

A month after the crime was committed Hull heard that another man was held at Marion charged with stealing the mail sack. He was too much of a man to see another suffer for a crime which he himself had committed. So in the face of one of the bitterest storms of the winter he walked a distance of eighteen miles to Marion and confessed his crime and gave himself up.

TRUNK ROAD IS FAVORED

Carlton County Good Roads Association Takes Action.

Will Have 25-Mile Highway to Pine County Line.

The Carlton County Good Roads association passed resolutions at the meeting held in Carlton yesterday favoring a first-class highway from Carlton and Cloquet to the Pine county line, a distance of about twenty-five miles along the line of the Northern Pacific road.

About 200 delegates were present at the meeting, and the consensus of opinion was that the county would have its interests best advanced by concentrating its funds and energy on the trunk road through the county rather than scattering the funds here and there for patchwork jobs on the other roads.

The Carlton county commissioners will be asked to aid in the work.

No definite decision has been reached in the matter of the best route to Duluth. Some of the members of the association prefer the Wrenshall route and some prefer the old Thomson road route.

The meeting was presided over by F. A. Watkins of Carlton. The address of welcome was made by Judge W. A. Skemp of Cloquet, in the absence of the mayor.

George W. Cooley, the state engineer, gave an address on the methods of road-making, and laid particular stress on the importance of concentrating funds and energy on one particular road at a time.

W. E. Culkin of Duluth spoke of the friendly feeling of the people of Duluth toward the good roads movement, and assured the Carlton county association the hearty co-operation of the St. Louis county association.

H. V. Eva, secretary of the Commercial Club of Duluth, recommended a change in the present law, so that more money could be spent in actual road-building and not so much on road supervision.

Other addresses were made by Charles Bedell of Barnum and Rev. Mr. Coolbaugh of Cloquet.

Owing to the conditions of the roads, the Duluth delegation that were to go to Carlton by automobiles did not attempt to make their way clear through. The mud made impracticable a test of the road dray which the members of the association inspected.

RAINS DELAY CONTRACTORS

Building Improvement Given Serious Setback by Wet Weather.

The heavy rains of the past few days have caused serious delay to a large amount of the improvement work that is under way. Not alone is this found in street work, but building operations all over the city have been held up for nearly a week and the contractors are beginning to look uneasy. Some of them have figured out their time limit on a narrow margin, and a week or ten days' delay just at this time will be a serious handicap.

Basement or foundation work has been flooded to such an extent that it will take some time for the conditions to become favorable for carrying on the work again at any rate of speed. Where the buildings are not yet inclosed the men have had to quit work time and again, and some of the contractors have pulled their crews off entirely until the weather conditions are more propitious.

RESIGNS FROM THE BOARD

J. H. Crowley Severs His Connections With the Water Department.

At the meeting of the water and light board yesterday afternoon, J. H. Crowley, vice-president of the board, tendered his resignation as a commissioner. His resignation came through Mayor Cullum and was accepted. George Spencer was elected vice-president. The vacancy on the board will be filled by Mayor Cullum's appointment.

The board adopted resolutions ordering water and gas extensions on the following streets and avenues, subject to the approval of the city council:

Sixth avenue east from Tenth to Eleventh avenues west; First from Twenty-eighth to Twenty-ninth avenue; Twenty-fourth avenue from Fourth to Third street, and west on Third to Twenty-third avenue; Dakota avenue from First to Second street; Fifteenth avenue west north of Superior street, 325 feet; Sixty-first avenue from Raleigh to Polk street; eastward from West Third to Pacific; South street from Fifteenth avenue to Sixteenth avenue; north on Sixteenth avenue half a block; East Third street from Nineteenth to Twentieth avenue; East Fourth street from Sixteenth to Seventeenth avenue; Fifth street from Fifteenth to Fourteenth avenue; Third stret east from Eighteenth to Nineteenth avenue; Devonshire from Third street west to Pacific; Fifty-third avenue west from Main to Polk; Michigan street west from Twenty-second to Twenty-eighth avenue.

The board also ordered gas main extensions on Ramsey street from the alley west of Fifty-fourth avenue west to Fifty-seventh avenue west.

BENSON WITHDRAWS

St. Cloud, Minn., June 29.—C. S. Benson, of St. Cloud, has withdrawn from the congressional race in the Sixth district, making the second St. Cloud man to shy at congressional honors this year. This leaves C. B. Buckman and C. A. Lindbergh, both of Little Falls, to fight it out. In a letter of explanation Mr. Benson says that he was prevented by illness from starting on a canvass after his announcement, and meantime another entered the field. He thinks it best for the party that the successful candidate should receive a clear majority, and as this may not happen in a three-cornered fight, he pulls out. It has been clear since Lindbergh's entry that the race would be between him and Buckman.

Stylish Skirts at Popular Prices!

Well Hung, Attractively Made, Light in Weight.

Fancy being uncomfortably or inappropriately dressed for the "Fourth," when we can fit you with a beautifully modeled Skirt at a price that surely seems incommensurate with the quality. We have been adding very largely to the variety of Skirts in our stocks the past week and have gathered some styles and values of unusual merit.

New Skirts.

No summer wardrobe is completely outfitted without one or more White Linen Skirts.

Tomorrow's showing will present a fine variety in circular and pleated styles—with strap, band and embroidery trimming. Also White Serge and Sicilian Skirts, in styles that are in highest favor. To the woman who wishes a skirt of fine Panama cloth, Voile or French serge in black, gray or blue, we offer the choice of a stunning assortment of very modish designs.

Linen Suits.

A score of styles in Eton and Box Coat effects—some are trimmed with titched straps—some finished with pearl buttons on the front, back and sleeves — with stitched girdles. Some have bands of embroidery insertion on jacket and skirt; others are strictly tailored suits. Just what you want for the "Fourth."

New Waists

Have been received the past week and the waist store is now fairly bubbling over with the newest styles. No skimp, no slight anywhere — and yet they cost no more than the scant waists that are made for "bargain sales."

Half Price Have you compared the Half Price Sales of TAILORED SUITS around town with ours? Have you compared their price tickets with the original prices of our Suits? That tells the tale. If you have not had the opportunity to make comparison yourself, ask those who have bought suits here this week. Half Price.

JUDGE REBUKES JURY TAMPERING

Judge McClenahan Comments on Conditions in Itasca County.

Grand Rapids, Minn., June 29.—Judge McClenahan heard testimony in the contempt proceedings instituted against John McVeigh of Deer River, charged with having approached a juror in the Inscho arson case.

Edwin L. Lewis of township 60, range 24, was the juror in question, and he testified that on Friday McVeigh met him outside the court room and beckoned him into a corner of the main hall on the lower floor; that there McVeigh had undertaken to talk to him, saying that Jerome Kelleher, proprietor of the hotel which had been set on fire, was a "bad man" and "had robbed lots of lumberjacks." At this point the juror walked away. Afterwards Lewis reported the conversation to Judge McClenahan.

McVeigh was himself called and sworn as a juror in the early stages of the Inscho trial, but with consent of the court was afterwards excused on a peremptory challenge interposed by the state. McVeigh testified in his own behalf, but was compelled to admit that for some months past he had been on unfriendly terms with Kelleher.

Judge McClenahan held the charge of contempt made out and imposed the maximum sentence, a fine of $50.

The occasion was improved by Judge McClenahan to comment upon the general conditions which seem to obtain in Itasca county. He expressed surprise that any citizen should reason that it was proper to talk to a juryman about a pending case where no warning against such conduct had proceeded from the court. It was further stated by the judge that by reason of the conditions prevailing, he would consider it necessary to guard all jurors who might be drawn in subsequent criminal cases this term. Citizens were reminded that their own interests were at stake, and that unless public opinion should rise to the emergency and insist upon a stricter regard of the law, the administration of justice would not only prove a farce, but the county itself would in the end suffer greatly.

HE WALTZED 13 HOURS, TIRING SIX PARTNERS.

Paris, June 29.—Thirteen hours is now the record for waltzing in France and belongs to an Italian. Ten competitors, including several energetic children, started dancing at 1 a. m. At 5 the last child had dropped down from exhaustion and was put, not too soon, to bed. At noon of two competitors remaining one gave up, and then there was one. He waltzed on for two hours longer, when his legs sank beneath him, then there was none. He had danced six women nearly to death.

SHE PAID HER BILLS IN POSTAGE STAMPS.

Columbus, Ohio, June 29.—Ephraim Reeves, the aged postmaster at Woodward, Athens county, was fined $500 and costs by Judge Thompson, of the United States court, for having made false reports to the department relative to the cancellation of postage stamps. It is believed that in the past ten years his peculations aggregate $1,100.

It developed in the argument made by District Attorney Sherman McPherson that the wife was more to blame than the man, for it was a habit for her to pay bills of 10 and 25 cents in postage stamps and charge them in cancellation.

Reeves had already turned over the proceeds of the sale of his farm, amounting to $800.

DOWIE ADULTERATOR.

Has Been Found Selling a Lard Substitute Improperly Labeled.

St. Paul, June 29.—John Alexander Dowie, prophet of Zion City, is the latest to be added to the list of food adulterators by the state dairy and food department. He has been found selling a lard substitute improperly labeled. According to the law of the state he is liable to a fine of from $15 to $100. When Inspector John McCabe went to Winona the other day he secured a can of "shorting." He sent the can to the state chemist and upon analysis, it was discovered that the product contained a mixture of tallow and cottonseed oil. The case will be prosecuted according to the state law.

LOCK THE DOOR, SAYS BURGLAR TO WOMAN.

Los Angeles, June 29.—"I am the night watchman. Why don't you lock your doors?" coolly remarked a burglar when accosted by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kirkpatrick. Then he walked from the room of the woman he had awakened, taking with him the valuables he had previously gathered.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, with her son Lafayette, is a guest at No. 555 South Grand avenue.

Worn out with nursing the son, who was ill, Mrs. Kirkpatrick slept very soundly. At 2 a. m. she was awakened by a slight noise.

Standing beside her bed, where she could have touched him with her hand, stood a man. The room was well-lighted by the rays of a street light.

"Who are you?" demanded Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

The burglar stood and looked at her.

"I am the night watchman," he answered. "You should be more careful, madam, and lock your door. Good night."

Then he turned, walked out of the room and left the house.

HORSES CREMATED.

Long Prairie, Minn., June 29.—Fire yesterday morning about 3 o'clock destroyed a barn and three horses on the Hartung form, about four miles west of this place. The horses belonged to William Tesch, who had the farm rented. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Divorce Denied to Woman Who Said Husband Was Drinker.

St. Louis, June 29.—The question whether a man is a vagrant is not to be determined by his consumption of beer and whisky, according to a decision of Circuit Judge Withrow. He stated this in denying a divorce to Viola Buse Krus from Charles Krus, on the ground that the petition was defective, in that it did not specify statutory causes for divorce.

When the case was called, Judge Withrow called the attention of Attorney McCormick to defects in the petition, and continued the case to give the attorney a chance to correct it. When the corrected petition was presented it was still defective. Judge Withrow said he had doubts whether a divorce granted on such a petition would stand, and advised the attorney against proceeding under it; but he elected to go ahead and was permitted to do so.

Three grounds were alleged in the petition. In denying the divorce Judge Withrow pointed out the inadequacy of each. He said:

"The first ground stated is 'that he offered her such indignities by coming home intoxicated when friends or relatives were visiting her home, and making such a scene of himself when others were present as to render her condition intolerable.'

"But one indignity is alleged; the statute is in the plural. The proof of one act amounting to an indignity is not sufficient.

"The second ground relied on is that the defendant was addicted to the use of strong intoxicating drinks, so as to render him an habitual drunkard. This the petition fails to allege, 'that he has been addicted to habitual drunkenness for the space of one year next before the filing of the petition,' it does not state a cause of action.

"The third ground mentioned in the petition is 'that the defendant has been guilty of such conduct as to constitute him a vagrant within the meaning of the law respecting vagrants; that he frequented saloons where cheap whisky was sold, and where beer was sold by the can, and that he loitered around and drank beer from cans in alleys around Tenth and Market streets and other places in the city of St. Louis, and that he had no visible means of support all this time, and he has not reformed prior to the filing of the petition.'

"The statutes of Missouri provide that 'every able-bodied married man who shall neglect or refuse to provide for the support of his family shall be deemed a vagrant.'

"It is not alleged, nor was there any evidence tending to show that he is an able-bodied man and capable of supporting his family, if he was so inclined. The mere fact that the evidence shows that he consumed more than his share of beer and whisky does not make him a vagrant.

"As the petition fails to state a cause of action, a divorce will be refused and the bill dismissed."

RUNAWAY GIRL HOME WITH $1,000 VIOLIN.

Pittsburg, June 29.—Portia Keefer, the pretty sixteen-year-old daughter of General Superintendent W. W. Keefer, of the Pittsburg Coal Company, is at home again, having won her fight against the home circle and the Pittsburg high school.

About two weeks ago Miss Keefer fled from her home after a tilt with her father, who insisted that she return to the Pittsburg high school, where she had quarrelled with her teacher. The girl took her $1,000 violin, which had been a present from her father.

Later she sent word that she was working for her living and was through with him and his money. Mr. Keefer, who is a millionaire, located his daughter and hired detectives to see that no harm came to her.

The girl has now returned home, and it is said she was working in a restaurant somewhere in West Virginia. Her father has relented, and the girl will not be forced to return to the city high school.

BRIDEGROOM DID NOT GET A LICENSE

Columbus, June 29.—Joseph Walter Jeffrey, whose marriage to Miss Mary McMillan Loren was solemnized by the Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, clean forgot to take out a marriage license. The memory of the best man, Malcolm Douglas Jeffrey, failed him also. The clergyman, the ushers—everybody in the wedding party—forgot all about the license until long after the bride and bridegroom were away for their honeymoon in South Carolina.

Probate Judge Black fell to wondering why the records of his office did not show that the usual formality had been complied with before this notable wedding. He did a little telephoning, with the result that Robert H. Jeffrey, brother of the bridegroom and former Mayor of Columbus, went post haste to the court house and procured the license at noon yesterday, about thirty-six hours after the ceremony had been performed.

The entry shows that Mr. Joseph Walter Jeffrey is twenty-six years of age and that his wife is twenty-five.

BERRIES ON THE MARKET

Pineapples Are Plentiful —Price of Potatoes Takes a Drop.

The strawberry season is now practically over.

Some stray shipments are still coming in from isolated points in Wisconsin, but the regular shipments have ceased. The berries will probably be on the market for a week or ten days to come, but they are becoming scarce, and the price will become gradually higher from now until the time they are out of the market.

Their place is being taken by raspberries. Red raspberries are now being received daily. The shipments are coming from Illinois, and next week they will be quite plentiful.

Blueberries are also on the market now, the first shipments having come in during the last week. They are rather scarce as yet, but they will become more plentiful next week.

The only other berries in the market at present are gooseberries, but the supply of these is variable and cannot be counted on.

Considering the season of the year, there is a very fair supply of California fruit on the market at the present time.

The season for California cherries is nearly over, but there will be a fair supply of them for a week or ten days yet.

It is still early for plums and peaches, but they are beginning to become quite plentiful.

The demand for all kinds of California fruits is very heavy just at the present time, in anticipation of the Fourth of July trade.

This is the height of the season for Florida pineapples. The pines were never more plentiful or of a better quality than they are now. The season will not last more than a week or ten days more, and the dealers are advising housekeepers who wish to buy them for preserving, to do so at once, as they will be practically out of the market in two weeks.

The potato market is much easier. The receipts of new potatoes have been quite liberal during the week, and the price has dropped from $1.25 a bushel to about 90 cents. Oklahoma and Indian Territory are at present the source of supply for the Duluth market, and the crop in that part of the country seems to have been a good one. The demand for old potatoes is steadily decreasing, and they will not be in the market much longer.

New celery from the district about Kalamazoo, Mich., is in the market. Up to the present time the celery has been mostly imported from California and the South, but the Michigan celery is now ready for shipment, and the supply is becoming quite plentiful.

The receipts of California canteloupes have been quite liberal during the week and the price is lower.

Receipts of fresh eggs and butter continue liberal, the prices are ruling low, eggs being quoted at 15½ to 16 cents a dozen. Quite a number of eggs are being placed in cold storage, and the market is being kept pretty well cleaned up.

Fish are still very scarce. The storms prevent the fishermen from getting out, and the receipts of fresh trout and Lake Superior white fish are very small. The supply is barely sufficient to supply the demand, and it has been difficult to secure fresh fish in Duluth during the last two or three weeks.

Business all along the street is reported good this week in spite of the very unfavorable weather. The approach of the Fourth of July has had a beneficial effect, and the grocers in both the Duluth and the range towns are laying in an extra supply of fresh fruits and green vegetables for the holiday trade.

If the weather would clear, the commission men would have about all the business they could handle.

WILL NOT READ DEATH NOTICES

Noted Cleric Acquires Unique Distinction by Cousin's Death.

London, June 29.—To be made the subject of premature obituary notices is by no means a unique experience nowadays. Several more or less famous men have been reported dead one day, only to be publicly resurrected the next; but to go through such an experience and then refuse to read any of the obituary notices certainly constitutes a unique claim to distinction. The Rev. S. Baring-Gould has earned it.

The death of his cousin and namesake in South Africa caused the report to be published all over the country that the voluminous author had passed away, and every daily newspaper of any consequence followed the announcement with a review of his life and work. Instead of availing himself of the opportunity afforded to see himself as others see him, Mr. Baring-Gould declined to read any of the numerous biographical notices that were sent to his family by press clipping agencies. "I have," he says, "enclosed the whole set, unread, in an envelope, sealed it up and put it aside with my will, to be read or burned when I am no more." He shows himself to be a very different type of man to the first Lord Brougham, who was so anxious to find out what the newspapers thought of him that he put in circulation a false rumor of his death, with results hardly flattering to his vanity.

A London newspaper offered the veteran cleric $50 for a critique of his obituary notices. The tempting offer he declined. So also did he the suggestion of a benevolent society that he should make a liberal contribution to its funds as a thank-offering for not being dead as reported.

Though the living he occupies is worth only $1,000 a year, he was surprised to discover how many curates there are eager to take advantage of his decease. His wife was inundated with letters from enterprising drapery firms anxious to supply her with widows' caps and mourning costumes. But the oddest of all communications he received was one from a tradesman who congratulated him on his resurrection, and sent him a new patent razor, which he wishes to introduce. "Does he want me to try it on my throat," says the novelist, "that I may elicit another series of obituary notices?"

Mr. Baring-Gould is 73 years old, and has been writing books for nearly half a century, at the rate of something like three a year. The obituary notice writers have almost unanimously praised several of his novels, and their sale will undoubtedly be greatly stimulated. In this way the genial old man will reap a substantial reward from the premature announcement of his decease.

BAN ON WOMEN IS ORDERED AT CAPITAL.

Chicago, June 29.—Postmaster Busse, whom the women for months have been calling horrid because he discriminated against women in employing clerks and stenographers, has divulged the fact that he was not acting through prejudice against the fair ones but on instructions from Washington.

The postmaster-general has given United States Civil Service Commissioner Newton written directions not to allow any more women to take civil service examinations for postoffice positions.

The reason advanced by the Washington authorities for drawing the sex line is that the postoffice department already has too many women on its rolls. What renders a woman superfluous when a man is desirable is not explained in the official order.

The order has already stirred the wrath of club and business women of this section, and it is expected that an appeal will be made to the president for a modification of the order with a demand that he take a definite stand on the embarassing issue.

Danderine

GREW THIS HAIR

And we can PROVE IT

Testimonial No. 570.

MRS. ANNIE E. SHEEHAN, Weir City, Kansas.

You must remember that failing hair and dandruff are signs of decay, or a diseased condition of the scalp, and you must not delay treatment. To do so simply means more loss of hair, and a greater impoverished scalp, and finally no hair. The wise thing to do is to correct it in the start. Danderine works wonders in all such cases. It will quickly regenerate the effeebled tissues, and make your hair grow more beautiful than it ever was. NOW at all druggists, three sizes.

DISCARDED WIFE SCORES HUSBAND

Mrs. Anna Temple-Bloxham Formerly of Denver, Tells Story.

Carbondale, Col., June 29.—An inoffensive little notice which appeared in the local papers here last week has caused a sensation in Carbondale social circles.

By announcing to the public that he would not be responsible for debts contracted by his wife, Alfred Bloxham, prominent in railroad circles, has unintentionally stirred up a hornet's nest, and now tongues in the upper circle are wagging about the separation of the couple, which heretofore was known only to a few.

The cause of Mr. and Mrs. Bloxham's domestic troubles are still a mystery; their relations apparently being most pleasant. They separated quietly May 22, and none was the wiser until Bloxham broke into the press. Here is the way Mrs. Bloxham comes back at him:

"To the general public, my friends in particular, and in justice to all parties concerned, I desire to make the following statement: In recent issues of the press Alfred Bloxham advertised that he would not be responsible for any debts contracted by me. I left Mr. Bloxham on May 22, 1906, the seventh anniversary of our marriage, and never intend to live with him again (for good reasons). I quietly left him, not desiring any notoriety, as I do not believe in divorce, but I told him he could have a divorce as soon as he could secure one, for I shall not appear against him. I truly hope he will soon give me the legal right to drop the name of Bloxham and take the name of Temple, a name given me by one who loved me for myself alone and not for my ability to earn and save dollars for him.

"During our seven years of married life I never contracted debts for Mr. Bloxham to pay, except the necessary supplies. My own expenses were paid out of my own money, and today I can truthfully state that I owe no person in the world a dollar. My present residence is at Avalanche station post office, address Carbondale, Colo. I wish to be known and recognized from this time on as Anna R. Temple.

"(Formerly) Mrs. Alfred Bloxham."

Mrs. Bloxham formerly resided in Denver, where she is well known as Mrs. Anna Temple. He is at the head of the section work for the Crystal River railroad and an old-time resident here.

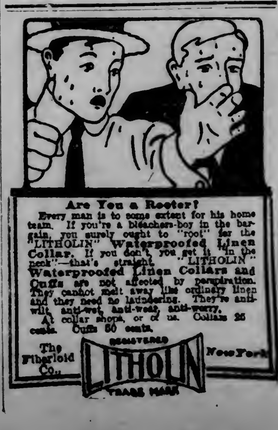

HELD ON CHARGE OF WEDDING TWO WOMEN.

Philadelphia, June 29.—With two women claiming him as their husband, James E. Hobson, formerly employed at Ryan's theatre ticket agency in the Bellevue-Stratford, is in Moyamensing Prison in default of $1,000 bail, charged with bigamy.

Wife No. 1, Mrs. Cecelia Hobson, of No. 810 North Fifteenth street, says she has discovered a second wife living at No. 3218 North Park avenue.

Mrs. Holmes No. 1 was married to the prisoner five years ago. At that time he was employed at the Park Theatre. They have one child, a girl. Shortly after the child was born, the woman alleges, Hobson deserted her.

At the Park avenue address there is a pretty young woman of, perhaps, twenty, who says she was married to Hobson in New York last January.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTION.

METROPOLITAN — National Stock Company.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM — Next week, beginning Monday ,the Tom Marks company.

NATIONAL STOCK COMPANY.

The National Stock company's production of "'Ostler Joe" at the Metropolitan last evening was very novel, to say the least. The scene of the third act is laid on the stage of a London theater, and big, bluff Joe had a fight with the real door-tender in the back of the regular auditorium. Then he rushed down the main aisle and addressed the forgetful, dissolute wife that he still loved. Then the villain came down the aisle, too. Joe knocked him down, right there in the parquet, then both leaped to the stage and the hostler gave the wretch the choking he deserved. It was all very thrilling and the audience was unmistakably delighted. All of the parts were in good hands. This play will probably be repeated tomorrow afternoon.

"The Price of Silence" is the title of the exciting melodrama which will be given at the "Met" this evening. It is said to have a climax at the end of the third act which is about as exciting as the one which startled the "'Ostler Joe" audience last evening. Nat Goodwin's success, "Confusion," will be the bill for Saturday night.

TOM MARKS COMPANY.

Tom Marks company will open a week's engagement at the Lyceum Monday evening, appearing in "The Irish Boarder." Tom Marks has appeared in Duluth many times and always meets with a fine reception. The public knows just what to expect from him and he never disappoints them.

Getting in New Jewelry.

W. S. W. Blake, the watch expert who is now in business for himself in the White Swan Drug Store, 3 East Superior street, is going somewhat more extensively into the jewelry line and is receiving today a new and select stock of watches, jewelry and fine silverware. He still gives his personal special attention to high grade timepieces and is acknowledged to be without a peer in watch repairing in this part of the country.

RAILROADS

ARE AFTER BUSINESS

Southern Lines Trying to Divert Tide of Immigration.

Northwestern Meets Great Western's Cut in Grain Rates.

The Northwestern roads will be getting left on the immigration question if they do not get more actively into the lists in competition with the Southwestern lines. The latter are bending every energy to divert the tide of immigration from Minnesota and the Northwest in general to Southern channels, and that their efforts are meeting with some success has become apparent during the last few months.

The latest move in this direction has been taken by E. F. Yoakum, chairman of the Rock Island-Frisco system, who always has been a great believer in the development of the agricultural resources along his lines. He has now sent John Sebastin, his passenger traffic manager, to Europe to establish connections with the steamship companies which bring the best European agrarians to the country tributary to the lines he controls.

Under the direction of Mr. Yokum a section of the Rio Grande valley is being reclaimed. One of the larget irrigation plants in the Southwest is being installed, and when completed will have a capacity for furnishing water to more than 125,000 acres. The headquarters of the new irrigation project is Lonsboro, Tex., a new town.

It is the intention to turn this tract into a huge truck garden, and from it the Rock Island-Frisco lines expect to receive traffic in early vegetables for Northern and Eastern markets.

The number of immigrants passing through Duluth into the Northwest has been as large as usual this year. The main tide from Eastern points passes through Chicago and the Twin Cities, but a considerable portion comes via the South Shore road and Duluth, particularly those immigrants who land at Canadian ports and are destined to the Western part of the United States. A great many from the old country land at Halifax, Montreal, St. John and Quebec, and then come by rail to Duluth, instead of landing at New York and other United States ports, and going by way of Chicago.

CUTS THE GRAIN RATES.

Northwestern is Forced to Follow Lead of Great Western.

Having failed to bring Mr. Stickney, president of the Great Western, to time on the proposition of grain rates from the Missouri river, the Northwestern has decided to meet the Great Western's cut and a tariff to that effect has been issued.

From interior Iowa points the new tariff is 15¾ cents on wheat and 14¾ cents on corn, a reduction from 17 and 16 cents respectively. The Northwestern also has announced a reduction of the Nebraska grain rates from Omaha of 1¼ cents, making the new rate 10¾ cents.

This announcement is no surprise to the other Western lines, although as yet they have not given notice that they will meet them. The cut was made necessary from the fact that the grain could be shipped back to the Missouri river from interior Iowa points and be reshipped to Chicago under the Great Western's tariff for less than the local freight from the initial point to Chicago.

Illinois Central Changes.

The following new assignments of duties of the assistant general freight agents of the Illinois Central have been made:

W. R. Bascom, first assistant general freight agent at Chicago, will have supervision of grain and its products, live stock, lumber, except from Ohio and Mississippi river crossings, traffic interchange with lines north of the Ohio river, traffic between Northern territory west of the Mississippi and the South, Pacific coast, Mexico, and Arizona traffic, and all matters pertaining to classification.

G. W. Becker, assistant at Chicago, will look after traffic in the northern territory east of the Mississippi and the South, and lumber from the Ohio and Mississippi river crossings.

nections at J. R. Peachy of St. Louis will have supervision of traffic originating in or passing through St. Louis, and on the Springfield division, and traffic interchanged with northern connections at junctions.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Father Shoots Daughter, Her Husband Kills the Old Man.

Hazelton, Pa., June 29.—Raffaelo Marsicano went to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Withe, at West Hazelton, last night, and shot her in the head. The woman's husband seized Marsicano and, securing the later's revolver, instantly killed him. The daughter will recover. The shooting was due, the son-in-law claims, to the elopement of the daughter with him, three months ago. After the shooting, Withe gave himself up to the police.

LAWYER KILLS HIMSELF.

Fort Worth, Tex., June 29.—Judge Britain R. Webb, for the past eleven years reporter for the courts of civil pleas at Dallas, Fort Worth, Galveston and San Antonio, a lawyer of note, and the author of several law books, shot and killed himself here today in a remote corner of the city park. The cause is given as continued ill health.

In Perfect Form

You know how it is in a race—the victory isn't always to the strong; "form" counts as much as muscle—sometimes more. The coach goes along to watch the form and develop it. A good deal so in business life—brains and "good address" are important—both count. We offer you all the advantage clothes can give—they're that kind of clothes—Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes. If you come to us, we'll put the right kind of clothes on you.

FIREMEN IN AN AWFUL PLIGHT

East St. Louis, June 29.—Four firemen, hoisted in an electric crane twenty feet above five enormous furnaces at the American Foundry company's plant today to fight a fire in the roof, were left stranded half an hour, because the men operating the crane became frightened and left their post. The heat from the furnaces and burning roof became unbearable, and for half an hour the firemen cried to be let down. At last, Fireman Mike Sullivan, in desperation, jumped to the ground between the seething flames, threw a rope to his comrades, and they descended, badly blistered from the terrible heat endured. The fire was confined to the burning of a false roof.

Thousands annually bear witness to the efficiency of Early Risers. These pleasant, reliable little pills have long borne a reputation second to none as a laxative and cathartic. Sold by all druggists.

DESPERATE CONVICTS ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

Richmond, Ky., June 29.—Through the assistance of his wife, J. E. Ball of Middlesboro, Ky., one of the worst desperadoes of Eastern Kentucky, escaped from jail here last night, and James Sayler and Steve Turner, charged with murder, and James Turner, an alleged cattle thief, also escaped.

Mrs. Ball came to Richmond yesterday afternoon to see her husband, who was to have been taken to Frankfort in a few days to serve life imprisonment. When Turnkey J. E. Leads entered the cage to let out Mrs. Ball, she signalled to one of the prisoners to grab him, and threw herself between the turnkey and her husband. A revolver was shoved in the turnkey's face and he was forced into the cell and the door closed. Mrs. Leads grabbed Ball, and Mrs. Ball threw her arms around Mrs. Leads, holding her until the men had made their escape. Mrs Ball was arrested. A posse is pursuing the fugitives.

LEGALLY DEAD, HE FINDS ESTATE GONE.

Paris, June 29.—Although legally declared "dead," being thought to have perished in the Mont Pelee disaster, Jean-Marie de Floridec, formerly a planter in Martinique, has returned to France and relates a thrilling story of his adventures.

After the eruption of Mont Pelee he took ship to Melbourne, Australia, and thence to Japan. When the Russo-Japanese war broke out he took up running the blockade of Port Arthur with arms and provisions. He was successful in this, but was shipwrecked on the Korean coast.

For his services the Russian government rewarded him handsomely at the end of the war, and he returned to France to live at ease. M. de Floridec found, however, that his brother and sister had obtained a legal declaration of his death, and were living comfortably near Paris on his Martinique money.

Jean-Marie de Floridec is now to be legally raised from the "dead."

MANIPULATED CONVENTIONS.

It surely ought not to be difficult to secure the extension of the primary election system to state officers at the next session of the legislature in view of the discreditable results of the last two Republican state conventions.

Two years ago the convention was an unusually rank exhibition of the evils of the convention system of nomination. The party split wide open between two candidates, and from the county conventions up to the state convention unfair methods were used, apparently by both sides. The result was the defeat of the party's candidates at the polls last November, and a split that is not yet healed by any means.

The recent Duluth convention was also a convincing argument against the convention system and in favor of the primary election system. The object of nominations, however accomplished, is theoretically to meet the wishes of the members of the party. Nobody attempts to claim that that was done in the recent convention. Everybody now admits that the rank and file of the party wanted the nomination of Jacobson. Not only did he appear in the convention with the greatest number of delegates, but there were enough pledged to other candidates whose second choice was Jacobson to have nominated him easily if the band wagon movement had not been started against him.

The nomination of Mr. Cole came because he was the handiest. The corporations were in the convention to beat Jacobson, and for no other purpose. They did it, and the will of the people was defeated, as it usually is in contested fights in conventions.

This condition is not wholly a partisan matter. It is a disgrace to the state. It puts Minnesota in a bad light abroad, when other states are successfully fighting the oppressive corporations, to have it go forth that in Minnesota they can still dictate the nominations of a great party.

The only way to avoid such disagreeable and discouraging results is to extend the primary election system directly to state officers. The corporations can easily manipulate a convention, as they showed in Duluth only a few days ago. But they can never manipulate the people, when the choice of candidates is left directly to them.

The politicians are against this extension for obvious reasons. A part of the profit of being a politician is in being able to do such errands for the corporations. With the primary election system in full use, their occupation is gone.

To bring about the extension, it is necessary that the people exercise careful consideration in selecting the next legislature, and to vote for no candidates who are not clearly right on this and other important issues.

LEARN TO SWIM.

Very good advice to parents is that they should teach their children how to swim. Very good advice to everybody is to learn to swim. It is not only a pleasant, wholesome exercise, but in view of the fact that sooner or later most people trust themselves upon the water, it is a reasonable precaution against drowning.

These reflections are induced by the large grist of drowning stories that the summer news always includes. It is hardly possible to pick up a newspaper without finding at least one such report, and oftener there are more. And in a large proportion of these stories it is made clear that there would have been no tragedies had the victims been able to swim.

Swimming, most of the time, is merely an accomplishment that is full of possibilities of pleasure. But the time is likely to come in the life of any person when it will prove the connecting link between life and death; when you will live if you can swim and die if you can't.

Perhaps no more conspicious example of this has ever been furnished than the terrible Slocum disaster of a few years ago. The awful loss of life there would have been very largely prevented if the passengers had been able to swim. Most of them were drowned close to the shore, and even if they had been able to swim only a few yards, many of them would have been saved.

Those who do not swim are apt to take precautions against finding themselves in the water without anything to keep them up, but there is no telling when they will find themselves out on the water with the fool that rocks the boat, and if they get back to shore without needing to swim they are fortunate indeed.

Bathers who cannot swim are often carried out beyond the safety limits by undertows, and have to be rescued by those that can swim.

Swimming is quickly and easily learned, and there is no excuse for anybody not knowing how. You can learn it in half an hour, and if you do the time may quickly come when it will prove to be the most valuable accomplishment you ever acquired. Even if you never need it to save your own life or those of others, you will always find it prolific in pleasant exercise.

Learn to swim, and if you have children, see that they learn without further delay.

THE NEXT HOUSE.

The principal interest in the coming campaign will be the issue of whether the house of representatives is going to remain Republican or not.

The Democrats, if they would capture the house, will have to accomplish a radical revolution. There are now 252 Republicans and 138 Democrats in the house, a difference of 114, so that in order to make the house Democratic that party would have to hold all the seats it now has, and gain fifty-eight more.

This result, the New York Sun declares, would be a political revolution. But the Wall Street Journal points out, while admitting the Sun's statement, that political revolutions, so far as congress is concerned, are of frequent occurrence in this country.

The election figures bear out this remark. There was one in 1894. Two years before the Democratic candidate for president, Mr. Cleveland, had swept the country and carried in with him 219 Democratic house members. There were but 120 Republicans and 12 Populists in the house. Yet the swing in 1894 gave the Republicans 244 members, and left the Democrats only 110 members, with 7 unattached, mostly Populists. The Republicans in that election gained 120 seats, or sixty-two more than the Democrats need this year.

This revolution was no doubt largely due to the hard times that were just beginning, which the people naturally blamed, as they usually do, upon the administration then in power. But it is only necessary to go back to 1882 to find another similar revolution not produced by any such impulse. Two years before that a Republican president had been elected, with a house composed of 152 Republicans, 138 Democrats and 3 unattached. Yet in 1882 there was an upheaval that resulted in the election of 194 Democrats, with only 120 Republicans and 11 unattached. Here the Democrats gained fifty-nine seats, one more than they need this year. There are many points of resemblance between 1882 and 1906, both being years of great prosperity and of great dissension in the Republican ranks.

It is also true, however, that the Democratic party is now more demoralized and not so well organized. However, the return of many Gold Democrats to the party fold, and the apparent likelihood of a rally of the party around the Bryan standard, may overcome the apparent disorganization of the party, and the lack of good faith shown by the Republican congressmen in the matter of tariff revision is certain to cause a considerable Republican revolt this year. Democrats must not consider this a revulsion of sentiment in their favor, however. It will be merely a showing of resentment against the Republican party because of its failure to make some attempt at tariff revision.

SOLDIERS' HOME CANTEENS.

The recent action of the house of representatives in voting away the canteen from the soldiers' homes is another example of mistaken reform. It is like the army canteen action, but just a little worse.

The soldiers' home canteen was well conducted, strictly regulated in the interests of temperance and sobriety, and it did no harm. To remove it is simply to give encouragement to the vile dens that fringe the soldiers' home grounds, as they fringe the military reservations since the canteen was removed from the forts.

The Herald would not encourage the use of liquor, and it has never given utterance to a sentiment that would encourage it. It doubts very seriously whether liquor, in any form, does anybody good, and in common with the rest of the world it knows that in all forms it does grievous harm. But it exists, and the appetite for it cannot be overlooked. It must be reckoned with, and the way to do it is not the narrowminded way of those who would take the canteen away from the army post and from the soldiers' home.

The greatest harm of liquor is done those in the active years of their lives, whom it tempts away from their duties to God and man and leads into the morrasses of dissipation. In the case of a superannuated veteran, spending his fading days in the shelter of a soldiers' home, it can do him but little harm, and there is as little mischief in the occasional dram he takes to warm the cockles of his brave old heart as there is in any drink that is taken anywhere. If the veterans who drink cannot get it in the protection of the home canteen, they will get it in the evil roosts about the outskirts of the grounds, where rankest poison is dispensed without regulation or stint.

Representative Brownlow, one of the managers of the board of control over soldiers' homes, said in reference to the bill:

> There is not and has not been in the United States any man more fanatical on the subject of the use of intoxicating drinks than myself. I never tasted a drop of whisky, wine or beer; I never smoked a cigar and I never took a chew of tobacco. And I went into the management of the Mountain Branch home (Tennessee) as much prejudiced against the sale of intoxicating drinks in any shape, form or fashion as any man in this country. But after careful investigation, after visiting all of the national homes, and after going in there and making a diligent search for all of these things that you complain of, I came to the conclusion that the canteen in the home was an absolute protection to those who were addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors.

That statement puts the case clearly and conclusively. Admitting that the reformers who have done this thing meant well, they have done a great wrong nevertheless.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Have you ever stopped to wonder why the velocipede and handcar which is used on railroads by men who have to work along single track sections is not improved upon?" asked a ruminative individual, at the McKay.

"It is improved upon, but the improvement is not allowed to get ahead. It's an interesting story, too, and maybe you'd like to hear it. You would?

"Well, here goes. I happen to know about this for the reason that the improved machine was manufactured at my home town, which was Three Rivers, Mich. Whenever you see one of these red-bodied velocipedes sliding along the rails, you can make up your mind that it was made at Three Rivers, by the same firm that designed an improved model.

"The firm had been making the old style of velocipede for a number of years, when it was decided that it wa stoo slow a vehicle and that something faster and more up-to-date should be thought out. The services of an electrical engineer were secured and together with some mechanical suggestions he got up an electrical hand car, or velocipede, or whatever you call it, that would run along the rails by the motive power secured from a storage battery.

"Charles Starr, of the firm that was going to manufacture this machine on a large scale, was satisfied that the machine was going to be a great success and he took the first one out for a test with a couple of railroad men.

"It so happens that there it a quartet of railroad lines that form a hollow square and Three Rivers is on the west line of that square. Mr. Starr got a couple of railroad men of the operating department of one of those roads, who were willing to make a test trip on the new device, and then obtained permission of the four roads to run the machine over their lines to make the circuit from Two Rivers around the square.

"It was in the spring of the year, and just before Easter, if I am not mistaken it was on the Saturday just before Easter Sunday, and the car started southward on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern road to the connecting point on the Michigan Central, where it went eastward to a town called Wasepi. So far all three men were pleased with the success of the trip, for the car hummed along at a clip anywhere from twenty-five to thirty-five miles an hour and was under good control. From Wasepi the car was run north to Vicksburg on the Grand Rapids & Indiana, where the rails of the Grand Trunk were taken westward again to a town called Schoolcraft, the intersecting point of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, which ran to Three Rivers.

"The machine all this time had been doing well. On the last lap there happened to be a sharp curve either in cut or woods, I don't recall which just now, but at any rate the people on the car could not see nor hear much of what was going on behind owing to the character of the track at that point. The curve had been passed by the car when all of a sudden a light, fast train, the flower train of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, bore down on the three men and their new machine at fifty miles an hour. It was so close to them that it was impossible for the engineer to get his train under control. The guiding hand of the machine did its best to stop the affair and in the meantime the two railroad men jumped to either side, escaping unhurt.

"But poor Mr. Starr, who tried to save his machine, stayed on it, frantically trying to get it stopped and off the track, while the fast train came on and crashed into man and machine. The machine was smashed into smithereens and the owner was cut into pieces.

"The tragedy gave a bad impression to the railroads and they have never encouraged any device of the kind for fear of a repitition of the trouble. If the train which caused the death had been any but one of the railroad's own trains it might all have been different. But a train of only a car or two besides the engine, operated by the company for its own purposes, that of distributing flowers to various improved stations along the line, made such a fast, light combination that the speed was unusually high and the accident seemingly inevitable.

"There was never any suit for damages against the road. There could have been a successful prosecution, possibly, for the men were not trespassers, as permission had been obtained from the railroad for the operating of the car. But while they had arranged their schedule with care, they had not known of the coming of the flower train."

Granny Scolds Wisely.

G. S. Pease in Anoka Union: Oh, what a farce, a miserable farce is a state convention. Ten hundred and eighty-nine were from every county in the state as delegates, a majority paying their railroad fares, their keep and their incidentals, and then a few leaders gathering in some hotel room, and making up a slate, and all the hundreds of others following their dictation like a lot of sheep. It makes me sore. As I looked over the Republican convention at Duluth from the gallery, and saw those intelligent men, more honorable men, better men, truer men, than those who lead, then I murmured at the ridiculous feature, and I wondered how long such things would be. Why will they allow these petty, self-styled leaders such rope? Where is their manhood? Their independence? I'm ashamed of them all.

Democracy's Danger.

Atlanta Constitution: It is none too early to begin to pray the good Lord to deliver the national Democracy in 1908 from the peanut politicians of New York state.

THE WEATHER

It is getting to be an old story, this thing of having rain and cloudiness and fog and other disagreeable conditions. Yesterday and this morning there were fleeting glimpses of blue sky, which the citizens hailed with delight while they lasted. But while there was little rain, conditions were still unsettled, and they are likely to remain unsettled for a little while yet. The weather man expects southwesterly winds tonight and tomorrow, which should keep it warm and clear the fog away, but he looks for showers the thunder storms just the same. Still, conditions are improving slightly and slowly, and there should be occasional intervals of sunshine. The temperature last night got down as low as 48 degrees, and yesterday as high as 68 degrees.

A year ago today a southwest wind made it warm and pleasant.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The northwestern disturbance has shifted its center from Alberta to Saskatchewan, increasing slightly in strength. Pressures remain high over eastern gulf states and have risen quite decidedly from the Missouri valley westward to the Pacific coast. This arrangement of barometric pressure area has been attended by continued high temperature in most districts east of the Rocky mountains (except near Western Lake Superior), and further showers in northern districts and over scattered sections in gulf states. The Saswatchewan low pressure will move slowly eastward and somewhat north of this locality, causing further showers or thunderstorms tonight and Saturday."

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 29.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Saturday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity —Showers or thunder storms tonight and Saturday; warmer tonight; fresh and brisk southwesterly winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 29.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Saturday: Wisconsin—Continued warm and generally fair except probably local thunder storms tonight or Saturday.

Minnesota—Partly cloudy, with showers and thunder storms tonight or Saturday; cooler in northwest portion tonight.

The Dakotas—Probably showers tonight and Saturday.

Upper Lakes—Fresh southwest winds tonight and Saturday; probably local showers and thunder storms.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

International Falls Press: Duluth captivated the convention visitors by her cordial hospitality and astonished them with her beauty and commercial activity.

Virginia Virginian: The Duluth council very properly killed the ordinance which proposed to require a license of farmers who sell their products in town.

Grand Rapids Independent: The city council of Duluth refused to extend its ordinance requiring farmers to have a license who make a practice of selling their produce from their wagons. The move is a wise one, and shows that the council of Duluth is for encouraging farmers in the vicinity of that pretty city.

Moose Lake Star: We who are close neighbors of Duluth, and know the old town well, read with joy the many expressions of praise for the excellent entertainment at the convention, and hope to be pardoned for suggesting that "we told you so."

Staples World: The recent Republican convention demonstrated one thing: there are other places than the Twin Cities where a big convention can be accommodated in a proper manner.

Ortonville Herald-Star: The people and the newspapers of Duluth handled the recent convention as if to the manor born. No better convention city exists, and if the delegates had been consulted all future Republican state conventions would have been arbitrarily assigned to Duluth.

Grand Rapids Magnet: The city at the Head of the Lakes did itself proud in the entertainment of the large crowd in attendance at the state convention. The people of that burg are hosts well worthy the name.

North Branch Review: The Duluth Herald publishes as an item of news the fact that a girl has been born in Pittsburg with two tongues. The Review has always been under the impression that they were all born that way.

Rush City Post: Duluth will get the next Republican state convention. It is the only real suitable city in the state to hold one.

Mora Times: Duluth certainly deserves the thanks of all who attended the Republican state convention for the hospitable manner in which they treated their guests. A special effort was made to see that everybody had suitable accommodations and at reasonable prices. Duluth has set an example for St. Paul and Minneapolis, which have always taken advantage of delegates to state conventions and other visitors by exacting exorbitant prices for necessary accommodations.

Pine River Sentinel: Duluth is fast gaining the reputation of being the best convention city in the state.

Bemidji Pioneer: One thing about not getting up early is that you haven't so much time to spend your money in. Remarks the Passing Show man in The Duluth Herald. "You" generally have made up the night before, however, for any time lost in the morning.

Walker Pilot: One thing sure, we have got to stop reading The Duluth Herald if we want to continue to be optimistic of Republican victory next fall.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Religion is a mighty poor fit on most people.

There is hardly any crop you can raise that will pay less than children.

It tickles a man almost to death to be taken for somebody who is rich.

If a girl insists upon telling what a good time she had, probably she didn't.

A woman had better be mighty suspicious of the husband who tells her she is the only pretty one he knows.

A Strenuous Suffragist.

New York Sun: It would take a bold man, or one far gone in liquor and reckless of consequences, to call Miss Billington, the English woman's rights leader, a "suffragette." Miss Billington heckles the chancellor of the exchequer, slaps a constable in the face and kicks him twice on the leg, and refuses to recognize the jurisdiction of a magistrate, all in one day. We would sooner call Carrie Nation a "suffragette;" it would be safer.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Ike Lederer, representing the firm of Adder & Co, clothiers, Milwaukee, was here yesterday. Mr. Lederer is one of the numerous owners of Duluth real estate, and has great expectations for the city.

B. F. Mackall, postmaster at Moorhead, returned home yesterday, but expects to complete the arrangements already pending between him and Smith Bros. for the purchase of their drug store, it being his desire to become a permanent resident of Duluth.

The school teachers started yesterday for their different homes to spend the summer. Miss Sargent goes to Mathews, Mass.; Miss Murdock to Wabasha, Miss Goodell to Boston, Miss McClemmens to Chicago, Miss Chrisman to St. Paul and Miss Thrall to Mankato.

Mrs. C. Bellamore of Duluth is visiting her sister, Mrs. Glass, of Northern Pacific Junction.

George H. Wetrecht, wife and children of St. Paul, are visiting Duluth friends.

George A. Elder of Moorhead, who has been here for several days, is so favorably impressed with the importance of Duluth that he may conclude to reside here.

A. M. Miller to C. F. Leland, lots 299, 301 and 303, block 55, Second division, $5,000.

Minnesota Iron company to F .W. Smith, lot 11, block 1, Tower, $125.

F. W. Smith to Martin Welsh, lot 11, block 1, Tower, $800.

J. R. Myers to H. Payen, lot 22, block 106, Third division, $275.

Judge Lars M. Rand, who was here with the Minneapolis party, is prominently spoken of for the position of clerk of the supreme court

McGregor & Co. were awarded the contract for building the boiler for the Lehigh Dock company. The boiler will be locomotive style, 100-horse power, and will cost $1,400.

Charles Peterson has gone to St. Paul for a few days' vacation, and upon his return will assume the duties of warehouseman in the Omaha freight house.

Arrangements are being made to give "The Mikado" by local talent in Duluth, under the direction of J. A. Norris of Boston, who has given the opera within the past year in many other cities with success.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Thief River Falls News: The next state legislature should enact a law extending the primary election system to state officers. When this is done, the people can say who shall be the nominees of the party, and that is as it should be.

Fergus Falls Free Press: Not one corporation in the United States so far as we know is in favor of Socialism or government ownership of anything. But these same corporations by their grasping, over-reaching methods are doing more to instill Socialistic ideas into the minds of the people than all the Socialistic teachers and parties in the world.

North Branch Review: A St. Louis girl broke her arm unbuttoning her shirt waist. It does seem impossible for a girl to strain her arm as bad as that just reaching a couple inches above her waist line.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: A doctor—possibly a physician—comes to the front with a theory that the popularity of appendicitis comes from tainted meat. What the medical men do not know about appendicitis has filled several grave yards.

Bemidji Pioneer: Between the kickers who yawn every time they think of congress being still in session and those who holler every time an adjournment is mentioned, what are the poor legislators to do?

Walker Pilot: Fifty per cent of the deaths in this country are the direct result of impure foods. And yet congress juggles with the pure food bill. Does that body represent the people or not?

Moorhead Independent: One way out of the difficulty is for the packers to turn in and make imported sausage for a while.

Halstad Reporter: Too many candidates, was the main fault of that convention all around. With only three candidates for governor instead of seven, Cole would never have had the honor he bears today.

Stillwater Gazette: Of course it was a good excuse but it don't go with the law. A fellow was arrested in the capital city for hugging the girls and when brought before the court made the excuse that he couldn't help it.

Crookston Times: With the opposition united, as it is this year, the normal Republican advantage as to governor is less than 5,000 votes.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The primary law gives every man the right to express his preference for candidates, and his vote counts just one, whether he lives in the Eighth ward of Minneapolis or in the backwoods of Morrison county. It is the law which recognizes the rights of the individual, and is founded on the declaration of independence, which proclaims the equality of man. The farmers are just as patriotic as the dwellers in cities—and as a general rule are better informed on political matters of current interest.

The World Is Better.

Wall Street Journal: Current opinion to the contrary notwithstanding, the world is getting better all the time.

Neither tainted meat, nor tainted money, nor Standard Oil rebates, nor railroad discrimination, nor insurance graft, nor political corruption, nor special privilege, nor yellow journalism, nor monopoly prices, nor closed doors, nor unfair competition, nor overcapitalization, nor stock jobbery, nor bomb, nor lynch law, should blind us to this fact.

The world is better. It is better than it was a thousand years ago, or a hundred years ago, or fifty years ago, or even one year ago. It would not be difficult for an expert commission to establish that fact. It is pleasanter and safer to live in. Life at its fuller and sweeter and truer and more useful. Opportunity for ambition and enterprise and service was never so grand as it is now. There is more health, more sanitary protection against disease, more scientific treatment of the insane and afflicted, more regard for the poor, better wages, shorter hours of labor and finer tenements for the workmen.

The world has been brought closer together. Commerce has made the globe a neighborhood. There is a keener sense of brotherhood between different peoples and nations. Crime has been made more difficult, and war less frequent. Traveling has been made a pleasure, a means of recreation. Cities are safer to live in and the country has been rescued from its loneliness by telephones, trolleys and good roads. We have better food, better clothes, better houses, better schools, and better churches and more hospitals and institutions of charity, science and reform than ever before in all the history of the world. Never did women hold so exalted a position in the life of the world as today, and never were the rights of children, for both education and play, so safeguarded. Books have become common possession of the multitude. The press, with all its shortcomings, was never so truly the vehicle of truth as now. Society, with all its gross extravagances and display, was never so free from impurity and reckless disregard of the rights of others as it is today. In business, when was there a time when the inviolability of contract was held in higher regard, when was the oral promise, never broken, so universally the basis of transactions in the great markets?

Modern commerce, carried on by banks and corporations, has indeed developed new modern sins of a type not known to our forefathers. But, how marvelously sensitive has become the modern conscience to those new sins, how quick the disclosure, how swift the condemnation by public opinion!

If ever you are overwhelmed in pessimism by the muck-rake revelations, open the books of history and biography. Study the conditions existing when your father and his father, and father's father, lived. Take note of how much better off you are than your ancestors, and then do your part to make the world still better for those who come after you. Remember, also, how fast progress is made nowadays. The "thousand years that are as one day" have become as even one hour.

No Longer Friendless.

Lebanon Daily News: Despise not the humble prune. It is pure food.

FLASHES OF FUN.

New York Sun: Stella—He told me I looked sweet enough to eat.

Bella—He doubtless meant that you were well preserved.

Chicago Tribune: "Hello, old man! Where are you keeping yourself these days?"

"I'm running a model farm."

"What kind is that?"

"It's the kind you can run by riding over it in your automobile and hiring experts to do the work."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Say, doctor, what do you think about this proposition to kill the incurables?"

"Well, it would depend a good deal upon the condition of their pocketbooks."

Washington Star: "The man who wins my admiration," said the serious girl, "must be a man who can stand firm in his convictions in the face of ridicule, opposition and personal danger."

"I see," said Miss Cayenne. "Your ideal is a base ball umpire."

Milwaukee Sentinel: "What a touchy fellow Bilkins is."

"Well, why shouldn't he be? Isn't he a chronic borrower?"

Washington Star: "How do you manage to keep your summer boarders so contented?"

"I go after the mail myself," said Farmer Corntossel, "and I always forget to bring home any papers from town except those that have humidity and sun stroke news in 'em."

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: "Is it really true that Mr. Roxley's dead?" asked the young doctor's wife.

"Yes," he said.

"O, isn't it awful?"

"It is so. I thought he would be good for at least a dozen more visits."

"Ah, yes,' said Senator Snug, as he interlaced his claws in a self-satisfied way in front of his corporosity. "I got my start in life by clerking in a humble grocery store at a salary of $3 a week, and managed to save money on that."

"But," replied the astute reporter, "that, of course, was before cash registers were invented."

An Impending Calamity.

Lincoln State Journal: The people of the United States are facing a calamity. It will not be so serious in life and property loss as the disaster at San Francisco, but will be much more serious than the average bad railroad wreck. Approximately fifty persons, the budding flower of the country, are to die from its effects, and three thousand or thereabouts will suffer wounds. The property loss will be less than a million dollars, in all probability, and will be so widely distributed that there will be no call upon congress for relief. This is no vague prophecy. The blow will fall a few days hence, and all over the land Rachel will weep for her dead and mangled children. This prophecy is not an exclusive item of news. Everybody knows what is coming, but the gladness of the celebration overcomes the shadow of the calamity. It is encouraging to note, however, the disposition of the doctors of the state of Nebraska to organize in advance for the emergency, as indicated by the letter of Dr. Mansfelde with its advice concerning first aid to the wounded. This slaughter of the innocents is an annual affair, and by such suggestions as those of Dr. Mansfelde the loss of life, which was about a hundred in number two years ago, was reduced last year to fifty. The backfire set by modern science against the murderous Fourth of July pistol and cannon crackers is a brilliant ray across the impending gloom.

A Total Loss.

More mighty than the fire is she,
More dread than earthquake tilt;
When Bridget burns a porterhouse,
It cannot be rebuilt.

KNOWLTON'S PLAN GOOD

Company C Likes His Method of Securing New Officers.

Examinations for Places in Official Ranks Are All Over.

An exciting competition between the privates of Company C, Third regiment, has ended and two successful men have been appointed to fill vacancies as corporals which existed. They are Privates Harold C. Foster and Arty Clark.

In filling the positions Capt. Knowlton adopted a method of procedure which permitted every private in the ranks to try for the places and the men with the most practical knowledge and ability to command won out. The captain is satisfied that his way has got it all over the old method of having written examinations on army tactics.

Every man in the company, except those who were already officers, had a chance to drill a squad. Man after man stepped forth from the ranks and put four other men through all the maneuvers he could think of. Then he retired and another private tried his hand at being an officer.

Some of the men who had perhaps the best knowledge of how to do the thing, culled from books only, fell down while those who combined their book learning with the knowledge they acquired by observation and with clearness in giving orders and other details, made better showings.

The men were much pleased with the new plan, too. It was rather interesting. After all the men had drilled a squad, the contest was narrowed down to six men and of these Foster and Clark proved the most capable. They are having corporal's stripes sewed on their coats.

Other charges have been made in the non-commissioned officers in the company. Quartermaster Sergeant L. O. Zelgler has been promoted to first sergeant and Corporal George H. Swan becomes quartermaster sergeant. Corporal R. C. Nelson has been promoted to sergeant and Henry Guith has been appointed a musician.

IF BULOW SINGS HIS DOG HOWLS

German Chanceller Likes to Use Voice, But Mohrchen Objects.

Norderney, Northwest Germany, June 29.—Prince von Bulow, Germany's imperial chancellor, is enjoying himself on windswept Norderney, a small island lying in the North sea a few miles from the Frisian coast. This island is a long, low sand dune scattered over with hotels, summer villas sand the cottages of a hardy race of fisher folk.

Prince Bulow owns a commodious villa built in the Dutch style, with a garden and stabling for two horses. The terrace of his house commands a fine view of the sea.

With the prince are the princes and a black poodle called Mohrchen, known as the "imperial dog." These are his intimates.

Then there is Prof. Renvers, a medical friend, who was ordered by the kaiser to accompany the chancellor to Norderney and report at stated intervals on the prince's health. Besides these, three privy councillors are in attendance, a staff of messengers who go back and forth between Norderney and Berlin, and three cipher clerks.

The prince is never visible to the outside world till luncheon hour. He and his wife and the imperial dog then repair to Richter's restaurant, and after luncheon take a walk on the sands.

At 3 the prince takes his nap, and after the nap there is work until 5, when he and the privy councillors, not forgetting Mohrchen, take a long walk across the island.

At 8 there is dinner, again at Richter's, and the evening is spent at the villa with music and Mohrchen performing antics.

The prince loves music; the princess, who is an Italian countess as well, is an admirable pianist.

When no one is present, the prince, who has a good bass voice, ventures a song, but the imperial dog always objects and sets up a howl of anguish.

All Mohrchen's tricks are learned from the prince, who finds time for this amid the grave affairs of state which occupy his days.

Mohrchen has been known to entertain a whole room full of potentates, and usually is introduced to the company when conversation begins to flag or it is desirable to give it a turn.

UNHAPPY FAMILY'S REUNION IN COURT.

Los Angeles, June 29.—Mrs. Anna Victor, serving a sentence of 100 days in the county jail, was brought into juvenile court to witness the disposition of her children.

As she sat within the bar the court room door swung open and Humane Officer Dearoorn entered with her baby Frank in his arms, the bright-eyed 6-year-old boy hanging to his coat sleeve.

The mother started up to take in her arms the baby whom she had not seen for days. Then she remembered that she was in court and in custody, and she sank back in her chair and sobbed.

Baby Victor could not understand this. At sight of the long-lost mother he held out two chubby hands and began to cry noisily. Officer Dearborn carried his ward across the court room from the mother and there tried to comfort it.

Every eye in the court room turned from mother to child and back again to see the heart tragedy. The baby interrupted the court proceedings with its cries. The mother hid her face and sobbed.

MUCH JEALOUSY

London, June 29.—A good many parties are being given for Miss Marguerite and Miss Theodora Shonts, the daughters of Theodore Perry Shonts of Panama canal fame. Unless there is something out of the common about debutantes they get no attention whatever. These two girls are rather unique in their way, so they already command notice. They have a certain simplicity and frankness which of late has not characterized the American debutante, who is too much given to assuming the "veni, vidi vici" air. Perhaps it is because the Misses Shonts have passed the greater part of their lives in their parents' plantation home, Daphne, Ala., that they are so characterically unaffected. They sing coon songs which have never before been heard in England, and accompany them with the banjo. The king recently heard them sing at Consuelo, duchess of Manchester's, and requested their mother to come with them to tea at Buckingham palace, that the queen might hear them sing. Next day the king sent one of the royal motors for the girls and their mother, and Queen Alexandra was regaled all the afternoon with plantation songs, accompanied by the banjo. The Misses Shonts have been studying in Paris for the last two years and have devoted much of their time to music. Their mother has been made most indignant by offers of colossal sums which have been made to these clever amateurs by a music hall manager. The girls themselves, who are full of fun, have been very keen on accepting an "engagement" and told her majesty so. The queen remarked immediately that, "even for fun," young girls who had hours of their own and rich parents should not go on the stage, as in so doing they might be taking employment from others.

This visit of Mrs. Shonts and her daughters to Buckingham palace has caused a great amount of jealousy, as the fact of the queen having received almost complete strangers in this informal way is a unique compliment—one which is not accorded by her once in years.

Death From Lockjaw

Never follows an injury dressed with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Its antiseptic and healing properties prevent blood poisoning. Charles Oswald, merchant, of Rensselaersville, N. Y., writes: "It cured Seth Burch of this place of the ugliest sore on his neck I ever saw." Cures Cuts, Wounds, Burns and Sores. 25c at all drug stores.

RABIES IN TEXAS SPREAD BY "HYDROPHOBIA CATS."

Houston, Tex., June 29.—Reports from several counties in the southwestern section of the state, where the dry weather has been especially notable during the present year, indicate that the "hydrophobia cats" are becoming more numerous. This is a term applied to hostile polecats. The ordinary polecat will run from a human until cornered. The "hydrophobia cat" appears to be seized with a feeling of enmity towards humans, and will invade tents and dwellings, attacking sleeping persons, generally by the nose, and in many instances rabies have followed. These cats do not run when attacked. They resist until killed. It is believed that most of the epidemics of rabies among horses and dogs in that section of the state are started by these animals, which no more fear a dog than they do a human being.

HOLD DRESS REHEARSAL

Finishing Touches Being Put on Duluth's New Amusement Park.

A "dress" rehearsal will be held at the White City this afternoon.

The various employes of the new park will be on hand and will be given complete instructions as to their duties. The machinery in the different shows will be tested, to make sure that it is running smoothly, and everything will be put in readiness for the opening tomorrow.

The grounds will be formally opened by Mayor Cullum of Duluth and Mayor Linley of Superior, and the aldermen and city officials of both cities will be guests of honor during the afternoon, special cars being provided to take them to the grounds.

Flaaten's Third Regiment band will be carreid through the streets of the city in a chartered car, and taken to the grounds for the first band concert in the new park.

Just what shows will be opened the managers themselves cannot tell as yet, but from the prospects this morning, it seemed likely that all but possibly one or two would be in running order by tomorrow afternoon.

All of the free shows will be given, however, and if one or two of the other attractions are not quite ready it will be money out of nobody's pocket but that of the management.

The miniature railway was set up last evening, and the "W. F. Fitch," as the engine has been named in honor of the president of the South Shore road, was steamed up for a trial trip. The three cars have been named the "South Shore," the "Northern Pacific," and the "Great Northern."

The ten cars in the Mystic River were also given names yesterday, as follows: "Duluth," "Superior," "Ashland," "Eveleth," "Hibbing," "Virginia," "Cloquet," "Calumet," "Two Harbors," and "Tower."

The men are now working night and day to complete the park. The wiring was being rushed with an extra crew last evening, and will be finished up this afternoon.

A gang of men was put at work yesterday, clearing away the shrubbery, where it is too dense, and laying out the paths with wet cinders, which were rolled down to form a smooth, level and dustless roadway.

Cages for the animals were completed, and the animals turned into them. A pasture is also being fenced in for the deer.

Today the booths for the sale of peanuts, popcorn and other refreshments are being erected.

GARBAGE WILL RUN SIOUX CITY PLANT.

Sioux City, Ia., June 29.—At a meeting of the city council recently a resolution was carried requesting the city chemist, W. Lee Lewis, to make an investigation into the possibility of making denatured alcohol from the garbage collected in Sioux City, the alcohol to be used as fuel to operate light engines in the city buildings.

Alderman Maxiener subsequently declared that with Chemist W. Lee Lewis, he took two buckets of garbage from his bakery kitchen, and they made a quantitiy of alcohol, fully equal and to all appearances as good alcohol as "wood." As soon as inventions are completed to make it possible to use alcohol to run the light plant in the city building and library building, the city of Sioux City, proposes to dispose of the garbage of the entire city by converting it into fuel fluid.

The potato peelings and biscuits, chicken bones and apple cores, old rags and cherry seeds, will all be boiled up together and converted into power for thousands of electric lights.

Mr. Lewis, who is professor of chemistry in Morningside college laboratory, said regarding the plan: "I am sure it is practical. Garbage, when properly treated, makes the best kind of wood alcohol. I believe the barbage of Sioux City would run the municipal plants and the plant necessary to make the alcohol. It is certainly an economical proposition, rivaling the idea of Victor Hugo that France loses $50,000,000 every year by allowing the sewage to drain into the ocean when it should be put in the vineyards.

"I shall prepare the plans for the Sioux City plant, and we will be, in all probability, the first city in the United States to have such a plant."

To Get More Strength from Your Food

LOTS of people are starving with a full stomach.

You know, it's not how much we Eat, but how we Digest that makes us Strong, or Brainy, or Successful.

When the Bowels are filled with undigested food we may be a great deal worse off than if we were half starved for want of Food.

Because, food that stays too long in the Bowels decays there, just as if it stayed too long in the open air.

Well, when food decays in the Bowels, through delayed and overdue action, what happens?

The millions of little Suction Pumps that line the Bowels and Intestines then draw Poison from the decayed Food, instead of the Nourishment they were intended to draw.

This Poison gets into the blood and, in time, spreads all over the body, unless the Cause of Constipation is promptly removed.

That Cause of Constipation is Weak, or Lazy, Bowel Muscles.

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them—not "Physic" to pamper them.

Its name is "CASCARETS," and its price is Ten Cents a box.

Cascarets act like Exercise on the Muscles of the Bowels, and make them stronger every time they force these Muscles to act naturally.

The stronger these Muscles propel the food, the stronger does the friction of the food act on the flow of Digestive Juices.

The more of these Juices that act on food, the more Nutriment does that food turn into, and the richer nourishment do the little Suction Pumps of the Intestines draw out of it.

It needs only one Cascaret at a time to stimulate all the Bowel-Muscles enough, without purging, discomfort or loss of nutrition.

So, if you want the same natural action that a six-mile walk in the country would give you, (without the weariness) take one Cascaret at a time, with intervals between, till you reach the exact condition you desire.

One Cascaret at a time will properly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue, thus proving clearly its ready, steady, sure, but mild and effective action.

A coming Headache can be warded off, in short order, by a single Cascaret, and the cause removed.

Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-risings in the throat, and Colicky feeling are sure signs of Bowel trouble from food poisons, and should be dealt with promptly.

One Cascaret will stop the coming trouble, move on the Bowel load, and free the Digestive Juices, if that one Cascaret is taken as soon as the first signs are noticed.

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Cascaret Box with you constantly.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

S.S.S. CURES ECZEMA

The real cause for Eczema is the presence of humors and sour acids in the blood. These impurities get into the circulatiou because of imperfect action of those members of the system whose duty it is to collect and carry off the refuse and waste of the body. As this effete matter lies in the system it ferments and generates acrid humors which are absorbed into the blood, overcharging this vital fluid with acid. In its effort to keep the system healthy the blood throws off the humors through the pores and glands of the skin, causing this tormenting skin disease. The escape of acids and humors through the pores and glands irritates and burns the skin, producing pustules filled with a clear, sticky fluid, which dries in crusts and patches causing the most intense itching, and often pain. The trouble is in the blood, and S. S. S. is the remedy for Eczema, because it is a real blood purifier. It goes down into the circulation, removes all acids and humors and makes the blood rich, pure and healthy. When S. S. S. has done this the symptoms pass away, the blood is cooled and the disease cured permanently. Nothing acts so promptly or pleasantly in all skin diseases as S. S. S., and it is at the same time a fine tonic to the entire system. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

With the thermometer at 88 and the relative humidity very high, Thursday was the warmest June day in St. Paul recorded in two years. During the day there were three heat prostrations. One of the victims is dead and another probably will die.

That the Panama canal will be completed in eight years from the present time is the belief of Chairman Shonts of the canal commission. Mr. Shonts made this prophecy just before sailing for the isthmus on the Steamer Panama in company with Chief Engineer Stevens of the canal.

Between 16,000 and 17,000 persons have registered at Billings, Mont., for the drawings of Crow lands which begins next Monday. This is the last day for registration.

J. E. Hewitt of Oshkosh Thursday, at Janesville, won the state golf championship by defeating Hamilton Vose of Milwaukee. R. P. Cavanaugh of Kenosha won the consolation prize. J. P. Baker of Janesville won the contest for golfers over 50 years old. H. G. Carter of Janesville won the all day medal play contest.

The senate has passed a bill authorizing the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway company to construct a bridge across the Red river.

Thursday was the hottest day of the year in Chicago, the mercury reaching 91 in the weather office, while on the streets it was 4 degrees higher. Two deaths attributable to heat and several prostrations were reported to the police.

MANIAC LAUNDRYMAN THREW CLOTHES AWAY.

Philadelphia, June 29.—Quite a few of the residents of Frankford will be minus their clean linen on Sunday, and it is doubtful if some of them ever get the clothes that were left at the Chinese laundry at No. 1520 Sellers street, because of the fact that during an attack of insanity the proprietor of the place, Leung Tai, threw the bundles of unwashed clothes into a sewer. He is now confined in the insane department of the Philadelphia hospital.

WOMAN, RIDING ON ENGINE, WAS KILLED.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 29.—As the result of an accident on the Harlem railroad Mrs. Cutler, wife of Postmaster William B. Cutler, is dead at her home, at Dover Furnace.

Mrs. Cutler was enjoying the novelty of a ride in the cab of an engine from Dover Plains to Dover Furnace. She was standing on the steps as the engine slowed down, when an unexpected jolt threw her off and under the wheels. Both legs and one arm were cut off.

Mrs. Cutler was taken home and died soon afterward.

WEST END STORES ARE FLOODED

Heavy Rains too Much for Catch Basins to Carry Off.

New Basins Said to be too Small—Other News.

Considerable trouble has been experienced during the wet weather of this spring and summer—which has been practically all of the weather—with the catch basins at the West end. These catch basins were put in last fall. It is claimed by those who have stores in the vicinity of Nineteenth and Twentieth avenues west that the new catch basins are not large enough, and are not giving nearly as good service as did the old ones.

During every heavy rain of this spring and summer, it is claimed, stores are being flooded, and the water backing up along the curbs in general, for the reason that the catch basisn are not sufficiently large to carry the water off. It is also claimed that with the old catch basins this did not happen unless the rain was extraordinary; but with the new ones, a moderately heavy rain will choke the opening of the catch basins up.

The rain of yesterday morning had the streets in bad shape, and the stores and houses setting a little low got the worst of it, with the water backing up into them. The people affected, however, say this has been quite common all of this year.

PAVING STARTED.

Telford Macadam Being Laid on Two Open Blocks.

Work on the paving of the two blocks between Thirteenth and Fifteenth avenues west has been started, and Telford macadam will be put in there. This was part of the Hugh Steele contract, but could not be finished until something had been accomplished about the Point of Rocks. Now that the work of tearing down the point has progressed as well as it has, the work has been started on the paving. This paving will not take long, for the reason that it requires only the top layers and some rolling. The Telford macadam is being put in there, for this reason that there is a decided grade at that point, and it was believed that the tar macadam would be too slippery.

The Point of Rocks has been pulled down until the danger of it is almost wiped out now, and one can pass there with a reasonable degree of comfort. Some very dangerous points and loose boulders were found on the face of the bluff during the work of tearing down, which those at work on the point marveled at, and could not make out how they had stayed in place. A great deal of the face of the rock has been torn down and carried away. Still more is to come down, and within a week the Point of Rocks will have lost its menacing front.

STUNNED BY BOLT.

Small Boy and Horse Have Narrow Escape in Storm.

During the heavy electrical storm of yesterday morning a small boy, whose name could not be learned, and a horse had a mix-up with a bolt of lightning which pretty nearly put a quietus on each. The horse was driven by Andrew Otterson. He had to go into the Esmond hotel during the storm for a moment and asked a small boy standing near to hold the horse.

When Otterson came out a moment after he found the small boy lying senseless on the sidewalk and the horse about all in. Both recovered in a few moments. The boy turned sick and headed for home and the horse became so frantic that considerable trouble in quieting him was experienced. It seems a bolt of lightning struck the ground close by and affected the boy and the horse.

Deno-Blake Marriage.

Mrs. Selma Deno and W. S. W. Blake, both of Duluth were married on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Blake, brother of the groom, in Minneapolis. Mr. Blake is a well known jeweler of the central part of the city and is also well known in the West end where he has lived for a number of years. Mrs. Deno is also well known at the West end, having lived there for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Blake are now residing at 2013 West Superior street.

Too Much Rain Spoils Crop.

Some of the farmers who live "back of the hill" are telling their friends in the West end that this excessively rainy weather is ruining their crops. They claim that it causes a rank growth of weeds and chokes their vegetables to death. They claim that the rain makes the weeds grow so fast that it is almost impossible to keep them out of the fields and gardens and that in consequence the crop of this year is very likely to prove a flat failure around Duluth.

GIRL DRANK POISON ON BEING SCOLDED.

St. Louis, June 29.—Ida Emich, pretty 16-year-old granddaughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Muether, of No. 3119 North Twenty-third street, took carbolic acid with suicidal intent, following a quarrel, the girl says, when the grandmother drove her from the house, on learning that she intended to do "a flight for life," down a 300-foot wire from a tower 150 feet high, suspended by her teeth.

Miss Emich is in a serious condition at the city hospital, but physicians say she will recover. She was found by her grandmother soon after she took the acid on returning to her grandmother's home.

"I have done 'the flight for life' several times out of town, but no one I knew saw me," said Miss Emich Wednesday. "When I told grandmother that I was going to do the act at a show tent at Florissant and Bremen avenues, she said I should not. I told her that I would wear tights and a long thin gown when I made 'the flight for life,' and she became very angry.

"She drove me from the house. I went to a drug store and bought 10 cents' worth of carbolic acid. I came back to grandmother's and went to my room without her hearing me. I didn't want to make any trouble for them, so I dressed in my best clothes, just as I wanted them to bury me, and took the acid. That I did not die I think is an omen that I was not intended to die so soon, and I will not again attempt suicide."

BIG CODFISH ATE PAIR OF SPECTACLES.

Gloucester, June 29.—A codfish with appetite enough to swallow a clam that concealed a fishhook, while at the same time trying to digest a pair of brass-rimmed spectacles with both lenses affixed, was a curiosity that was hauled from the water on the Georgia banks by Olas Nelson of the Lella E. Norwood.

The fish is a large one, but even at that the spectacles are large enough to fill its stomach so full that there did not seem to be room for the clam it was grabbing for when captured.

MAID IN ONE FAMILY FOR OVER 75 YEARS.

Wolfboro, N. H., June 29.—Judith Dearborn, probably the oldest family servant in America, who died a few days ago in her ninety-ninth year, was attached to the Adam Brown family, whose homestead is The Ridge, a famous landmark for more than seventy-five years.

Aunt Judith waited on four generations of the Brown family, and out of her savings, together with the generosity of her last mistress, Mrs. Francis P. Adams, was enabled to buy a small home, where she passed the last few years of her useful life.

Those who knew Judith Dearborn declare that she was the personification of faithfulness and fidelity to her master's interests. Her long life was spent quietly in the skillful management of the same family, and her executive ability was said to have been wonderful.

A few months ago Aunt Judith gave out some of her impressions to a friend.

"Seventy years ago," she said, "a good domestic servant received 50 cents a week. Evenings and afternoons off were never heard of, but then we never had time for such things.

"Just think how much harder it was to do work without all of the conveniences of a modern home! Surely the servant of today has little to complain of. Nor at that time did I have any complaint to make. I was always most kindly treated by the members of the family, and, as wages increased, so did mine.

"I tell you, it sets one to thinking to see the little children we have nursed, and cuddled, and petted, and spanked, grow into white-haired men and women, and we go on in the same old way, doing our duty toward their children and grandchildren."

It is wonderful what a little careful grooming will do for a woman. It's inspiration and sweetness. It's delightful and bewitching. The effects of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

RESULTS YESTERDAY.

Fargo, 3; Calumet, 1.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Lake Linden.
Fargo at Calumet.
Winnipeg at Houghton.
Grand Forks at Hancock.

During the next week the Duluth baseball club will be busy trying out new men.

Five or six new players have been signed, from small towns down in Wisconsin and through the western part of the state, and they will be tried out in turn.

Lovett, Summers and Adams have been released, and their places will have to be filled from the new recruits. Two new catchers are available, and both will be given a trial. They are Charles Campau and C. Meyer.

A third baseman named Pat Boyle will replace Lovett, and a shortstop named George Templeton will fill in the vacancy left by Summers. A new outfielder, George Murphy, has also been signed, and Hoffman, the former Eastern league pitcher, now in Milwaukee, may be given a trial.

The team will return home tomorrow morning, and will have a practice at Athletic park, when the new men will be in uniform. The line-up for the afternoon games will then be selected. Two games will be played with Lake Linden in the afternoon. Cummings will pitch one and Brick will probably work out in the other. The first game will be called at 2 o'clock, and the second immediately after the close of the first.

These two games will give the fans plenty of opportunity of seeing the new men in action. If they don't make good they will be let go and others will be tried out. The management is determined to get the team back into its winning gait.

In spite of the long losing streak, the Sox are far from being out of the running yet. Calumet has also been losing, and the defeat by Fargo yesterday tumbled them down into second place. Only two games separate them from the White Sox, and three victories for Duluth and three defeats for Winnipeg would put the Sox back into first place.

The pitching staff has been working well, and if the infield can just be whipped into shape, and if some of the good stickers like McCormick, Barto, O'Dea and Livingstone get their eyes in and begin hitting the ball regularly, there is no reason why Duluth should not be back in the running within the next week or ten days.

The league meeting yesterday afternoon was of little interest to the fans, the only business transacted being routine matters.

A protest was made against the manner in which some of the clubs are claimed to be exceeding the salary limit. The Winnipeg club is claimed to be paying $3,000 a month, and President Price promised to investigate. He stated that Manager Lamb had given him his word of honor that the monthly payroll was not over the salary limit.

Some figures on the attendance were also produced. Winnipeg leads with an average of about $135 a day for the games played on the home grounds, Duluth is second with an average of about $96 a day, and Fargo third. Calumet comes fourth, and the other four clubs are bunched at the bottom.

The schedule committee, which will rearrange some of the games, is composed of J. Hannis of Lake Linden, Alexander Stearns of Fargo and J. M. Lamb of Winnipeg.

ALMOST A SHUT OUT.

Calumet Gets Lone Run in Ninth Inning From Fargo.

Calumet, Mich., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The ninth inning gave Calumet its only look in in the game with Fargo today and one lone run made then saved a shut out. A base on balls, a hit, and an error permitted one man to cross the plate. McMillan twirled for the visitors and three straggling hits was all the Aristocrats could do to him.

Score by innings—

EVEN BREAK AT CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, June 29.—Cleveland and Chicago broke even in a double-header yesterday. Cleveland lost the first game through a blunder. With the score 2 to 1 in favor of Chicago in the seventh inning, Bradley hit over the left field fence for what appeared to be a home run. The ball bounded back into the field, however, and Bradley, who was merely jogging around the bases was touched with the ball. Connolly deciding he was out and not entitled to a home run. He could have reached third easily. Bemis followed with a two-base hit, which was wasted. Cleveland won the second game easily, shutting out Chicago. Scores:

HARVARD WINS A GREAT RACE

New London, Conn., June 29.—Harvard's 'varsity triumphed over Yale yesterday before the greatest crowd that ever gathered here on a race day, and coming after years of defeat, victory was sweet indeed to the crimson. It was a great Yale crew that Harvard defeated, a crew that had broken all records on the Thames in practice, and went to the stake boat a favorite, and Harvard's joy is unconfined.

To Captain Filley and Coach Wray the supporters of the crimson are offering the greatest tributes that ever athletic heroes received.

Harvard won, but Yale rowed a race that will live long in the annals of college sports. Not once from the start until the last sixteenth of a mile did the shells cease to lap each other. The men in the rival boats could see each other for more than three miles and a half as first one coxswain and then the other called upon his crew for leg drive and body swing to push his shell ahead. Then and only then did Harvard really get the lead, for the killing pace proved too much for two of the Yale men and in the final spurt Boulton and Noyes of the blue, were done, their oars literally slipping away from them. Here Harvard began to open up clear water between the two shells and in the last ten or fifteen strokes of the race she pulled away from her rival. Noyes, Yale's No. 6, absolutely exhausted, began to miss the stream on the catch and swing his oar through the air.

He sat up in his seat until the flag dropped and then he fell backwards into the boat like a dead man. Chase at No. 5 raised Noyes' head and dashed water on him, but he remained unconscious for a considerable length of time. All the way down the last mile and a quarter the Yale coxswain had been throwing water into Boulton's face and when Coxswain Barkalow finally yelled "vast," Boulton fell forward on his oar. Dick Morse, Yale's captain, splashed water upon his men and called to them to sit up in the boat. He had lost the race and the dearest prize of his college career, but he was game to the finish. Harvard's men in the intoxication of their victory, did not stop when the flags fell but rowed on under the drawbridge amid the din of hundreds of yacht whistles, the boom of cannon and the shouts of thousands of Cambridge men who almost jumped out of the observation train into the Thames to get to their crew.

Harvard won the race by less than two lengths and a half. Her time was 23 minutes and 2 seconds, Yale's 23 minutes 11 seconds.

While the crews had the tide with them, they had a brisk quartering wind which made fast time impossible. The record for the course is 20 minutes and 10 seconds, made by the Yale crew in 1888.

WILL GO TO LITCHFIELD.

One Hundred Duluthians to Attend Knights of Pythias Encampment.

About 100 members of the Knights of Pythias, uniform rank, will leave Monday for Litchfield, Minn., where the state encampment of the uniform rank will be held. The gathering will be held July 3, 4, 5 and 6 and it is estimated that fully 2,500 visitors will be in the Southern Minnesota town then.

The Duluth Knights will be under the command of Capt. G. A. Terry of Company 8, Capt. Pierce of Company 11 will be unable to accompany his men and Capt. Terry will be in charge of the entire Duluth battalion. Col. G. H. Nichols of this city will have command of the regiment from this district.

This encampment is the first one that has been held in the state for years, but it is proposed to hold it every year, hereafter, and the Duluth Knights will go to Litchfield with the idea of securing the next one for this city.

DONALDA, RISING STAR OF OPERA, IS A CANADIAN.

Paris, June 29.—Mlle. Donalda, the bright particular star of the Convent Garden operatic season since the failure of the great Melba, sprang into public favor last year, though she was then looked upon merely as a promising artist. The absence of the world famous cantatrice from the leading roles has thrust Donalda into a prominence beyond the expectation, and she has so magnificently risen to the occasion that the Australian song-bird has been scarcely missed.

As Marguerite and Juliet, Mlle. Donalda captured easy honors, and as Clida she made a brilliant success.

She was discovered in Canada by Saligmac, a distinguished tenor. On his advice she went to Paris three years ago to study and was soon engaged for the Nice opera season of 1905. Her debut there proved so notable that Convent Garden secured her, and after her first season here she was engaged for the Theater de la Monnaie, Brussels.

Happy-hearted in temperament and indefatigable as a worker, she undoubtedly has a splendid future.

VERDICT FOR MARTIN.

Gets $600 Damages for Being Shot In a Saloon.

Grand Rapids, Minn., July 29.—In the district court, in the case of Lawrence Martin versus J. J. McDonald, for damages for being shot in the back while in the latter's saloon at Swan River last December, the jry was out six hours and returned a verdict for Martin, fixing the damages at $600. The case of Charles Miller, ex-county treasurer, accused of defaulting, was called. Two jurors were examined, and then the court adjourned to July.

Assessor's Books Come In.

County Auditor Halden is already beginning to receive the assessors' books distributed among the various assessor districts in St. Louis county previous to May 1, last. There were fifty books issued and about twelve of these have already been returned to the auditor. Under the state law the assessors' books must all be in by the second Monday in July after which the county board of equalization will have its sitting.

LOCAL SOCIETY MAY BUY BONDS

Modern Samaritans Are Likely to Purchase Some of Last Issue.

The Modern Samartains, one of the prominent fraternal insurance societies of the state, which had its organization in Duluth, is considering the proposition of buying from $5,000 to $10,000 worth of the $375,000 bond issue that has been authorized by the city for water and gas extensions and improvements.

The society is already the largest local holder of Duluth city bonds, having purchased $5000 worth of previous issues with money from the organization's reserve fund, and none have ever been purchased below par. The city bonds have always been considered a good investment by the Modern Samaritans and it is stated on good authority that the purchase of additional bonds is very likely to be authorized and made within a few days.

CHINESE BOY A VALEDICTORIAN

Albuquerque, N. M., June 29.—A Chinese boy, Sam Hoe Kee, aged 16 years, was among the graduates at the Albuquerque high school. He was a prominent figure among the American boys and girls, and he is so brainy that he was made the valedictorian.

Here are some of the things he said in his address:

"We may never study within the walls of a school again, but we have not finished our education, and we never shall; for, unlike pleasures, joys, sorrows or sufferings which sooner or later must come to an end, education reaches higher than Jacob's ladder, and broader than space itself.

"We have completed but a given course. As yet we have accomplished nothing wonderful, nevertheless the years through which we are passing constitute, perhaps, the most important period of our existence. On it much of our later life depends; for life has been often and very aptly likened to a building, and our early years to the foundation thereof. We must needs build a life foundation, broad and firm.

"Our mental and moral possibilities are just unfolding. As the future beckons us on, let us follow with undaunted courage. Let us not be deceived into thinking that sunshine and fame are waiting at our command. There will be disappointments. But let us nevertheless push steadily forward to the object for which we aim:

"But, above all, let us have a lofty purpose. There is no effort of science or of art that may not be excelled, no depth of philosophy that cannot be deeper sounded, no flight of the imagination that may not be passed by strong and soaring wings."

"True wealth is not summed up in dollars and cents. 'There is nothing,' says Milton, 'that makes men rich and strong but that which they carry inside of them. Wealth is of the heart, not of the hand.'"

MINISTER PRAISES WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

Denver, Col., June 29.—During the delivery of his sermon at the Central Presbyterian church a few days ago the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Coyle made the statement that nothing on earth but death or President Roosevelt can keep Mr. Bryan from being the next President of the United States. The audience broke into subdued applause.

Dr. Coyle in the course of his sermon told of an incident which he had read recently in a missionary paper. "It was written by a missionary who had been many years in Japan," said Dr. Coyle "and was to the effect that William Jennings Bryan had been invited to a great dinner during his stay in Japan by the governor of one of the provinces. Mr. Bryan politely and firmly declined, saying: 'I cannot accept your invitation. I always go to church on the Lord's Day.' The result was that the governon recalled the invitation and went to church with Mr. Bryan."

It was after relating this story that Dr. Coyle made the remark that caused the applause. "It was not a part of my regular sermon," said Dr. Coyle subsequently, "but in illustrating the very general recognition of the duties of mankind to the Almighty I told the incident about Mr. Bryan, which, I have no doubt is true. I meant what I said —that nothing but death or the candidacy of Roosevelt for the second term can keep Bryan out of the presidential chair."

HAD NO DRESS SUIT.

Old Time Friend of President Refused Invitation to Dinner.

Washington, June 29.—President Roosevelt had an unusual experience yesterday. An invitation which he extended to a caller to take dinner with him at the White House was declined. John Willis of Glasgow, Mont., was the man who rejected the invitation. He is an old-time friend of President Roosevelt. They formerly ranched together on the Little Missouri river.

Willis, accompanied by Thomas Everett of Harlem, Mont., called on the president with Senator Carter to discuss what they maintained were the dilatory tactics of the engineers of the reclamation service on the Milk River project in Montana. They said the engineers had been engaged four years on the work, and had not finished it, although they thought it ought to have been done in six months.

When the president extended to Willis his dinner invitation, Willis pleaded he could not accept it, because he did not have a dress suit. The president assured him that need not worry him, but Willis was obdurate. The president said he would be glad to entertain him in a suit of buckskin, but Willis said that he knew what was proper, and that while he would be glad to join the president in a horseback ride, he could not think of going to the White House for dinner in anything but a dress suit.

STEEL TRUST MEN CANNOT TAKE GIFTS.

Pittsburg, June 29.—Officials of the steel trust have been watching with interest the revelations of "graft" among employes of coal railroads, and the result is an order just issued which deeply interests every employe of the United States Steel corporation.

Under this order instant dismissal will be the fate of any employe of the steel trust who accepts a gift of any kind from any person, firm or corporation which does business with the trust or with any of its subsidiary companies.

It is announced in the order that it applies to Christmas or any other holiday gifts, wedding gifts, birthday presents and every other "honorarium" that can be thought of.

BURGLAR BETRAYED BY HIS FOOTPRINTS.

Los Angeles, June 29.—Roy Vaughan, aged 12 years, who lives with his parents near the corner of Tenth and Flower streets, is under arrest charged with burglary.

Roy has been wayward for some time and played "hookey." With nothing to do except stay away from home during school hours, he soon got into bad company and became the leader of a regular wild west gang of young roughs.

The burglary was traced to young Vaughan by the detectives in a peculiar way. The boy, who robbed Mrs. Jennie Giles's room stepped on a suit case in the room. His feet were bare and damp and left an impression. The impression was measured, and when the boys were caught their feet were measured, and Vaughan's exactly fitted the measurements of the track on the suit case.

Alex Roberts Gets Contract.

The contract for the additional two stories to the Lenox hotel and the four-story wing addition at the rear of the main building was awarded yesterday afternoon to Alex Roberts. The contract does not include the plumbing, tiling or finishing. When complete the improvement will cost about $65,000. The additional stories and the wing will increase the hotel's capacity by 100 rooms.

CONCERNING WOMEN

A charming church wedding took place last evening at the Lester Park Methodist Episcopal church when Miss Sybil Benight became the bride of Edward Hugh Pugh. The wedding took place from the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Neimeyer of Lester Park.

The church was decorated in the daisy colors, great masses of green being used, the lights being shaded in yellow and white, simulating the petals of daisies. At 8:30 o'clock the wedding music was played by the orchestra, and the bridal party entered the church. The ushers, Sidney McPhail and John Lamb, entered first and were followed by six little flower girls walking by twos. They were Mabel and Ruth Neimeyer, Helen Jenswold, Clara Shaver, Evelyn Le Tourneau and Amy Ogilvie. They were gowned in white, and carried baskets of daisies. The maid of honor, Miss Dana VanVliet, and the bridesmaid, Miss Encia Buswell, of Mankato, entered next, walking together, and the bride came last, alone. They were met at the altar by Mr. Pugh, with his best man, John T. Pugh, and the service was read by Rev. Charles Fox Davis.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white chiffon over silk and carried a shower bouquet of white daisies. In her veil a dainty cluster of small flowers were caught. The maids wore dainty gowns of chiffon over yellow and carried white lilacs.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Mr. and Mrs. Pugh's newly prepared home at 1124 East Second street. The decorations throughout the rooms were in pink and white, except the dining room, where the daisy decorations were again used. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Pugh were Mrs. T. M. Pugh, mother of the groom, and Mrs. Charles Neimeyer. At the punch bowl Miss Emma Longstreet presided, and in the dining room Mrs. Ida M. Trux and Miss Gertrude Carey were in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Pugh left for a short wedding trip. The bride's going away gown was of a gray French suiting, trimmed in baby Irish lace and touches of corn color. They will be at home at 1124 East Second street.

One of the gifts to the bride was a D. A. R. pin from the members of Greysolon duLhut chapter, of which she is a member.

NEW YORK WEDDING.

Ceremony Uniting Miss Searle and A. K. Shoup Very Pretty.

The following account of the wedding of Miss Esther Searle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Searle, formerly of this city, now of New York, taken from the New York Mail, will be of much interest to local society. The wedding took place Thursday of last week:

"One of the pretty weddings of the past week was that of Miss Esther Scott Searle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin E. Searle, of 51 West Eighty-first street, to Albert Harvey Shoup of Greensburg, Pa., which took place at the Church of the Divine Paternity, Thursday evening.

"The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Searle, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Louise Ellis of Munson; Miss Helen Moore of Holyoke, Miss Frances Clary of Williamsburg, and Miss Rachel Harris of Worcester, Mass., classmates of the bride, who was one of this year's graduates of Smith college.

"Frank P. Shoup, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Charles Lark, Edwin Greene, Joseph Keffer and William Brendlinger of New York.

"The bride wore a beautiful gown of white chiffon and point duchess lace, and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids were in pink chiffon and carried bouquets of pink roses.

"The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Frank Oliver Hall, and was followed by a reception at the Majestic hotel. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers, and the bridal pair received many beautiful presents.

"Mr. and Mrs. Shoup will reside at Greensburg and be 'at home' to their friends after Sept. 1."

Here for Vacation.

Duluth is entertaining two of the young women who have made a name for themselves throughout the country. Miss Adelaide Thurston, the delightful actress that Duluth claims for her own, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer of West Duluth.

Mrs. Fleming L'Engie of New York, formerly Miss Rebecca McKenzie, who can sing Scotch ballads to the complete satisfaction of a Scotchman, and who is widely known, especially for her ballad singing, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. McKenzie, of Hunter's Park.

Events of Interest.

Miss Patrick will entertain tomorrow in honor of Mrs. F. A. Patrick. A large number of guests have been invited to meet Mrs. Patrick who is one of last month's brides.

The wedding of Miss Edith McComber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. McComber and March C. Williams will take place this evening at the home of the bride's parents, 1531 East Fifth street.

Recital.

An interesting vocal recital was given last evening by the pupils of Mrs. A. Brosted, at her home, 27 West Fourth street. A large number of guests were present and enjoyed the carefully prepared program. Assisting were Miss Edith Harrington, violin, and Miss Lena Cassmir, reader. The accompanist was Miss Mabel Harrington. A particularly pleasing number was "For All Eternity," by Mascheroni, and "Swallows," by Cowen, sung by Miss Eva Polinski, with a violin obligato. Those taking part were: Misses Jessie Freeman and Mary Whitcomb, Gertrude Witz, Ida Baker, Lena Finklestein, Sarah Walt, Paula Roy, Lena Azinski, Eva Polinski, Sarah Salnovitz and Miss Sharpless.

Personal Mention.

What Retail Markets Offer

Sweet corn, $1 per dozen.
Texas peaches, 30 cents a basket.
Red raspberries, 15 cents a pint box.
Watermelons, 45 cents each.
Spring broilers, 35 cents a lb.
Lamb and veal in prime condition.

A market that shows all the delicacies for which one could wish is what will confront the Saturday shopper and there is no excuse for every family not living in delight with a series of three meals a day that offer variety and deliciousness, providing that the house wife in spite of the Chicago graduates, is not trying to pay rent and fuel and cater in Mrs. Rorer style all on $10 a week. If you have spring broilers once each week the earning capacity of the head of the family must be in spite of all the experiments made or to be made, greater than a double five, in fact it might seem better to do without broilers until you had a dividend paying lump of stock.

The first of the red raspberries are in and their woolly lusciousness taste better with cream than most anything else. The summer apples, green and small are here ready for pies. They sell for $1 a peck.

The EVENING STORY.

RODDY GOES TO THE THEATER

By Ulyss Rogers.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

A kind-hearted, bald-headed old gentleman came into the office a few days ago, and was so delighted with the smart office boy, Lobbs, that he gave him a dollar to go to the theater.

That evening there was a great preparation in the Lobbses' household, the result of which was that the literary idol of the hearth eventually sallied forth radiant in his best suit. On his way out he passed the cage containing his pet tame rat.

"It seems a shame to leave you, doesn't it, Roddy, old man?" he said, and he took the animal from its cage and fondled it in his hands.

Roddy's reply was to run up his master's sleeve and settle snugly somewhere in the recesses of Lobbs' waistcoat.

An hour and a half later Lobbs' raven-coated cranium adorned the front row of the first balcony, and Roddy peeped out from behind the boy's glowing necktie, as expectant of what was to follow as was his master.

The play commenced, and Lobbs, his chin resting upon the iron rail, was enthralled. Suddenly a piercing shriek from a box beneath rent the heated atmosphere.

In a moment consternation reigned supreme.

"Joe the Bruiser," who was just about to murder the hero of the piece, paused half way and looked round to see what was the matter; the manager rushed out from the wings, and the orchestra ceased their weird music, without which no stage murder could be satisfactorily accomplished. Everybody in the parquet rose, and the gallery gods mounted each other's shoulders and peered forth to see.

A lady in evening dress had fainted, and two gentlemen in the same box were slashing away with stick and umbrella, apparently at invisibility. They hit it every time, and nothing else, but still weren't satisfied, and invisibility didn't seem to mind.

Their game was a mystery to all the audience, save one—our genius Lobbs. At the first glimpse of the battle in the box he had suspected what was afoot, and instinctively his hand went to his waistcoat. Roddy was gone.

With a yell, Lobbs sealed the iron bar and prepared to descend one of the supports leading to the circle below.

"Don't hurt him," he cried; "he won't bite. I'll soon catch him."

But the sight of Lobbs' unceremonious performance only created a wilder panic. The impression went abroad that some dangerous animal had got loose, and that the keeper was in chase. People rushed for the doors; a man yelled "Lion!" another shrieked "Fire!" and pandemonium was loose.

Meantime, Roddy, all unconscious of the commotion he had caused, yet wondering greatly at the hostile reception accorded him, left the first box he had visited, and, clinging to the curtains, rounded into the adjacent one. The result was to send a fat lady into hysterics, whilst her husband, emitting oaths of sulphuric hue, hurriedly dragged his spouse from the place.

Roddy appropriated the box, took up a position on the cushioned ledge in front, and settled down to enjoy the play. His meditations were interrupted by a walking stick that whizzed past his nose. Roddy tapped his whisker reflectively.

"Seems a strange place this," he remarked to himself.

Immediately after a program skimmed past on the other side.

"Highly dangerous, too," he added, glancing round to follow the course of the book with his eye.

Then an avalanche of missiles descended, and Roddy became really frightened. He skimmed along the fronts of the boxes, and everywhere he went he was met with shrieks from the women and unkind epithets from the men. In his fright he dodged between the legs of a big man who was trying to stamp on him, scampered up the back of a lady in evening dress, and ran across her bare shoulders.

Then down double-quick time in the parquet. A dozen men took up the chase. His only refuge was to make for the orchestra. As he climbed the rail the conductor received him by fiercely jabbing him with his baton; the bass fidler slashed wildly with his bow; the flutist slung his flute madly among the players, chipped a piece out of the cornet player's nose, and embedding the whistle in the recesses of the big drum.

Roddy escaped all and made for the viola player, a pale-faced nervous youth, who, forgetting everything but the peril of the moment, banged away at the fugitive with his fiddle, smashing the bridge and strings with a loud report like a pistol shot, and impaling the instrument on an electric light. Panic seized the musicians, and in a body they scaled the barrier and tumbled pell-mell over the footlights onto the stage.

Thither followed Roddy, now blind with excitement, and in a trice the boards were cleared. Then, mad with fright, the rat ran up a canvass tree and disappeared into the flies.

There he remained for some minutes, perched on a piece of scenery, his little heart thumping in a wild tumult against his ribs, and his bright pink eyes rapidly glancing right and left, and up and down, in mortal bewilderment and terror.

Suddenly he was startled by a voice behind him. "Roddy, old fellow; poor old chap. What did they do to him?"

Roddy knew the voice, and turning, saw the beaming face of Lobbs, who had been following his pet in the wild race round the theater, and who had now, at the risk of his life, climbed his way up to his pet's refuge.

The rodent knew his master, and ran along the ledge to him. A moment more, and a tender hand was stroking his ruffled fur, and then Roddy slipped from the embrace and snuggled down in Lobbs' breast. Roddy has renounced theater-going.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Storm Does Damage in Central Part of Towner County.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—At 7 o'clock Thursday evening a bad wind storm struck the central part of Towner county, passing near Bisbee and Considine. Wires are badly deranged and details cannot be secured, but several buildings were destroyed, and one man, name not reported, is said to have had his back broken in the wreck of his house near Bisbee. The day was one of the most oppressive of the year.

Fargo—The United States officials may assist the state officials in the enforcement of the state game laws. Last fall there were reports of heavy shipments of game by men of the Twin Cities and Chicago, who owned game preserves in this state; also of shipments of game killed on state reservations. The shipments were made from this state into and through Minnesota, and Game Warden Fullerton of Minnesota has been here as a witness before the United States grand jury. It is thought he has some information regarding the men and the disposal of the game.

Too much prosperity in this state is assigned as the reason for the proposed discontinuance of the recruiting station in Fargo, with branches in many of the smaller towns of this section. Maj. Vodges, in charge, says there is so much work that men cannot be induced to enter the service. The stations have been operated for months, and the showing has been vry poor.

The appeal in the case of Frederick Nurenberger, the aged veteran convicted of conspiracy to defraud in homestead entries, has been perfected by Attorney Wolfe of Wahpetaon and will soon be argued before the circuit court of appeals. Nurenberger secured bail soon after his conviction.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Custer—A feud between ranchmen in Custer county has resulted in the arrest of Thomas L. Bottom, a leading stockman, on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

The complaining witness is John E. Reddick, also a man of prominence. The feud between the two was made more bitter by the trial of a case which was decided against Bottom. Some horses which were involved in the suit were awarded to Reddick, and Judge McGee also granted an injunction restraining Bottom from injuring cattle belonging to Reddick or in any way interfering with the horses which had been in dispute between them.

It is charged that on the day following the serving of the injunction papers upon Bottom, he shot at Reddick, cutting the latter's clothing and slightly wounding him in the side. Bottom waived his preliminary hearing and was bound over.

Tyndall—The authorities are firmly convinced that the town has a firebug of an unusually dangerous character. In a brief space of time more than a dozen attempts have been made to burn buildings on the principal business street.

The most recent attempt was the setting fire to a building occupied by the photograph gallery of B. W. Burnett and the music store of F. A. Smith. When the firemen arrived the interior of the structure was a mass of flames and fire was shooting from the roof. By hard work the firemen succeeded in preventing the fire spreading to adjoining buildings. It is the general opinion that the fire was of incendiary origin, several prior attempts having been made to burn the same structure.

A suspected person is being watched, and if another attempt is made to set fire to buildings an arrest may result.

Pierre—A report reached here from Bovine, on Bad river, of the death of Mrs. Thomas Hill, a small son, and Clarence Johnson, a hired man. The deaths occurred in an old well. The boy evidently fell into the well and the man went down after him, and was overcome with gas, and the woman met the same fate in attempting to rescue the child and the man. All were found dead in the well, which was full of gas.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Escanaba—One woman was struck by a lightning bolt, a fire which caused the loss of $5,000 was started, and three other buildings were damaged early Thursday morning in one of the most severe electrical storms that have ever visited this district. While preparing breakfast at her home Mrs. Charles Anderson, aged 48, was struck by lightning and all her clothing torn from her body. She was severely burned and there is but little hope of her recovery. Pieces of her dress were found in all parts of the room. A fire was started by the lightning and burned the upper portion of the building. Two residences and a church were struck by lightning, but the damage was small.

Sault Ste. Marie—The game warden's department has seized several thousand immature lake trout and whitefish caught by Simon Johnson and others at Point Iroquois, in Whitefish bay. Game Warden Chapman says a campaign of vigorous prosecution is to be started all along the lakes to wipe out lawless fishermen. Johnson has been apprehended in violating the fish laws before.

Marquette—With an appropriation of $400 made by the common council, following the grant of $1,500 by the county board, a total of nearly $3,000 has been raised for the relief of the sufferers from the recent forest fires in the country to the southeast of this city, the citizens of Marquette and vicinity having contributed nearly $1,000 in cash and merchandise. In connection with these forest fires, there have been published in the outside papers numerous statements at variance with the facts; some have greatly exaggerated the devastation wrought, and others, in consequence of investigations in territory of comparatively limited scope, have sought to minimize the damage.

It is not true that "millions of dollars' werth of property" was destroyed or that "upwards of 2,000 families were rendered homeless," as has been stated; but on the other hand, assertions that $100,000 would cover the loss and that no particular hardship had been occasioned are fully as ridiculous. A compilation of reports received from various portions of Upper Michigan shows that widespread havoc was, indeed, wrought. Individually, the losses, measured from the standpoint of dollars and cents, were not particularly large, but they were so many in number that in the aggregate the property damage amounted to a distressingly large total. In many cases the losses were absolute, and in these instances the blow dealt was one from which it will take years to recover.

Stephenson—Jule Bawyn's saloon at Stephenson was entered by burglars the other night and about $20 in money and considerable beer was the harvest gathered. Entrance was secured by boring holes into a panel on the side door close to the lock, enabling one of the burglars to insert his hand and then turn the key. Judging by the amount of beer taken the marauders had spent considerable time in looting the place. A brace and bit and other tools were obtained at Demelio & Son's blacksmith shop, which also was entered, and the tools were found near the railroad water tank the next morning.

Swell Knickerbocker Suits, ages 7 to 15. Saturday's Special at Kenny & Anker, $4.75.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Bemidji Man Knocked Senseless and a House Damaged.

Bemidji, Minn., June 29.—Lightning struck the home of Frank Gagnon, Minnesota avenue and Fifth street, shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning, doing considerable damage to the building and knocking the hostler, "Menominee Joe" unconscious.

Joe was standing at the pump near the house when the flash came, and although he was not touched by the bolt, the shock knocked him down and he did not regain consciousness until anxious friends had worked over him for nearly half an hour. He is feeling all right now, although he is a little weak.

DENEEN FOR SENATORS BY POPULAR VOTE.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 29.—Governor Deneen of Illinois has joined Governor Cummins in the movement to elect United States senators by popular vote. He wrote today that Illinois would be represented at the convention of states in Des Moines to promote the movement. Governor Beckham of Kentucky and Mr. Perley of Alabama also stated that their states would be represented. Governor Terrell of Georgia will refer the matter to the state legislature.

WOODEN TANK COLLAPSES FLOODING BUILDING

Twelve Thousand Gallons of Water Pour Down Through Factory.

Driver and Team Nearly Meet Death Under Falling Debris.

The huge wooden water tank on top of the wholesale building at 223-227 South Fifth avenue west, gave way today, and crashed down to the ground, letting loose 12,000 gallons of water, which flooded the five story building from roof to basement, and thoroughly drenched the people employed there.

The building was occupied by H. Helstein, manufacturer of men's furnishings, and between forty and fifty girls and boys were employed by him.

The tank was a huge wooden structure which was kept filled with water for use in case of fire. It had grown old and rotten in parts, and shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon, the supports gave way without warning. The entire tank seemed to collapse, and fell over the side of the building, carrying with it a part of the roof and a big section of the wall from the upper story at the rear.

One of the drivers for the Blake & Waite Co., had an almost miraculous escape from death. He had been standing with his team in the spot where the tank struck, on the dock at the rear of the building, and scarcely a moment before he had driven away. His team had not gone fifty feet from the spot when the tank fell. The broken timbers would have buried him and the team had he remained half a minute longer in the place where he had been standing.

On the upper floor there was a number of boys and young men, and about thirty girls were working on the floor beneath. As the water came pouring down through the ceilings in a perfect torrent, they fled for the stairways, but before they could escape they were drenched with the water.

A telephone call was sent for the salvage corps by the officer on the beat, but it did not respond promptly, and an alarm was turned in, bringing the whole department to the scene. It was too late to save much of the stock, however, and the loss will probably be very heavy, as the goods were all lying exposed to the water.

This is the second time within a month that the stock has suffered from water. Mr. Helstein was burned out before leaving his old store, on Second avenue west, but in that case his loss was covered by insurance.

Once since he has been in the new building there has been an alarm of fire from his place, but it proved to be a false alarm, so that the department has been called to his factory three times within a month.

This time there will be no insurance on the stock, although it is possible that that he will have grounds for a damage suit against the owners of the building.

The stock of the Blake & Waite company, next door, was not damaged.

JOHN MILLEN TESTIFIES

Denies Absolutely Any Diversion of Logs or Money.

John Millen, who was on the stand yesterday afternoon in his own behalf and under cross examination by the attorneys for John McAlpine, the plaintiff in the $150,000 damage case, testified positively that during the partnership and the transactions of the McAlpine Lumber company there was never any diversion of a single log or a single cent. He backed up his claim with the evidence produced in the way of the records of the operations of the company.

Mr. Millen claimed that the McAlpine logs, 2,500,000 feet in all, were the only outside logs sawed at the West Duluth mill of Alger Smith & Co. He claimed that these logs were kept in a separate boom, were sawed separate from the mill company's logs.

Mr. Millen further testified that Mr. McAlpine practically conducted the logging operations. While he, Millen financed the project. He alleged that the McAlpine Lumber company lost more than $40,000 in logging the Richardson & Avery tract and that Mr. McAlpine, instead of having $150,000 due him for over-run should withstand his share of the loss of put up $20,000.

Elmer Whyte, former secretary of the McAlpine Lumber company was recalled for cross examination this morning.

TRANSOM FELL ON HIM.

Jacob Gruesen is Severely Cut and Bruised While Adjusting One.

Jacob Gruesen, the jeweler, was severely injured in his place of business late yesterday by the falling of a transom. Mr. Gruesen was trying to adjust it and presumed it to be fastened with hinges, and it fell, hitting him squarely on the head.

His head was badly cut by the glass and his coat was torn. It was necessary to take four stitches in his head and three in his eye. He was also badly bruised but is able to be around, today, just the same.

CITY BRIEFS.

The Silberstein & Bondy company has an opening for an experienced notion saleswoman.

Judge Cant has confirmed the sale of Lake county land belonging to J. W. Miller & Co. The purchaser was R. J. Ryan and the price paid was $1,750. The Miller company is insolvent, the sale being made through Simon Clark, assignee.

A stipulation has been filed in the district court for a dismissal of the cases of the city of Virginia against Mary Spellacy and against Walter H. Heagle. The cases were brought to the district court on an appeal by the defendants from the judgment of the municipal court at Virginia.

The young people of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church will conduct the services at the Star of Hope mission this evening at 8 o'clock. Ed Ranck will speak and Miss Uisred will sing.

Stephen D. Becker, a laborer, arrested on a complaint sworn out by his wife, who claimed that he was intoxicated and had broken the furniture, was released yesterday in municipal court, on his wife's request, after promising better behavior in future. They left the court room arm in arm.

Several small sewer contracts were let at the meeting of the board of public works held this morning.

BEFORE THE "FOURTH"

BE INDEPENDENT

The days before the "Fourth" are always the greatest suit-selling days in the year and The Columbia is well prepared to supply the Men and Boys of Duluth with the best ready-to-wear garments made in America.

Suits for Men.

We show the very latest Suits in ROYAL GRAYS, in either two or three-piece Summer Suits, at $10 to $22.50.

BLUE SERGES still retain their old popularity, and we have on hand a line unequalled for style and quality, at $10, $12.50, $15, $16.50, $18, $20 and $25.

The coats of suits selling at from $15 to $25, are 32 inches in length, according to the prevailing extreme fashion.

Specials For the "Fourth" A big lot of 3-piece Summer Suits selected from small lots and from former $12.50 to $20 garments—many of them not cut in the extreme long style, we now offer all at ----- $10

Fancy worsteds and cheviots of all descriptions are in this lot.

Last season's Outing Suits are being sacrificed at a still smaller price. They are mostly of the former $15 denomination and the trousers alone are worth nearly as much as we ask for both coat and trouser. As the lot is small we have added to it and are selling at $5, every single suit in the house, which is not of this season's make. $5

Suits for Boys.

Boys are particularly anxious to celebrate the Glorious Fourth dressed in their best. They prefer Columbia Suits because of the grace and dignity which Columbia Suits lend to the appearance of a young fellow. The satisfaction derived from wearing these suits is due to their superior style and to the strength of materials and workmanship, which fits them to withstand the strenuous wear and tear of the healthy normal American boy.

Here is a stock from which every boy, rich or poor, can be suited. The best of all $1.50 Suits, and the best of all $10 Suits, and the best of all between—prices.

In order to give all boys a chance to appear at the "White City" in new togs, we offer two special lots before the "Fourth."

$1.98 for former $2.50, $3 and $3.50 Boys' Suits in all the different styles a-going this season, including single and double-breasted two-piece suits in plain and Norfolk fashion.

$2.98 for a lot of former $3.50 to $6 Boys' Suits, in Russian, Sailor, Norfolk and belted coat styles. Reduced for no other reason than that we want to do a little extra turn for our boy customers before July the Fourth—and you know Columbia Reductions mean exactly what they say.

CHILDREN'S WASH SUITS—In an endless variety of styles and patterns, ranging in prices from 75 cents up to $6.00.

BEMIDJI WINNER FOR THIRD TIME

Captures the Hose Race and Coupling Contest at Warren.

Warren, Minn., June 29.—Bemidji is now champion of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association. In a hotly contested run she won the banner hose race in the tournament being held in this village.

This makes the third time that Bemidji has won the banner, and now it becomes her property for good, and will be brought home to grace the walls of the fire house.

The race was exciting and full of thrills. Bemidji made the distance in 23 3-5 seconds, and Warren covered the ground in the second best time, one-fifth of a second slower.

Bemidji also won first place in the coupling contest, Ray Dennis doing the speedy work. His time was 3 2-3 seconds. Bemidji and Crookston are tied for second in the contest, the time being 4 3-5 seconds.

KLOMAN MINE DEAL RECALLED

By Suit Against Officers of Flagler Iron & Steel Company.

Negaunee, Mich., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Suit has been started in the United States court at Chicago by Alfred S. Costello, R. H. Costello, Harvey Cheney and Robert Cheney, all of Hartford, Conn., against Harvey K. Flagler, president; William P. Dickinson, treasurer, and other officers and stockholders of the Flagler Iron and Steel company. It is sought to recover $30,000, and it is alleged that that amount was obtained from the plaintiffs by the sale of stock by means of false representations. The litigation recalls the Kloman mine deal of two years ago.

The Kloman is an abandoned property that was worked out many years ago. It is located at Republic, in the western end of Marquette county, and through the purchase of the stock of the old company at a nominal figure Marquette and Republic men, among them E. J. Mapes and J. H. Primeau, came into possession of the tract, believing that it still had possibilities of becoming valuable. Subsequently they entered into an agreement with the Flagler people for the sale of the mine. The Flagler company at once took steps to reopen the property. Pumps were put in, the workings were unwatered, and there was every evidence of a bona fide intention to resume operations. However, in many minds there was a suspicion of the plans of the Flagler Iron and Steel company, and it was greatly augmented when the officers of the concern sent forth alluring circulars in which the Kloman was played up as a very valuable asset, whereas it was generally known in this region that the mine was in reality merely an abandoned scram.

The Kloman Iron company, or some of its representatives, received $10,000 from the Flagler company, but the stockholders became involved in litigation before the deal went through, and before the Flagler company went up, for it is now defunct, having gone out of existence several months ago. J. H. Primeau sued E. J. Mapes for an accounting. The company's affairs are in the courts, and are said to be badly tangled. Meanwhile, Mark Elliott, clerk of Marquette county, is the receiver, though he says the funds in his hands are hardly worth mentioning. The equipment at the old mine has been seized to partially satisfy liens secured by creditors of the Flagler company, and the location is again deserted.

The many imitations of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve that are now before the public prove it the best. Ask for DeWitt's. Good for burns, scalds, chaffed skin, eczema, tetter, cuts, bruises, boils and piles. Sold by all druggists.

THE IRON ORE TRADE.

Movement of Ore Continues to Increase in Volume.

Cleveland, June 29.—The Iron Trade Review says: Ore interests report frequent calls from furnaces which find they have not bought heavily enough to cover the unusually large requirements of the present season, or which are seeking to change their mixtures. Although there is practically no ore to be had, some relief is being afforded them, and the situation has been materially relieved during the last few weeks by the large number of furnaces out of blast in this district. The movement of ore continues to increase and July and August should see at least 12,000,000 tons brought down. Prices are unchanged on the basis of $4.25 Old Range Bessemer.

BRIDE AND GROOM KILLED.

Philadelphia, June 29.—Four persons, two of them a bride and bridegroom of a day, were killed last night on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad at Gwynne, near this city, by an excursion train which ran down their carriage at the station. Two of the victims were Thomas Jaquett and his wife of North Wales, Pa. The names of the other couple have not yet been learned.

NEIGHBORS IN QUARREL

Small Boy and Collie Dog Precipitate Free for All.

Last Round of Scrap Fought Out in Police Court.

A Scotch collie dog and a small boy precipitated a family row in the vicinity of Twenty-fifth avenue west and Eleventh street, which ended up in the municipal court this morning, and half of the residents of the little settlement in that neighborhood were in court as participants in the controversy, or as witnesses.

The affair took place last Sunday afternoon. The boy, Edward Anderson, was driving some cows home, when the dog, which belongs to Mrs. Susie Topliff, approached him. The boy says it bit him on the heel, and he tried to scare it away. It came back and tore a hole in his trousers with his teeth.

Then the trouble began. The boy threw a stone at the dog and threatened to kill it. Mrs. Topliff's children heard the threat and summoned their mother. She gave the boy a lecture, and, according to his story, called him a "dirty Swede."

F. W. Norquist happened along, and he told the boy to go home. He claims that Mrs. Topliff told him she didn't want him "sticking his nose in," and called him also a "dirty Swede."

He stood with his hands in his pockets, surveying the scene, and his calmness enraged Mrs. Topliff the more. She said she had a good mind to slap his face, according to his evidence, and Norquist told her to go ahead. He claims that she took him at his word and slapped him.

At this juncture Anderson, the boy's father, appeared and, according to the evidence given in court this morning, Mrs. Topliff also slapped his face and called him a "dirty Swede." It is claimed that Mrs. Topliff then picked up a stake, about four feet long, and was going to strike Anderson, when he grabbed it and then held her arms.

That is his story, but Mrs. Topliff claims that he kicked her and pulled her hair.

Mrs. Topliff got to the assistant city attorney first, and swore out a warrant for Andersons' arrest on the charge of assault.

All the harrowing details were related in Judge Windom's court this morning, and the case occupied the entire morning session. Judge Windom was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that an assault had been committed, and he discharged the prisoner.

GOING TO TOWER.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Will Have Pleasant Trip to the Range.

Members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. will hold their weekly outing, Saturday, to Tower, Minn.,

The party will go on the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, in a private coach, leaving the Union depot at 7:30, and reaching Tower about 11 o'clock. A steamboat will meet the party and take them to the Indian reservation where the Indian school is located. The day will be spent in fishing, baseball, and swimming. There is a splendid place for swimming and the fellows are sure to have a good time. The party will leave at 3:50, getting back to the city at 7 p. m.

HARDSHIPS OF MISSIONARIES

In Tibet and China—Awful Experiences of a Woman.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 29.—Dr. Susan Carson-Rijnhart, a graduate of Drake University Medical school, of this city, and a missionary of the Christian church to Tibet, spent two years in the worst section of Tibet hunting for her husband, from whom she was separated in that country while traveling to the heart of Tibet. Failing to find him, she reluctantly retraced her steps to Outer China to a Christian missionary. Word has now been received that she has married Rev. A. Moyes of Ta-Chien-Lu, China, who was the first white man she saw after escaping from Tibet.

Eight years ago Mrs. Rijnhart left with her husband for the Lhassa territory in Inner Tibet, with their baby, born in China. The baby died suddenly one night on the Dang Lang desert, and was buried in its mother's medical case in the shifting sands, with a stone brought from a mountain to prevent the wild beasts from digging it up. Sorrowfully they traveled on to carry the Gospel to the heathen of Tibet. On a mountain they paused on the border of the forbidden land. Rev. Mr. Rijnhart descended the mountain to go to a neighboring Chinese village for food. At the foot of the mountain he waved some sign to his wife, but which she did not understand. As he seemed not to be in trouble or distress, she waited. He went on to the village, disappearing aroundva rock, and she has never seen him since.

After waiting for two days, she descended the mountain and went through the village in search of her husband. She was set upon by dogs and nearly killed. Barely escaping with her life, she met new difficulties in the hostility of the Chinese and was robbed of all she had. Her life was saved by a Chinaman who had been converted on the border of China by the Chinaman claiming the woman as his wife. Together they traveled through the country, meeting obstacles continually, but, after a long search, reaching the Christian missions at Ta-Chien-Lu. Rushing into the mission, she asked for a some one who could speak English, and the first to greet her was Rev. A. Moyes.

After weeks of recuperation in the hospital she returned to America and, through the department of state at Washington interested the Danish government in searching for her husband. No one would venture into the savage country and so armed with passports and guides, she set out herself and spent two years unavailing, retracing every foot of the territory they had traveled to the rock where her husband had disappeared. Through the village they went, making the most thorough search that could be made in a hostile country. Finally convinced that he had been murdered, but with no hope of bringing punishment to the guilty, she returned to the English mission at Ta-Chien-Lu to take up her missionary duties, after a separation from her husband of eight years. Word has been received now that she has been married to Rev. A. Moyes, the first to greet her after her perilous voyage through the heart of China.

NINE-YEAR-OLD GIRL IS BRUTALLY ASSAULTED.

Delavan, Wis., June 29.—In a frenzy of anger, summer resorters from Chicago, New York and other cities joined yesterday with the farmers and citizens of Delavan in a mad hunt for the assailant of the 9-year-old daughter of Charles Maine, who lives on the farm of Reuben Bristol, a mile from here.

Wednesday night the mother and hired man came to town for medicine for the girl, who was supposed to be near death of some ailment. When the mother and the servant returned they found the girl in bed and the room was spattered with blood and the child horribly lacerated. The father and brother, standing by the bed, apaprently paralyzed wtih fear, said they were awakened by the screams of the girl. Coming down from their beds, they saw a man with a brown hat, ragged clothes and pimpled and blotched face dash out and disappear.

An operation yesterday upon the girl practically failed, and physicians say she cannot recover. This has increased the frnezy of the people.

Several arrests have been made by the police secretly to avoid lynching, but all suspects proved an alibi.

FILING OF EXCEPTIONS IS CARRIED OVER A DAY

Kansas City, June 29.—Owing to the non arrival from Joplin of Judge Smith McPherson, who has been holding court in that city, the filing of bills of exception in the cases of the Burlington railroad recently convicted of granting concessions and of George L. Thomas, the New York broker and his chief clerk, L. B. Taggert, convicted of securing rates, was postponed today. The matter probably will be taken up tomorrow, when appeal bonds in all the rebates case, so-called, will be formally perfected. A bill of exceptions in the cases of the four meat packing companies, Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Nelson Morris, has already been filed.

SWALLOW IN TROUBLE AGAIN

Slayer of Black Hawk Charged With Stabbing Another Red.

Black River Falls, Wis., June 29.—Jim Swallow, a Winnebago Indian, who some years ago acquired notoriety through his trial for stabbing George Black Hawk to death, is again in jail awaiting the outcome of another cutting on the person of Little Soldier.

Swallow came to the city recently and told a hard luck story and obtained some groceries by the influence of a white man, but when he had his supplies he gave a big dance with firewater accompaniment. A row was started and Little Soldier was badly cut about the face. Swallow's examination is set for July 5, if Little Soldier is able to come as a witness.

THE BUILDING OF RAILWAYS

Progressing on More Extensive Scale Than for Years Passed.

Chicago, June 29.—The Railway Age says: Railway building in the United States is progressing on a more extensive scale than for many years past and the mileage of tracks laid on new lines during the first half of the year is greater htan that of any similar period for the past fifteen years, with the exception of 1902, when 2,314 miles of track were completed from Jan. 1 to June 30. The track laid during the first six monthsi of 1096 aggregates 2,298 miles according to the returns in hand and the indications are that the new mileage for the entire year will exceed that of 1902 and 1903, when 5,684 miles and 5,786 miles, respectively, were completed.

In its issue of March 23 last The Railway Age published a summary showing that over 13,000 miles of new railroad were under construction, and since that time contracts for many hundred miles additional have been awarded. Construction is being pushed in all sections of the country, but the preliminary work of surveying and grading has taken up a good portion of the first six months of the year—particularly in the North and Northwest—and the tracklaying stage has not yet been reached on many of the most important extensions. On other lines slow progress is being made in the work of putting down the track owing to the difficulty of securing rails. The steel mills are overcrowded with orders and the delay in making deliveries is obstructing the work in various localities. Official reports indicate that the grading on many new lines is completed far ahead of the tracklayers, but this work also is being retarded owing to the trouble of securing labor.

PROGRESS VERY SLOW

Attorneys Are Contesting Every Inch in Clark Mine Case.

Defendants Claim Question of Values Is Not an Issue.

The question of relevancy of evidence tending to show the actual value of the Clark mine property on the basis of the ore it contained at the time the Clark Iron company came into possession of it May 29, 1903, precipitated another lively legal fight in Judge Cant's room this morning. The arguments over this one point consumed an hour and a half of time and Judge Cant finally ruled with the Rogers' heirs, the evidence being admitted.

Mr. Richards, counsel for the heirs precipitated the contest by offering to prove that the quantity of ore of assay value mined and shipped from the Leonard mine to April 1, 1906, was 465,594 tons and that since April 1, the shipments for April were 2,686 tons and 200 pounds and during May were 18,664 tons and 240 pounds.

Mr. Baldwin, for the Leonard Iron Mining company, objected to the offer on the ground that it was irrelevant and immaterial. He claimed that it pertained to the accounting and that the issue at this time is whether or not there was any fraud in the transfer of the property.

Mr. Williams, for the Clark Iron company, added to the objection that the offer be limited by excluding the question of the quantity of ore. He claimed that if the case is appealed the appellate court ought not to know the quantity of ore removed. Mr. Williams said the theory of his side is that nothing that has transpired since May 29, 1903, can possibly throw any light on the question of the good faith of the Clark Iron company in the transactions closed that day.

Mr. Richards argued that the ore taken out of the land since May 29, 1903, was in the land previous to that date and that it added to the value of the land.

"When we allege fraud," said he, "we have to prove the fact in such a manner that when brought to the knowledge of the court it will shock the court. This is part of our case. It tends to prove one of the material elements of the case. If there ever was a case that would shock a court of equity we believe this is one. When the ultimate value of the land is shown I have no doubt it will far exceed any estimates that we have placed on it. We will show that the Clark Iron company received a half million dollars from the ore that was shipped off it."

Mr. Richards' statement that the value of the ore is the value of the land started the argument in good earnest. He was supported in his position by Mr. Becklt, associate counsel for the heirs.

Mr. Baldwin took issue on the claim that the market value of the ground was what it was worth as wild land at the time it was deeded and that it was not the actual value based on the ore the land contained. He claimed that if Mr. Richards' contention is true, every garden land sale made in St. Louis county on which ore was afterward discovered, can be overturned.

Mr. Baldwin claimed that if the court finds there was a fraud and sets aside the sale, then there should be an accounting, but not before.

At this juncture Judge Cant remarked that undoubtedly in determining whether the transfer of May 29, 1903, was in good faith on the part of the defendant company, the court must know just what information the company had as to the property on that date. He said it would not do for the heirs to show alone that a blue print purports to show a certain depth of ore, leaving the lands as wild lands, but they would have to show by the people who did the drilling and who made the blue prints that the facts alleged by the prints are true, that they must show the notice the defendants had of the property and reinforce that notice by showing the ore that was there.

Oscar Mitchell, for the Clark Iron company, took the ground that the real question is "what was the value of the property, assuming that the information the Clark Iron company had of it were true." This, Mr. Mitchell claimed, was the true test of values.

"In determining this question," said Judge Cant, "the court will want to know all the information the Clark Iron company had May 29, 1903, from that, aided by the judgment of the best iron ore experts, and I presume you will have them here, to get at the probable value of the ore in the property at that time, and from all sources possible get the value of the property at that time and what the company thought it was worth. That is the only right rule. We cannot limit the plaintiffs to resting on quite such an academic basis as proposed. We must let them show there was an actual value. The general opinion seems to be that there was a mine on the property.

Mr. Baldwin, on behalf of the Leonard Iron Mining company, admitted that Mr. Richards' figures as to the amount of ore shipped from the Leonard mine since July 15, 1903, are correct.

Mr. Cotton, for the American Iron Mining company, moved to strike out the admission on the ground that there was no proof that ore was taken from the Leonard mine was known to be in existence previous to May 29, 1903, to the Clark Iron company or any of the other defendants.

The motion was denied.

Mr. Richards then offered a statement showing the analyses of ore sold and shipped from the Leonard mine to Dec. 31, 1905. Mr. Baldwin's objection on the ground that the offer was incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, was overruled.

Joseph Sellwood was called as a witness for the Rogers heirs. His qualification to sit as an expert witness in matters pertaining to iron ore was readily admitted by the defendants. Mr. Sellwood related his long experience in the ore business and his connections with various companies, including mention of the properties he has explored and developed.

The witness testified as to exploration methods employed on the Mesaba range and corroborated the claim of the heirs that the recognized basis of transactions in ore lands is the mining engineer's blue print. Mr. Sellwood expressed the greatest confidence in the exploration charts made by E. J. Longyear and stated that he knew of a large number of important details that had gone through that were based on the engineer's reports, without any re-checking. He further stated that among the "trade" Mr. Longyear's blue prints are generally regarded as very accurate.

Capt. Sellwood testified that the Chisholm mine was bought on Mr. Longyear's exploration blue print, the payment being $70,000 cash and an additional 10-cent royalty, making a total of 35 cents.

Other properties also accepted without any re-checking of the engineer's charts were the Latonia, the Croxton and the La Rue mines.

Capt. Sellwood said he was familiar with the Clark mine, having explored and opened the property in 1900 and 1901. Most of the ore, he said, had been shown up by test-pitting.

Another legal skirmish followed over Mr. Richards' offer in evidence of a blue print of the Clark mine. The court finally ruled it could be received as showing only the location of the drill holes.

Mr. Sellwood claimed the Clark mine produced Bessemer ore. He gave some general information as to the different grades of ore, and was still on the stand when the noon adjournment was taken.

THE DOCTOR'S WIFE

Agrees With Him About Food.

A trained nurse says: "In the practice of my profession I have found so many points in favor of Grape-Nuts food that I unhesitatingly recommend it to all my patients.

"It is delicate and pleasing to the palate (an essential in food for the sick) and can be adapted to all ages, being softened with milk or cream for babies or the aged when deficiency of teeth renders mastication impossible. For fever patients or those on liquid diet I find Grape-Nuts and albumen water very nourishing and refreshing. This recipe is my own idea and is made as follows: Soak a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with the beaten white of an egg and a spoonful of fruit juice or flavoring. This affords a great deal of nourishment that even the weakest stomach can assimilate without any distress.

"My husband is a physician, and he uses Grape-Nuts himself and orders it many times for his patients

"Personally I regard a dish of Grape-Nuts with fresh or stewed fruit as the ideal breakfast for anyone—well supplied with but one desire, the desire Battle Creek, Mich.

In any case of stomach trouble, nervous prostration or brain fag, a 10-days' trial of Grape-Nuts will work wonders toward nourishing and rebuilding, and in this way ending the trouble. "There's a reason," and trial proves.

RICH MAN IN HARTJE TANGLE

Is Accused in Divorce Case, But Name Kept Secret.

Pittsburg, June 29.—The most desperate attempts are being made to conceal the name of a man, who, it is alleged, was intimate with Mrs. Augustus Hartje, wife of the Pittsburg millionaire, whose suit for divorce is being tried here. This man is said to have visited a hotel with the defendant. His name, however, is known by many. The man is said to be the head of one of the largest department stores in the city. Orders were issued today that his name should not be used in any newspaper account of the case. Hartje was directed to reveal the name, but refused, and the court held he was not in contempt for his declination.

Tomorrow the sensation of the suit is expected. Frederick Brobst, former proprietor of the Hotel Lincoln, and Benjamin Brobst, his son, who formerly was night clerk of the hotel, will testify concerning the alleged visits of Mrs. Hartje and the mysterious man to the Lincoln. It is expected their testimony will make public the name.

Hartje spent most of the day on the stand. While he was in Paris, he said, his wife gave him a capsule, ostensibly to cure a headache, which made him very ill. Doctors saved his life, he testified, after working six hours on him. This is the testimony which was intended to show Mrs. Hartje attempted to poison her husband.

WORK WITH JUVENILES

Probation Officer Makes Interesting Comments in Annual Report.

Urges the Need of Parental Home and Detention House.

The first annual report of Probation Officer Withrow to the board of control of state institutions, which is required by the law of 1905, has been prepared.

In it he reviews the work of the newly established juvenile court under the jurisdiction of Judge Ensign, and makes some interesting and instructive comments on the needs of the work among delinquent children.

Some of the extracts from the report are as follows:

"Some may say that under the juvenile court act we are too lenient, but there is a good reason why children should be given five or six chances, although they have been before the court as often as indicated. The first reason is, for their own good; and the second is, for the good of others. No child should go to the state training school except as a last resort, and when all other means and resources have failed.

"If we make it easy for some boys, they go from bad to worse and are a menace to society, first committing thefts, then robbery, burglary and murder, ending a criminal career on the gallows, as was the case of the Chicago street car bandits. The leaders of a gang are apt to say; 'all they will do with you or me is to bring us before the court and put us on parole, and the next time we do anything we will get out of town before they get onto us or we get caught.' Under such conditions it makes it very difficult for the probation officer and police to cope with such juvenile offenders. There are parents who send their children out to steal, with this injunction, 'Don't let Withrow or the police catch you.' In this way grain, coal and wood have been stolen; and in some of these cases, if the boy was fined when found guilty, nine cases out of ten the parents would pay the fine and the punishment fall where it properly belonged. I am firmly of the opinion that seventy-five per cent of delinquency in children can be traced directly to the bad habits or neglect on the part of their parents.

"I believe the court and public officers will bear me out in the statement that 90 per cent, of the boys and girls who habitually play truant will sooner or later commit a larceny. However, I am of the opinion that fully 75 per cent. of the boys and girls in juvenile court during the past year are not criminals and never will be; and if properly restrained, kindly treated and wisely guided, they will turn out to be as good citizens as those who have never been in court.

"One of the best features of the juvenile court act is the suppression of the offense and the names of the offenders from the columns of the newspapers. Not a single case has been in our papers here except where they were arrested by the police and their names appeared on the police tablet.

"In many cases of incorrigibility we find that the parents are more incorrigible than the child. Experience has demonstrated, also that in many instances the training school has worked out a complete reformation in the child, and saved them from the reform school and the penitentiary.

"We need what Chicago has provided,—a parental school, where boys may be committed for truancy and where the parents are criminally negligent.

"In order to do good work we must also have a detention home. This is a necessity for two reasons: First, because much of our county's territory is outside the city of Duluth, and under the law all cases must be tried in Duluth; and second, because, owing to the many duties of the judge of the juvenile court, in connection with court cases, it is impossible to hold the juvenile court but once each week, which is on Saturday.

"When it is necessary to detain children, we must either keep them in the city lock up or the county jail. All reform workers agree that the worst place you can detain a child is in the county jail. For the good of our young citizens we should have a detention home at once."

The following table shows the disposition of delinquents:

BOYS.
Paroled	119
State public school, Owatonna	3
Minnesota State Training School for Boys and Girls	6
Discharged	5
Continued and no appearance	11
Deported	1
GIRLS.
Paroled	9
Minnesota State Training School for Boys and Girls (broke parole)	1
No appearance and continued	4
In custody of parents	1
Total number of delinquents	150

Of these 136 were boys and 14 girls.

Of the above delinquents, sixteen have been required to report to the court for further correction, having broken their parole and been found guilty of bad conduct.

PRAYED FOR RAIN TO SAVE THEIR LIVES.

Tientsin, June 29.—Yuan Kia, viceroy of Chili, has delivered an original judgment in the case of five prisoners who were liable to the death penalty. He gave them a chance to redeem their lives by praying.

It is a period of extreme drought and the viceroy ordered the men to pray for rain. If their prayers were not answered within three days they were to be executed. God mercifully sent a small rainfall and the prisoners were liberated.

The success of the experiment induced its repetition and five other prisoners are now fervently praying for rain.

WHEAT HAS BIG SLUMP

H. V. Jones' Report Causes Heavy Selling and Weaker Prices.

Flax is Active With a Good Demand From Abroad.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 29.—Heavy selling induced by the favorable report on the winter wheat crop made by H. V. Jones of Minneapolis was the cause of the heavy declines in the wheat market today. Good weather for harvesting in the Southwest and better weather for the growing crops of the Northwest were auxiliary causes for the weakness. The declines were heavy everywhere on this side of the Atlantic, and the closing prices in Liverpool were lower. Liverpool closed ½d to ⅝d lower, Paris unchanged to 2c higher, Berlin ½c higher and Antwerp unchanged.

The July option closed 1¼c lower in Duluth, 1⅝c in Chicago, 1¼-c in Minneapolis, 1⅝c in New York, 1⅞-2c in St. Louis, 1c in Kansas City and 1½c in Winnipeg. The September option closed 1⅝c lower in Duluth, Minneapolis and New York, 1¼-⅜c ni Chicago, 1⅛c in St. Louis and 1⅛-¼c in Kansas City. The October option closed ¾c lower in Winnipeg.

Corn closed ¾c higher in Chicago and ⅝d to ½d lower in Liverpool. July oats closed ¼@⅜c lower in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 45, against 5 last year, and at Minneapolis 170, against 164 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 215, against 169 last year. Chicago received 7, against 6 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 299,000 bus; last year, 292,000 bus. Shipments 120,000 bus; last year, 167,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 122,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 1,336,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 717,000 bus; last year, 830,000 bus. Shipments, 481,000 bus; last year, 553,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 214,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of corn were 2,587,000 bus.

Wheat was dull at the opening of Duluth market but with weaker prices, came more activity. July wheat opened ¼c lower at 84c, advanced to 84⅝c by 10:52, declined at the close to 83c, a loss of 1¼c from yesterday. September wheat opened ½c lower at 83⅝c, fell off to 83¼-⅜c, rallied to 83¾c, declined to 83⅜c, rallied to 83⅝c and declined at the close to 82⅜c, a loss of 1⅜c from yesterday. It is estimated that the stock of wheat in store at Duluth will decrease 24,000 bus., during the week.

Flax was active during the entire session of the local market, the heaviest trading being at the opening. Foreigners are still anxious for American flax at the present level of prices and a large amount was worked for export from here. It is expected that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 45,000 bus. this week. Argentine shipments of flax were 323,000 bus.

July flax opened ¼c higher at $1.13, fell off to $1.12⅞, rallied to $1.13 and closed at that price, a gain of ¼c over yesterday. September flax opened ½c higher at $1.13, declined to $1.12¾, rallied to $1.13 and closed at that price, a gain of ½c over yesterday. October flax opened ⅜c higher at $1.11⅞, advanced to $1.12, fell off to $1.11⅜, rallied to $1.12 and closed at that price, a gain of ¼c over yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Active Selling of July Option Causes Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, June 29.—The wheat market opened weak today on active selling of the July option by prominent commission houses. Good harvesting weather in the Southwest, with the prospect of continued rains in the Northwest, also weakened prices. September opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 82⅝c to 83c and declined to 82⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 222 cars against 220 cars last week and 169 cars a year ago.

On an improved demand September sold up to 83⅜c. Prices later broke sharply on general profit taking. The close was weak, with September down 1¼@1⅜ at 81⅝@⅞c.

The corn market was easier, but trading was exceedingly light. Lower cables and fair weather for the crop caused the feeling to be easy. September opened a shade to ⅛c higher at 52¼@52⅜c to 52⅝c and sold down to 52⅜c. Local receipts were 399 cars with 197 of contract grade.

Prices advanced and declined with wheat. The close was steady, with September at 52¼c.

The oats market was steady on good general demand, which was based on the prospect of continued hot weather. The high temperatures prevailing throughout the Middle West is considered unfavorable for the crop. September opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 36¼c to 36¼c, advanced to 36⅜@36½c and declined to 36¼c. Local receipts were 126 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and firm. A 5c advance in the price of live hogs gave strength to the market. September pork opened 5c higher at $16.85. Lard was up 2½c to 5c at $9.55 to $9.97½. Ribs were 10c higher at $9.35.

Close: Wheat—July, 81; September, 81⅝ 6¾c. Corn—July, 50½c; September, 52¼c. Oats—July, 39⅝@¼c; September, 36½c. Pork—July, $17.00; September, $16.70. Lard—July, $8.75@8.77½; September, $8.92½. Grain Gossip.

Bartlett, Frazier & Carrington, Chicago: Our Mr. Pierce at Kansas City wires: "If the speculative public wishes to buy wheat futures freely around present prices, it is likely to have an opportunity to do so shortly. We have raised a good crop of winter wheat, and it is going to move in considerable volume very soon. Millers are showing unusually little interest in the new wheat at present prices, and the load seems likely to fall upon the futures right away. My impression is that the effect will be about that of a pail of hot water on a snow ball. It will be fine if the public will come in, but I doubt it."

Modern Miller: Returns from the threshing of winter wheat generally show a good yield of grain of excellent quality. Few reports of deficient yield are received. Crop conditions in Nebraska have improved since the recent rains and the good crop promise elsewhere is maintained. Rains have impeded the harvest and delayed the movement to market but the prospects are that the movement will be free if the weather continues favorable.

Chicago Record-Herald: A joint compilation by Crop Experts H. V. Jones and John Inglis of an estimate of the winter wheat crop put the total at 420,000,000 bus. This was practically the same as indicated by the government percentages, furnished June 11, when the indicated yield of winter wheat was 418,000,000 bus. The report was given a bearish construction, although the guess given out by the same authorities last year at this time, 380,000,000 bus, was a poor one, falling nearly 70,000,000 bus behind the final official figures.

The Cotton Market.

New York, June 29.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1@4 points and ruled very nervous and irregular during the early session with sentiment unsettled as a result of insurance of July notices representing between 50,000 and 60,000 bales of cotton. July sold off to 10.07, rallied to 10.12, broke to 10.05 and rallied to 10.10 inside of the first half hour, then ruled fairly steady on covering of shorts and a little demand from spot people, while the new crop held around the opening figures. Trading was fairly active. Weather reports were considered favorable and a private condition report showed an improvement for the month of about half of 1 per cent.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 10.80; middling gulf, 11.05. Sales 485 bales. Futures closing very steady. Closing bids: July, 10.21; August, 10.20; September, 10.31; October, 10.30; November, 10.31; December, 10.36; January, 10.40; February, 10.14; March, 10.47.

Time loans very dull and steady; sixty days, 4½ per cent; ninety days, 4¾; six months, 5 to 5¼. Prime mercantile paper, 5@6½ per cent. Sterling exchange weaker after advance at $4.84.6@70 for demand and at $4.81.90@4.82 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.82½@4.83 and $4.85½@4.86; commercial bills, $4.81¾. Bar silver, 65½c; Mexican dollars, 50⅝c. Government bonds easy; railroad bonds heavy.

QUOTATIONS VERY MEAGER

Copper Stocks Suffer a Decline Toward Close of Session.

The brokers' telegraph wires had not sufficiently recovered from yesterday's storm to permit the receipt of quotations from the Boston copper stock market with any degree of regularity or in great quantities, consequently reports on the listed shares are meager.

North Butte opened at $86 and fell off to $84.25. The closing price was not obtainable up to the hour of going to press. Amalgamated opened at $99, advanced to $99.25, fell off to $96.62½ and closed at $96.62½ bid. Anaconda opened at $239, advanced to $242 and fell off to $234.50.

Butte Coalition was listed on the Boston stock exchange this morning, the board having voted to do so yesterday afternoon. It sold at $29.25 at the opening and advanced to $29.50.

The unlisted shares had a weaker tone. Superior & Pittsburg sold at $17 and closed at $16.75 bid and $17 asked. Denn-Arizona sold at $16.50 and closed at $16.50 bid and $17 asked; Hancock Consolidated at $9 and closed at $10 asked; Globe Consolidated at $6 and closed at $5.75 bid, and Keweenaw at $9.75, closing at $10 asked. Black Mountain was weak, closing at $8 bid and $8.50 asked. It was inactive all day. Copper Queen of Idaho closed at $2 asked.

INTENSE FEELING

Washington, June 29.—In the course of the debate on the conference report on the railroad rate bill today, Senators Bailey and Tillman engaged in very sharp controversy over the latter's denunciation of the lawyers. The Texas senator indicated an opinion that this was demagoguey, and Mr. Tillman, while contending that he respected the attorneys of standing, said he had an utter contempt for shysters and for the men who pack political conventions. There was intense feeling for a few moments, but it passed away.

Low Outing Rates.

The Northern Pacific railway will sell week-end tickets each week until Oct. 31st at the rate of one fare for the round trip to Walker, Bemidji, Iron River, Brule, Sturgeon Lake, and Pine City. SELLING IS VERY HEAVY Stocks Drop Rapidly Under the Pressure of Liquidation.

The Closing Prices Were About the Lowest of the Session.

New York, June 29.—The movement of prices at the opening of the stock market today was very irregular, numbers of the same group showing mixed gains and losses. Illinois Central advanced 1¼, Atlantic Coast Line - and Colorado Fuel ⅝. There was a decline of about a point in Reading and of large fractions in St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, B. & O., and Smelting. The volume of dealings was restricted.

Efforts by the bears to weaken the market and a desire to take profits on yesterday's late rise, caused a general setback in which stocks that were the weakest yesterday suffered the most. Anaconda yielded 2¾, Northern Pacific 2⅝, Interborough Metropolitan 2⅛, Reading 2, Amalgamated Copper and Pacific Mail 1½, St. Paul and Colorado Fuel 1¼ and Union Pacific, Pennsylvania and Smelting 1@1¼. Hasty covering by the short interest commenced when supporting orders began to be placed and the market made up nearly all of its loss. Reading, Northern Pacific and Copper rallied a point and Anaconda fully. Business became excessively dull on the rise. Rcme, Watertown & Ogdensburg sold at a decline of 5 points. Exceptional strength developed in Consolidated Gas, that stock going up 2½ in face of the depression elsewhere. Hide and Leather preferred and Virginia Iron also gained 1 and 1½ respectively. The market was weakening again at 11 o'clock.

Price movements were halting, recurring periods of pressure being followed by recoveries and lapses in very dull trading. Kansas & Texas preferred and Anaconda dropped 1, United States Reduction 3 and the preferred 3¼ over yesterday. Northern Pacific declined 2⅝, Pacific Mail 3, Great Northern preferred 2, Locomotive 1¾ and Brooklyn Transit and sugar 1. Bonds were dull and irregular at noon.

Heavy liquidation in the Hill stocks arose after 12 o'clock which soon affected the market and drove prices down to the lowest. The United States Steel stocks were unloaded in large quantities and there was also a liberal outpouring of Reading. The decline in Great Northern preferred reached 8 points and Northern Pacific 5½.

Stocks came out again in large volume extending to previous declines considerably. The usual dullness led the rallies; United States Steel sold down 1⅞ to 34¼, the lowest price of the year, and the preferred got back to yesterday's low price at par. Great Northern preferred fell 9, Northern Pacific 6⅜, Delaware & Hudson 4, Reading 3⅜, St. Paul 2, Union Pacific and Interborough Metropolitan 2⅝, General Electric 2½, Amalgamated Copper and Colorado Fuel 2.

Stocks poured into the market again and prices ran off rapidly. Enormous buying orders held United States Steel preferred at par only momentarily and it was carried down to 99¾ under a flood of offerings. Northern Pacific loss reached 8⅞, Central of Jersey 6, Northwestern preferred 5, St. Paul 3¾, American Woolen 3¼, United States Steel preferred, Smelting, Reading and Union Pacific 3, Pennsylvania, Amalgamated Copper 2 to 2¾, and Baltimore & Ohio, United States Steel and Brooklyn Transit 2. Colorado Fuel preferred sold at a decline to 10. The slight rallies were on covering by room shorts. The closing was weak near the lowest.

RATE BILL IS PASSED

The Conference Report is Agreed to by the Senate.

Senator Tillman Takes Another Fling at the President.

Washington, June 29.—At 3 p. m. the senate agreed to the conference report on the railroad rate bill, which passes the measure.

The senate has passed the joint resolution which makes the rate bill go into effect sixty days after passage.

When Senator Tillman called up the confernece report on the railroad rate bill today, he renewed his attack on the pipe line amendment as being in the interest of the Standard Oil company.

"About the time the Allison amendments were incubating," he said, "there was a great furore about the Garfield report on the Standard Oil company and we were told that the exposures of its crimes would help the vote on the rate bill, and under the cover of this dust the president retired from his advanced position on railroad legislation and accepted the Allison provision.

"There the big stick and the pitchfork, which have been in alliance, found themselves separated, and the pitchfork, while doing duty on the firing line, looked around only to see the tail of its associate hustling towards the rear, sliding towards the Allison base, to use a baseball phrase. The big stick was rushing in on all fours to get between Father Allison's legs."

He had no fault to find, he added, except that he considered the fact that the president had been inconsistent in not coming to the assistance of the senate conferees. He considered it "a little remarkable that just when he might do something to thwart the policy of this gigantic monopoly, he is as mum as a mouse, except that there is now another hurrah about what the president is going to do to the Standard Oil in the way of suits. He added that notwithstanding the position we are in, we are carefully told in advance that the high officials, such as Rockefeller, Rogers and Archbold, are not to be molested.

The senate has adopted the conference report on the pure food bill, and it now goes to the house.

TEMPORARY GOVERNMENT

For Isle of Pines Provided in a Joint Resolution.

Washington, June 29.—A joint resolution providing a temporary government for the Isle of Pines was today introduced in the senate by Senator Dick. The presentation of the bill created immediate interest and at the request of Senator Morgan it was read and referred to the committee on Pacific islands and Porto Rico.

It applies the canal zone government to the island and in addition declares a policy with reference to it. It is as follows:

"That until it shall be otherwise provided by act of congress and by treaty with Cuba, the government of the Isle of Pines rightfully belongs to the United States of America.

"That until congress shall otherwise provide by law all the military, civil and judicial powers as well as the power to make all rules and regulations necessary for the government of the Isle of Pines shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the president shall direct for the government of the said Isle of Pines and maintaining and protecting the inhabitats thereof in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property and religion."

WILL APPOINT COMMITTEE.

Duluth to Assist in Forming Prevention of Tuberculosis Association.

Dr. H. M. Bracken of the state board of health was in the city again today from St. Paul, in connection with his plan to have a state association for the prevention of tuberculosis formed. He met with several Duluthians at the Commercial club, and it was decided that a committee from Duluth and the ranges should be appointed by Chairman Hugo of the public affairs committee, to meet with similar committees in the Twin Cities, for the purpose of forming an organization. Of this committee there will be five from Duluth and two or three members from the ranges.

Ferry Swansea Gets in Trouble and Launch Goes to Aid.

The ferry Swansea, which runs between Fifth avenue west in Duluth and Tower Bay slip in Superior, got into difficulties this morning while on her run about 10 o'clock and was held up close to the Interstate bridge. Something went wrong with her hull and engines and it is claimed that she was leaking. Nye, Jenks & Co's. gasoline lauch which was passing, was hailed, and took the passengers off the Swansea. The latter is now tied up to the boom sticks of the Alger-Smith mill at the foot of Garfield avenue and workmen are repairing her. Just what was the matter with her could not be learned.

CHANGED RECORD

Cooper Eliminated Some of His Remarks to Dalzell.

Washington, June 29--The heated controvery between Mr. Dalzell (Pa.) and Mr. Cooper (Wis.) yesterday, growing out of the blanket rule to permit the consideration of conference reports, without printing, had its aftermath in the house today.

Under a question of personal privilege, Mr. Dalzell, with great deliberation, but showing deep feeling, called the attention of the house to what he charged amounted to a deliberate change in the record of today by Mr. Cooper, in changing the wording of the colloquy between them yesterday. Mr. Dalzell, reading from the original notes of the reporters on the sharp interchange which occurred, and then comparing them with the manner in which they appeared in the record, said that no gentleman had a right to change the substantial character of another gentleman's speech, but that was what the change amounted to, he said.

"He impugned the motives of the house and he impugned motives in his speech of yesterday," said Mr. Dalzell. "With no one by, he cunningly changed the substance. There is only one way in which a gentleman can retract words said in the heat of debate, and that is in the presence of the one to whom the imputation is uttered."

Mr. Dalzell asked that the exact words of Mr. Cooper should go into the record, instead of the words as they had appeared.

"This attack is not unexpected to me," said Mr. Cooper. "Ever since I voted against the Lake Erie canal bill, the gentleman from Pennsylvania has been on the edge with me." Mr. Cooper justified the changes made, on the ground of bad reporting. By a vote of 86 to 43 the remarks of Mr. Cooper were expunged from the record, and the original remarks inserted.

The conference report on the bill creating a bureau of naturalization and immigration was adopted by the house today. This passes the bill.

The house today adopted the conference report on the Lake Erie canal bill. This passes the bill.

KANSAS VOTES CHEAP.

Governor Hoch Told of 4,000 He Can Have for $2,000.

Topeka, Kan., June 29.—F. A. Richard of Logan has written a letter advising Governor Hoch to send $2,000 to a young man near Norton who controls 4,000 votes in that section. Richard, who claims to be a detective employed by the Republicans, says that these 4,000 men have set $2,000 as the amount required to have their votes turned to one party or the other. Charles Sessions, the governor's private secretary, wrote to Richard that the governor was not buying votes this early in the year, and did not have the cash to pay for them if he wanted to.

Your Grocery Bill

Takes a large part of your housekeeping money, and do you always get full value from your grocer in either quality or quantity?

It is but recently that we have gone into the business of selling groceries at wholesale to consumers, but our list of customers all over the country is enormous. Why? People find that the convenience of quality and price are so near perfection, that they no longer dream of relying on the "Corner Grocery."

But maybe you think your needs are not large enough for you to buy at wholesale.

Our use of the word "wholesale" doesn't mean a carload, and there are many things that you use in quantities, such as

TEA, COFFEE, SPICES, CANNED GOODS, SOAP, ETC.

Remember that in buying from us you have the same advantages that your dealer has when he buys at wholesale. Our goods suit every taste; our prices suit every purse. Drop in and see us. We won't urge you to buy. No order is too small for personal attention, nor too large for our capacity.

MINORITY REPORT

Will be Made on Rate Bill by Senate Committee.

Washington, June 29.—When the railroad rate bill was reported from the senate committee on interstate commerce yesterday, Senator Elkins gave notice that he should file a minority report stating the reasons of five members of the committee in not concurring in the report of the majority. He has been given leave to perfect his report before having it printed, and during the recess of congress it will be brought out. It will consist of a compilation of all the testimony taken by the committee and other data gathered, together with carefully prepared comments. It will be signed by Elkins, Foraker, Kean, Crane and Aldrich.

OFFICES IN THIS CITY

Part of General Offices to be Located in Duluth.

Simultaneously with the rumor of an alliance of the independent steel concerns for the purpose of fighting the United States Steel Corporation comes an announcement to the effect that the Republic Iron and Steel company, a big independent company owning several properties in the Lake Superior country, is to establish divisional headquarters in Duluth.

In mining circles, however, the alliance scheme is discounted and it has been repeatedly denied. Mining men do not see any hostile move toward the United States Steel Corporation in the establishment of offices in this city. It is a move prompted only by the necessities of business.

T. H. Cornell, formerly chief bookkeeper at the Cambria and Lillie mines, Republic properties in the Negaumee district, will become chief auditor of the company and will make his headquarters in Duluth. This means that the auditor's department of the general offices, at least, will be located at the head of the lakes.

Next month is the time selected for the establishment of the new offices here. It is not known in what building in the city they will be located.

The general offices of the Republic company are located at present in Chicago, but the directors are considering their removal to Pittsburg. John W. Gates is said to be heavily interested in the Republic Iron and Steel company, which persistent rumors link with the Jones & Laughlin crowd in the formation of a gigantic independent steel combine.

MARINE.

WORK ON LAFAYETTE.

Captain W. W. Smith to Get Crew Started on Her.

Capt. W. W. Smith, marine superintendent of the Pittsburg Steamship company, and the wrecking crew which successfully released the steamer Crescent City, will begin work at once on the wreck of the steamer Lafayette, which with the barge Manila went ashore on Encampment island, north shore, during the big storm of last November.

The Lafayette fared badly in the gale. Only one life was lost which seems miraculous in view of the position of the boat and the sweep which the wind had at her. She was so badly damaged that only her engines and machinery can be saved.

The rage of the gale tore the boat in two and twisted and bent the steel plates and beams as if they had been nothing at all. It is the intention of the Pittsburg company to install the Lafayette's engines in one of its many barges and the barge Manila, which was the Lafayette's consort at the time of the storm, has oft been mentioned as the one to be converted into a steamer. This does not seem so probable now, however.

It will take some time and much hard work to dismantle the hull of the Lafayette, but it will be pushed as rapidly as possible. Camp will be established on Encampment island probably within a week.

Orders New Steamer.

Detroit, June 29.—C. W. Elphicke of Chicago, closed a contract yesterday with the Great Lakes engineering works for a 7,500 ton steamer to come out in the spring of 1907. The new boat will be 440 feet over all, 420 feet keel, 52 feet beam and 28 feet deep. It will have triple expansion engines and Scotch boilers.

SMITH HAS LEAD IN OPEN GOLF TOURNEY.

Lake Forest, Ill., June 29.—With three fourths of the play completed Aleck Smith of Nassau has a lead of three strokes in the struggle for the open golf championship with a total of 220 for the 54 holes. Willie Anderson, present title holder completed his morning round in 74 bring his total up to 223, with Willie Smith of Mexico yet to turn in his card. Jas Maiden of Toledo and Aleck Ross of Oakley are tied for third place with 230 each, Maiden taking 77 and Ross 75 for the morning rounds. Anderson struggling to overcome Aleck Smiths lead of 2 strokes on his play, played beautifully, making but one mistake, a four on the "baby" 16th hole, but was unable to equal Smiths 73.

THE LAKE IRON MINES

Will Ship About 38,000,000 Tons This Season---Great Mountain Iron Mine Will Lead All the Other Shippers.

Ironwood, Mich., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—With upwards of 11,000,000 tons of ore already shipped from the Lake Superior region this season, and with no labor troubles or other clouds on the horizon, there is every expectation that the movement from the mines this year will approximate 38,000,000 tons. A heavy setback was experienced by reason of the longshoremen'ss strike, yet the shipments to date are nearly 500,000 tons in excess of the amount that had been forwarded at this time last season.

As was the case last year, the great Mountain Iron mine will lead all other shippers with an outgo of 3,000,000 tons. This product will be the greatest ever achieved by a single mine in a single season in the Lake Superior country, or elsewhere for that matter, and it will be 500,000 tons in excess of the amount forwarded by the mine in 1905, when all past records were badly shattered by this gigantic producer. However, there are a number of other Mesaba rang mines with tremendous ore bodies to draw from that will set new marks this year. The Burt will come near the 2,500,000 ton point, and from each of the Fayal and Adams close to 2,000,000 tons will be shipped. Others that will forward upwards of 1,000,000 tons are the Biwabik, Stevenson and Morris.

Estimating the open pit season at 200 days, the shipment of 3,000,000 tons from the Mountain Iron will call for the removal of an average of 15,000 tons daily, or from six to seven train loads. The season's output will be larger than the outgo from the entire range in 1896, and it will be one-fourth as large as the shipments from the range in the season of two years ago. The mine has shipped an average of 1,376,000 tons in each of the past four seasons, and with the 3,000,000 ton mark recorded this year it will have forwarded in eight seasons, from 1899 to 1906, inclusive, an aggregate of 12,681,500 tons. The Mountain Iron was discovered in 1890 by John A. Nichols, an explorer in the employ of the Merritts of Duluth, and it was the first shipper on the range. In 1896 it was transferred from the Rockefeller company to the Oliver Iron Mining company, now the mining end of the United States Steel corporation, for some $600,000 cash, the cost of the development to date, and a 25 cent per ton royalty on all ore thereafter to be produced, the property in that connection passing into the control of the Carnegie interests, which up to that time had confined their operations to the older districts Lake Superior.

It is the expectation that the Steel corporation's new Monroe mine, on the Western Mesaba, will ship 1,000,000 tons this season, all of which will come from two shafts, both of which are now milling ore. The property is being prepared for still larger operations. Stripping is in progress with three steam shovels, and with a third shaft available for milling next season the mine will be in readiness to enter the 2,000,000 ton class. From its Shenango and Webb mines, the Shenango Furnace company will ship 400,000 and 200,000 tons, respectively ,the Missabe road

NORTH BUTTE IS IN THE LEAD

Its Ore Yielded an Average of $21.11 a Ton Last Year—Thirteen Companies Produced Ore in One Year That Brought Them $52,328,000.

Butte, Mont., June 30.—The showing of the thirteen mining companies that filed annual statements in the office of the county clerk and recorder in order that their net proceeds might be taxed according to law is certainly a good one for all of the corporations, with the exception of the Alice and Pittsburg, and they were not bad, considering the fact that for the year which the reports cover, June 1, 1905, to June 1, 1906, the Alice did not operate as a company—it worked under the tribute system—and the Pittsburg did not strike its bodies of good ore until several months of the year had slipped away.

While the report of the Washoe company shows that it had no net proceeds, it also shows that the money derived from its output was expended in betterments.

In the way of gross values, North Butte is in the lead. Its ore yielded an average of $21.11 a ton. La France Copper, operating the Lexington, is second, the gross value of its ore being $15.26 per ton.

As to tonnage, Anaconda leads, its average daily production for 365 days aggregating 4,168 tons. Boston & Montana comes next with 3,314 tons. The latter, however, leads in net proceeds, the amount to its credit being $6,158,109.56, against $5,753,265.42 for the Anaconda. North Butte would have a much better showing in this line were it not for the fact that it spent three months last fall in retimbering its shaft, and had to raise all of its product through the High Ore shaft during that period. This curtailed its production about 250 or 300 tons a day. The average daily production of La France Copper was only 90¾ tons.

As will be seen by the figures, the average daily production of the thirteen companies was 12,241 tons, a total of 4,467,917 for the year. This was increased, however, by other companies and individual operators and lessees.

	Tons.
Boston & Montana	1,209,805
Anaconda	1,521,310
Butte & Boston	246,593
M. O. P. (United Copper)	274,222
Original	316,495
Trenton	168,770
Parrot	163,569
Red Metal	149,101
North Butte	259,650
Washoe	95,210
La France (United Copper)	33,095
Pittsburg & Montana	26,195
Alice company	3,831
Total tons	4,467,917
Average per day	12,241

The output of the Montana Ore Purchasing company was for the first eight months of the year, it having operated only up to Feb. 1, on which date its property was turned over to the Red Metal company. The output of the latter represents four months' operation, from Feb. 1 to June 1.

Outside of the thirteen companies named, the East Butte and Raven companies produced considerable ore, and in addition many individual operators and lessees mined more or less. It is, therefore, safe to say that the output of the Butte district for the year was not less than 250 tons a day in addition to the quantity given, which brings the total up to 4,589,167 tons or a daily average of 12,491 tons.

In the matter of gross values, the ore mined by North Butte leads the procession and that of La France takes second place. Here are the figures as shown by the returns:

	Per Ton.
North Butte	$21.11
La France Copper	15.26
Red Metal	12.94
Boston & Montana	12.82
Butte & Boston	11.44
Washoe	12.05
Trenton	9.18
M. O. P. company	8.83
Parrott	8.54
Original	8.61
Alice	8.23
Anaconda	10.92
Pittsburg not given.

La France mined on four levels, the 200, 300, 400 and 500, and the ore in the upper levels carles considerable gold. In fact, when the Lexington company operated the property its greatest values were gold.

The total amount of money realized by the thirteen companies aggregated $52,328,662.01, divided as follows:

Boston & Montana	15,509,832.05
Butte & Boston	2,821,319.49
North Butte	5,480,545.24
M. O. P. company	2,423,087.22
Original	2,556,772.26
Washoe	1,146,981.03
Trenton	1,559,308.60
Red Metal	1,929,568.17
Pittsburg & Montana	353,716.88
La France Copper	505,062.79
Parrott	1,397,406.46
Alice	31,524.81
Total	$52,328,662.01

Taking it for granted that the output of the other mines in the district aggregated 250 tons a day for the 365 days and that the average gross value of this ore was $8.75 a ton, which is placing it low, there is an additional $798,437.50, which brings the total value of the ore produced in the Butte district up to the magnificent sum of $53,127,099.51.

Following are the total net proceeds for the companies that made money:

Boston & Montana	$6,158,109.56
Anaconda	5,753,265.42
Butte & Boston	1,075,892.79
M. O. P. and Red Metal combined	1,025,206.03
North Butte	1,845,068.76
Parrott	277,055.33
Trenton	541,528.54
Original	647,624.10
La France (Lexington property)	149,986.54
Total	$17,486,627.10
Increase over 1905	7,548,668.10

The expenditures of the Washoe company in excess of receipts amounted to $175,721.22; those of the Pittsburg company, $240,811.48; those of the Alice company, $5,871.07. The latter, however, operated only by lease and made no particular attempt at tonnage.

Butte & London is making rapid progress in the development of its ground. the Greendale placer, north of the property of the Pittsburg company. Its shaft is 420 feet deep, and a station has been cut at the 400. A pump having a capacity of 400 gallons of water a minute will be installed there, and another will be planted at a depth of 800 feet. The rock in the bottom of the shaft and at the 400 is hard granite. The flow of water, as near as can be ascertained, is about 135 gallons a minute. The pumps handle it without the least trouble. The company has built an engine house and installed its new engine. It is now setting the boilers, and as soon as the setting is finished and connections with the engine made the latter will be ready for business.

Michigan has joined hands with Butte in several mining enterprises, the latest of which is the organization of the Ida-Mountain Development company. This company has under lease and bond the Ida and A. & B. claims, located a short distance southeast of the property of the Lewisohn General Development on the east side, south of the canyon leading to Columbia gardens. Officers of the company are: President, Dr. P. D. MacNaughton of Calumet, Mich.; vice president, C. H. Krause of Hancock; secretary and treasurer, A. F. MacDonald of Hancock; directors, Capt. James Milligan, Edward Ulseth and William K. Thieldman of Calumet, J. B. O'Neill of Hancock and John Neva of Butte. It is the intention of the company, according to information received here, to sink a three-compartment shaft 1,000 feet deep and thoroughly explore the country comprising the two claims. Machinery, including a 10-drill air compressor, has been ordered for use in the work. John Neva has been appointed

THE "BONANZA CIRCLE"

George L. Walker Says the Outlook is as Favorable as Could be Expected---Spent Eight Days in the Mines.

George L. Walker, the newspaper correspondent on matters pertaining to copper and copper mines, has been making a tour of the Arizona district, and in his last letter devotes most of his attention to the group of mines now composing the Superior & Pittsburg Mining company, the consolidated Bisbee mines. He says:

"The 'Bonanza Circle' properties at Bisbee, as the Calumet & Pittsburg, Lake Superior & Pittsburg, Pittsburg & Duluth and Junction are commonly called, are in far better shape physically and have brighter future prospects than is generally believed in the East. Good ore bodies have been developed in all of them, and the character of the rock formation through which their exploratory drifts have been driven furnishes almost positive proof that these properties will develop into large and highly profitable producers of copper.

"I spent eight days in the Bisbee district and was under ground in all four of these mines, and also in the Copper Queen and Calumet & Arizona. My study and comparisons of the geology and the character of the ore deposits satisfied me that all of these mines are developing as well as could be expected, everything considered. During the past two years the attention of the management has been absorbed by the work of sinking half a dozen deep shafts and providing modern equipment. It naturally had been expected by the more enthusiastic stockholders that big deposits of ore would be encountered as soon as work began. Results came slower than anticipated, and many stockholders were disappointed. I knew of this feeling and made it a point to find out whether or not there was real good ground for it, and I learned enough to thoroughly satisfy myself that the outlook is as favorable as could be expected.

"As the four companies are about to be consolidated, I am considering them in one article. The action of the directors in bringing about this consolidation is commendable, it seems to me, as the properties can best be developed and operated collectively from one center and by one management. It should be recalled that the stocks of these companies were put out practically at cost, the public going in on the ground floor, and the men who refused to avail themselves of an opportunity to profit as promoters can certainly be trusted to work out an honest and equitable consolidation plan at this stage.

"Calumet & Pittsburg and Lake Superior & Pittsburg each has two shafts, splendidly equipped. Junction has only one shaft, but its equipment is excellent. Pittsburg & Duluth has one shaft and almost no modern equipment. All of these matters had to be taken into consideration by the officials who shaped the consolidation plan.

"The companies had a comparatively small cash surplus at the end of the year. Assets, which included mining supplies, exceeded liabilities by only about $438,000, and as a portion of the new equipment, installed during the past ten months, will probably be paid for this year, it is plain that the $1,000,000 to be raised by the sale of 100,000 shares of the new holding company's stock will be needed for a working capital. This should make it clear that the move for a consolidation was timely.

"Especial attention is called to the fact that the combined acreage of the four companies is equivalent to more than two square miles. All of this ground is in what is believed to be the mineralized district. The character of the ore bodies is such that practically all of this area will eventually be explored on four different levels, and to do this thoroughly will require fully sixty miles of drifts. Of course this exploratory work will be stretched out during the entire life of the mines, production going on meanwhile. This fact is mentioned to make it clear that the three miles of new openings made last year would not have condemned the properties even had the results obtained been uniformly bad.

"In my walks through the several miles of workings in these properties I became convinced that approximately one-third of the openings were in leached ground and ore. 'Leached ground' in the Bisbee district means soft rock deeply stained with iron. There is only one possible explanation of its existence. It is the result of the decomposition of the original chalcopyrite ores of the district. Consequently the copper which was formerly associated with this iron will be found not far away in the form of carbonate, oxide, or enriched sulphide ores. This copper ore should properly be directly below the 'leached ground;' but the district has been fissured, faulted and crushed so frequently in its geological history that sulphides are sometimes found on top of this leached ground, with oxides between and in almost all other conceivable positions. As a result, the search for ore is one that must be kept up constantly and no area can safely be left unexplored.

"Calumet & Pittsburg property has been opened less extensively than any of the others. Its shafts developed a tremendous flow of water which prevented the immediate extension of drifts. Big pumps were installed and what was apparently a sort of underground lake or drainage basin has been pumped nearly dry. The flow of water is much smaller than it was a while ago, and exploratory work

DIAMOND DRILL OPERATORS

Reported to Have Formed a Pool to Resist Exactions of Black Diamond Combine---Prices Are Now Excessively High.

Iron Mountain, Mich., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Considering the price of the carbons used in exploratory work in the mining regions, now $80 a carat, excessively high, and believing it the policy of the virtual monopoly said to control the trade to gradually demand still higher prices, the larger of the operators of diamond drills are reported to have formed a pool with the purpose of resisting the exactions of the alleged combine and forcing down the quotations of the stones to a more reasonable basis.

It is these carbons, known as black diamonds, that form the setting of the drill bit and that cut through the rock or ore formation as the drill, revolving, is forced into the strata, the "cores" resulting from this operation showing the nature of the ground penetrated. The carbons are secured mainly in Brazil. Several concerns in this country are engaged in the business of importing the gems, the largest of these being the Dessau and Max Bazanger companies of New York, but it is the claim that all of them work in combination, if not to the extent of dividing territory at least in the matter of regulating prices. A dozen years ago, carbons were sold as low as $12 a carat.

It is said to be part of the policy of the reported combine of diamond drill operators to gradually suspend work as the supply of carbons now on hand is exhausted. However, investigation in this portion of the Lake Superior mining field fails to disclose that a compact has been formed as stated. It is pointed out that the more important operators have extensive contracts in various districts calling for thousands of feet of borings, and these are not at all likely to be repudiated. It is conceded the price of carbons is very high, but it is denied it is excessively so considering the great demand for the stones. Never in the history of mining in the United States have as many diamond drills been in commission as at the present time—there are several hundred at work in the Lake Superior country alone—and as the supply of carbons is none too plentiful it is asserted that at least a large proportion of the increased cost is justified.

D. B. McDonald, of the firm of Cole & McDonald, one of the biggest diamond drill operators in the North country and a member of the reported combination, denies that his concern has entered into any such agreement. "If such a pool has been formed, we have no connection with it," said Mr. McDonald. "As to the alleged trust, I cannot say as to just how much of a monopoly on the trade is possessed by the foreign carbon centers. In this country there are about half a dozen firms engaged in the black diamond business. They may all be one and the same, but this they deny, and that is as far as my knowledge extends. As nearly as I can learn, the carbon business in Brazil is handled about as the Hudson Bay company handled the fur trade on this continent years ago. The stones are brought into trading centers by the natives, and there sold to representatives of the carbon buyers.

BUTTE HILL FROM THE SOUTH.

MOST FAVORED IN DISTRICT

Ore is Found on Nearly Every Claim Included in the Globe Consolidated Property---Claims Surround Producing Mines.

Globe, Ariz., June 30.—The mining properites acquired and under bond to Smith and Hovland, of Bisbee, and which are to be taken over and worked by the Globe Consolidated Copper company, which has just been organized by Messrs. Smith and Hovland, number about sixty and lie adjacent to the Old Dominion and the other Phelps-Dodge properties.

The Mallory group, which was purchased from the Globe-Boston Copper company of Cincinnati, consists of eight claims and lies 1,500 feet north of the Old Dominion shaft, and is developed by a shaft 400 feet in depth and is equipped with a steam hoist and pump. It has over 1,000 feet of drifts, one of which crosses a very rich sulphide vein on the fourth level, carrying good values in oxides and carbonate ore, but the main portion of the vein is sulphide. The property is considered very promising by all who have examined it. The development work is very inadequate to show what the property really is and with depth a vertiable bonanza will without doubt be encountered.

The Taylor group consists of fourteen claims northeast of the Old Dominion shaft and adjoins the Buffalo and other Phelps-Dodge mines on the east. The property is opened by several shafts 50 and 100 feet in depth and has a four-foot vein of very rich sulphide ore in the deepest shaft. Tho property is excellently located.

The Bird group is east of the Taylor group and north of the Copper Hill mine of the Arizona Commercial Copper comapny, and is within a very short distance of the shaft, 175 feet from which has been taken some very fine ore in a drift which penetrates toward the Bird group.

The Doyle, Rice and other claims, about ten in number, and which are among those held by Smith and Hovland and which go into the new company, are southeast of the Old Dominion shaft. They are well situated and the limited development work that has been done on them has disclosed some very fine ore.

Smith and Hovland also have twelve claims west of Pinal creek in an undeveloped territory, but the best ore bodies of the Old Dominion are near these claims and pitch toward the creek. The west side of the creek is thought by many experts who have visited the property to have great possibilities. The Old Dominion has a group of claims immediately west of the creek.

It is generally considered here that the properties which are the basis of this new company are among the most favorable in the district, not excepting those which are now operating and from which much ore is being extracted.

MINE-HUNTING IN AUTOS

Run Made by L. M. Sullivan and "Jack" Campbell Across Death Valley Into the Panamint Mountains in Nevada.

Goldfield, Nev., June 30.—Shut your eyes and say "gold-hunting." The vision is of an old, sun-baked prospector, shuffling along behind a pack of dusty burros, through an endless desert.

But out here in Southwestern Nevada, where mining is newest and most modern, there is another kind of "gold-hunting," the kind that is done by the "big fellows." Rather, it should be called mine-hunting. The men that engage in it are looking for a mine. There are mines and mines. They are looking for a mine. They know that it needs but one mine to fix a man for life—and leave something for his descendants.

That kind of mine-hunting is not done afoot behind a file of burros. It's done in automobiles. The men that engage in it keep up an "intelligence department," just as do the war offices of European governments. They have emissaries all over the gold fields—plodding patiently through the desert, "panning" in ravines, upon mountain tops. They have emissaries in the towns, in the saloons, the gambling places—fellows who can engage conversation and have good ears. In the garage close to their office is their automobile—oiled up like a watch, laden with extra tires, gasoline, a "grub" box and water, the chauffeur lounging near.

Comes the news of a strike. Mr. Mine-Hunter grabs up his overcoat, saunters across the street to the garage, steps into the tonneau, and he is off. Beneath the perpendicular sun, beneath the blazing stars, through desert and oasis, mountain or sink, his big machine whirrs—one day, two days, three, if necessary, till he comes to the find. He steps off and examines it. If it looks good, he buys it. If not, he goes back, bootless. Bootless thus he often returns, but never impatient. For, remember, all he wants is one mine. It's big, noble hunting.

Nearly every one of these trips is an adventure. The men of the mining districts relate them to each other, as, in the middle ages, the men who staid at home told of the hardships and deeds of the searchers for the Holy Grail. The story that is being told here now is the run made by L. M. Sullivan and "Jack" Campbell. From Manhattan, Sullivan and Campbell sprang 250 miles, clean across Death valley, the earth's inferno, into the Panamint mountains on the California side, and pounced there upon a monstrous ledge of rich quartz, the finding of which had been dimly heralded on the wings of rumor. They got there just in time, too. For hardly had they made a preliminary examination and closed the deal, when a big black auto, carrying the fortunes of Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, whirred into the little camp from the California side—too late.

Just before midnight of June 15, Campbell whizzed through the main street of Goldfield and halted the auto in front of the Sullivan office. Campbell is a mining engineer in charge of the Sullivan properties in Manhattan. The intelligence of the strike had reached him first, and he had come down from Manhattan, seventy miles, in two hours. Sullivan was still in his office, presiding over a meeting of directors. Two words from Campbell were enough, and, seizind a box of cigars and his big automobile leather coat, he stepped into the machine. A short stop was made at the garage to take on extra tires and gasoline, and then the big machine, an 80-horse-power Pope-Toledo, owned by Sullivan, buzzed out into the open country.

That night's run was uneventful. The road was good. It ran along a plateau that dropped gradually 2,000 feet in eighty miles. The two men leaned forward in the tonneau, their teeth crunching upon their cigars; at intervals with short exclamations they urged the chauffeur on. The latter, a long, thin fellow, all humped up, as if eternally cutting his way through a recalcitrant atmosphere, drove like a demon. The machine buzzed; at times the iron flaps covering the engine raised with the friction of the air, and she seemed to fly on extended wings. Above, the stars blazed—the Great Dipper overhead, Orion stalking with flaming scabbard across the horizon in front. On each side distorted cacti lurked in the shadow like huge tarantulas.

At 2 o'clock, crossing the Amargosa river, a little stream of bitter water two inches wide, one of the rear tires blew up. The chauffeur jacked the machine up and put in a new one—and they went on. They passed through eBatty like lightning, midst a howling of startled dogs. At 3 o'clock they were in Rhyolite.

A RICH STRIKE AT SHATTUCK

Big Body of Ore Encountered While Cutting the 600 Station—Warren Drills Now in Limestone—Plans for New Townsite and Street Railway Completed.

Bisbee, Ariz., June 30.—Drifting on the 500 at the Shattuck continues with the face in manganese, copper in bunches being encountered frequently. The strike last week on the 600 while uncovering a body of high-grade oxide and carbonate ore has called forth little excitemnt, the Shattuck long ago having demonstrated the fact of the existence of high-grade ore at its property. The ore was encountered while cutting the 600 station and showed up within two feet of the line of the shaft. That a big body of ore has been encountered is little doubted by those familiar with the fomations of the Warren district.

Drifting on the 700 continues to proceed as usual, and will continue until stoping is begun simultaneously on both the 600 and 700. This is expected to begin as soon as the 600 opens up the ore body known to be in its direct path.

Work on the tramway goes merrily on. The middle of August will see buckets being swished back and forth between the mine and the railroad. Reduction of Shattuck-Arizona ore, it is expected, will begin at that time at the Copper Queen smelter.

There are employed at the Shattuck & Arizona mine in the neighborhood of 100 men. Within three months this number will be increased to between 200 and 300 and work of opening up the ore bodies and sending steady shipments to Douglas will be commenced on a big scale.

Two years hence will find the Shattuck among the big producers of the Warren district, possibly with a smelter of its own to handle the output of the mine.

The diamond drills at the Warren, two in number, have passed out of the conglomerate and have entered the limestone formation. This occurred during the early part of last week. The shaft on the Chicago claim has been sunk to a depth of sixty feet, and machinery is now being installed to continue sinking. The gallows frame is in place and the boilers and hoisting engine will be in position next week.

It is stated by one high in official circles in the Warren Development & Realty company, that anouncement of the sale of lots on the Warren ground will be made within the course of the next few days. Simultaneously with the anouncement of the sale of lots will come the fixing of a positive date for the beginning work upon the Bisbee street railway, which is to connect the new town of Warren with the business section of Bisbee. All of the patents for the Warren ground have been received and the details of the new townsite have long since been finished. The townsite would be placed on the market by this time, but it was thought advisable by the company officials to await completion of the street railway plans before beginning the sale of lots.

It is understood that the policy of the Bonanza Circle properties will be to give their employes every favorable inducement for permanent home building in the new town, and the street railway will afford quick and cheap transportation to the several shafts of the company.

H. B. Hovland, president of the Warren Development & Realty company, is expected in Bisbee during the next week, and the present intention of the company officials is to make definite announcement regarding the street railway and townsite plans immediately following his arrival.

The Paradise Record says of the Copperopolis property: A bond on this property is held by E. F. Sweeney of Paradise, and George H. Crosby of Duluth, Minn. Three small payments have been already made, the fourth and last being due in August. The present owners of the Copperopolis are Dr. G. B. Richardson, M. R. La Rue and George H. Crosby, the last named gentleman having purchased the interest of P. G. Carney. The group consists of eight claims lying alongside the Manhattan. It also adjoins the G. T. Colvin property, which, in turn, is next to the Sullivan. One might also correctly describe the Copperopolis group as being in the center of the district, the Chiricahua, the Manhattan, the Reider, the Colvin, the Hilltop, the Sullivan, the Doran & Gallagher, the Scanland, the Cochise and the Savage surrounding it in a circle from the east around to the northeast, in approximately the order named.

The principal feature of this property is the presence of a huge fault, varying in width from about sixty feet on the west to perhaps 600 feet on the east, and extending 4,500 feet, or the length of three claims. Iron outcroppings are visible here and there throughout the entire length of the fault. At intervals sulphides of copper are discernible in rock cropping out on the surface, and one can easily dig up with the hand or detach with a hammer, fairly good copper ore specimens from the surface. Apparently workings show better results on the west side of the mountain—for the claims cover a mountain perhaps 6,500 feet in altitude—though indications are practically the same on the eastern side.

Ore is found mostly in lime, though sometimes in porphyry. Contacts have in few cases been reached, the main contact occurring in all probability at a greater depth than has yet been reached, owing to the width of the fault. Contacts are supposed to be mostly between lime and porphyry. Ore is found with green, blue, brown and yellow garnet, while hematitie of iron is present almost everywhere, and in large quantities. hTe owners are especially sanguine in regard to the future of this property on account of the presence of both lime and iron, in large quantities, and they are perfectly correct in stating that they have on the Copperopolis an unusually large supply of iron for this district—both in outcroppings and in working exposures. Copper ore is principally in sulphides, but oxides and carbonates also appear, in different colors, and peacock copper. Some specimens run from 8 to 20 per cent, or higher, in copper, while it is thought a large portion of the ore encountered will run from 3 to 8 per cent. Lead is also found in mots of the workings, although by no means in all of them. Where lead appears there are with it more sulphides of copper here than usual where lead is encountered.

Announcement is made of the organization of a company which takes over the Deckeraw claims at Johnson, Cochise county, Arizona. It has been reported of late that a company composed of Eastern capitalists would soon enter the Johnson camp, but particulars for the company and the property have not been available. The Deckeraw group of claims

THE NEW NEVADA CAMP

Round Mountain District is Recognized as a "Comer" ---Senator Clark Said to Have Purchased Ludwig Copper Mines.

Goldfield, Nev., June 30.—Developments in the Round Mountain district during the last few weeks have practically insured the permanency of that new camp, and it is now recognized as a "comer" of more than ordinary merit. The sensationally rich gold ores that are being mined there are not going to make it, either. It has been shown that the camp's ledger can be depended upon to produce almost limitless quantities of free milling gold ore, the average of which is counted upon to run better than $20 a ton. As there is an abundance of water close at hand all of this character of ore is going to be available for milling purposes and the operating companies of the camp will be able to make tremendously large earnings without relying upon the rich streaks of shipping rock. Engineers are now predicting the greatest kind of a future for the camp which though only ninety days old boosts nine producing properties.

The latest news from Fairview, in Churchill county, is to the effect that the most sensational strike of all has been made during the week in the Nevada Hills company grounds. In prospecting a ledge parallel to the first one discovered on the property and distant from it about seventy feet ore has been encountered that carries 90 ounces in gold and 1,600 ounces in silver per ton. No work has yet been done to amount to anything, but the ledge, it is claimed, has the earmarks of being a permanent and rich one. In the same camp on the properties of the Eagle company, adjoining the Nevada Hills, three sets of leasers are now sacking fine ore for shipment, and other properties in the same camp are opening up well.

It is reported here that Senator W. A. Clark of Montana has just closed a deal for the purchase of the Ludwig copper mines in the Yerington district, and as he is understood to have other valuable interests in the district full credence is given to the report of his purchase of the Ludwig, the only mine in the district that has gone below the water level and proven up the sulphide ores.

Reports from Cobre, on the Southern Pacific railroad, state that the Nevada and Northern company, the company which is building from that point to Ely, is piling up great quantities of ties, rails, etc., for use in the finishing up of its line for the eighty miles from Curric's to Ely. As many men as it is possible to secure are now being handled by the contractors, and the expectation is that the line will be completed some time in September.

The new hoisting works for Patrick Clark's copper mines on Furnace creek, in the Funeral range, are reported here as having been placed in commission, and it is said that the properties are rapidly developing into the biggest kind of high grade copper producers. Butte and Eastern operators are largely in control of these mines with Mr. Clark.

On the first of the coming month the Southern Pacific Railroad company's new passenger rates go into effect. They clip one cent a mile off the rate that previously prevailed and the effect will be to greatly stimulate travel to the numerous gold camps of the state.

The Pittsburg-Silver Peak company, which recently purchased the famous Blai mines in the Silver Peak district, is now making preparation to begin construction on a branch road from the Tonopah railroad twenty miles to camp, and the company's engineers are also preparing the plans and specifications for the 100-stamp

The most charming function of the week was the reception this afternoon at the Patrick home on East Superior street when Miss Rosamond Patrick received in honor of Mrs. Frederick Albert Patrick, one of last month's brides and who arrived in this city the first of the week with Mr. Patrick. The rooms of the Patrick home were beautiful in decorations of white and green, the blossoms typical of the summer bride being used. In the living room, white roses, white carnations and delicate white sweet peas were used in profusion and in the dining room a mound of lilies of the valley formed the centerpiece of the table and about the room bride's roses were used.

Mrs. Patrick, and assisting about the rooms were Mrs. J. B. Adams, Mrs. M. B. Callum and Mrs. F. B. Speiman. At the punch bowl, Miss Dana Van Vleit presided and in the dining room Mrs. A. M. Marshall and Mrs. George C. Stone presided.

During the receiving hours from 4 to 6 o'clock nearly three hundred guests called to welcome Mrs. Patrick to Duluth's social life.

One of the most charming weddings of the week was that of Miss Sybil Benight and Edward Hugh Pugh which took place Thursday evening at the Lester Park Methodist church.

The little church was decorated in masses of green ferns and palms and the lights were shaded in yellow, glowing out from the green with beautiful effect. The ceremony took place at 8:30 o'clock the music being played by a concealed orchestra and the bridal party entering at the appointed hour. The ushers Sidney McPhail and John Lamb entered first and were followed by six little flower girls, gowned in white and carrying baskets of daisies. They were Mabel and Ruth Nelmeyer, Helen Jenswold, Clara Shaver, Evelyn Le Tourneau and Amy Ogilive. The bridesmaids, Miss Dana Van Vleit, maid of honor and Miss Eununcia Buswell of Mankato, entered together and last came the bride, alone, Mr. Pugh and his best man, John T. Pugh met them at the altar and the service was read by Rev. Charles Fox Davis pastor of the church.

The bride's gown was of chiffon over slid and she carried a boquet of white daisies. The maids wore gowns of white mull over yellow and carried white lilacs.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the flat prepared by the bride and groom. Receiving with them were Mrs. T. M. Pugh, mother of the groom and Mrs. Charles Nelmeyer. At the punch bowl Miss Emma Longstreet presided and in the dining room Miss Gertrude Carey and Mrs. Ida M. Trux assisted.

Mr. and Mrs. Pugh left for a short wedding trip. They will be at home after their return at 1124 East First street.

The wedding service of Miss Grace Gilbert, daughter of Giles Gilbert, and Carroll Graff, was a very quiet one, and one of much interest to local society. It took place Monday afternoon, at the Gilbert home, on East First street, and only the immediate friends were present. The guests were received by Mrs. Wells Gilbert of Goldendale, Or., who is here for the summer. At 2 o'clock the ceremony took place, there being no music or attendants. The service was read by Rev. J. M. McLeod of Scranton, Pa., and Rev. Alexander Milne of Pilgrim Congregational church, in this city. Among the guests were Governor Frank W. Higgins of New York. The bride wore a simple gown of white chiffon and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Graff left for a short wedding trip. They will be at home in this city.

The wedding of Miss Maude McVeety and Luther Bishop Arnold took place Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Smith of 1231 East Superior street. The affair was a simple one, but beautiful in all its details. The rooms were decorated in ferns and white lilies, and at 2:30 o'clock the service took place. The bride was attended by two little girls, Judith Hartley and Natalie Smith as flower girl and ring bearer. Miss McVeety's gown was of white chiffon with lace garniture, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a pearl and diamond brooch, the gift of the groom. The service was read by Rev. John Walker Powell, Jr., of the Endion Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold went to Paleface lodge, at Meadowlands, for two weeks. After Aug. 1 they will be at home in the Belvidere flats.

The double wedding Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius D. Campbell of Park Point was one of the most delightful affairs of the week. The guests were invited for the wedding of Miss Jennie M. Patterson and Lewis Park Campbell and were also unexpectedly present at the wedding of Miss Jessie Florence Ames and William B. Campbell. The sudden decision of Miss Ames and Mr. Campbell to be married at this time was not announced to the guests and their first intimation came when the couple took the places of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Park Campbell at the completion of the ceremony which made them man and wife.

The rooms of the cottage were decorated in ferns and daisies and a bank of green about the fire place in the living room of the cottage formed an improvised altar and at 8:30 o'clock the wedding music was played by an orchestra concealed on the plazza and the wedding party entered. The services were read by Re. S. L. Mitchell of the First Baptist church. Miss Patterson was attended by Miss Grace Peasley and the groomsman was Sumner Covey. The bride wore a dainty gown of white and carried bride's roses. Miss Peasley also wore white and carried white sweet peas.

Miss Ames and William Campbell then took their places and the second service was begun. The attendants were Miss Kathleen Watterworth and Sumner Covey. The second bride was also gowned in white and carried lilies of the valley and Miss Watterworth's gown was pink and she carried pink flowers.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held. The Messrs. Campbell and their brides have gone on a wedding trip. Later they will make their homes in this city.

The EVENING STORY.

SAM'S WINNEBAGO GIRL

By William R. Lighton.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Uncle Mac is not a ready or willing talker, when the talk relates to his own achievements; but this is a tale he told me one day, when we sat together within the grateful shelter of his orchard trees:

It ain't the things that happens to a feller that makes hardship; it's the way he looks at 'em. I found that out, 'most the first thing, when I come to Nebrasky. An' there was Sam Weeks, that I knowed when I was a scout. Did I ever tell you about him?

Sam, he come to our post with a batch o' rookies that was sent out from Omaha, when we was policin' the Platte country, time they was runnin' the surveys. He was a funny chap, for a soldier. We was most of us pretty toler'ble stout an' hearty; but Sam, he was a long, slim, webbly kind of a critter, that hadn't no more shape to him than a new-dropped lamb. He looked like the meat on him had been jerked.

But the more I knowed him, the curiouser he was. I liked most of him first-rate; but he was awful raw. He didn't know the first thing about real livin'. He was a couple year older 'n me, but he hadn't never been out on the plains, an' he used to like to hear me tell about the little scrapes I'd been in, brushin' with Indians, an' all such like.

Well, 'twas only a couple weeks after he'd come out when him an' me was detailed with a squad that was goin' out to fetch one o' the surveyors' grub trains. We had to go with 'em about a hunderd miles up the Platte valley. The Sioux was all through that country, more-less; but they hadn't been botherin' the surveyors a great sight right there, an' we didn't expect no trouble. There wa'n't a thing happened, goin' out; nor nothin' wouldn't have happened comin' back, only Sam an' me an' another feller asked to be let to strike off on another trail, one day, from the rest o' the squad, to hunt ant'lope. We stalked 'em back in the hills a good ways, but didn't get a shot at 'em.

We kep' lookin' for our ant'lope, but we didn't see nothin' more of 'em. Long about dusk, we seen there'd been fires built a ways ahead, an' we judged 'twas a bunch of Sioux that had gone into camp. I wanted to see what they looked like. So we went in pretty close, mebbe half a mile, till we come to a dry creek that crossed the trail, an' then we struck up the creek so's to get back on the hill a ways, an' kind o' nose 'round.

After we'd gone as far as I liked to go on our horses, I told 'em we'd leave the other feller down there in the creek to hold the horses, an' me an' Sam went on afoot. You'd 've thought Sam was afeared I was goin' to take him out in the brush an' murder him, he was so scared.

There was about a dozen bucks in the party, an' I reckoned they must 've had a good trip the way they was actin', racketin' 'round like they didn't care for nobody. Me an' Sam, we lay in the brush watchin' 'em mebbe quarter of an hour. 'Twas mighty interestin' for Sam, soon as his scare had wore off some, an' he begun pesterin' me with all kinds o' questions, till after while I seen there was some kind of a fuss amongst 'em, an' there was one o' the bucks come in towards the fire, draggin' a woman by the arm. I told Sam to watch, because she'd been took pris'ner, likely. She was mighty unwillin', an' kep' pullin' herself away from the buck, best she could, till they'd got in near to the fire, an' while the buck had his arm 'round her, we seen her reach up an' grab her hands in his hair.

Sam, he'd got upon his knees whiles we was lookin' at 'em, an' I couldn't make him lay down.

What they doin'? he says.

"Nothin'," I says, "only she's a Winnebago, or Omaha, that they took when they was stealin' the ponies. Lay down you fool," I says, "or they'll see you."

"What be they goin' to do with her?" he says; an' I says, "Oh, nuthin' only same as they do with all the women they ketch. They'll take her with 'em, an' one of 'em 'll have her for his'n. Lay down," I says, "or I'll be dummed if I don't make you."

So we laid an' watched 'em a spell longer, an' pretty soon Sam, he says, "Say, Mac, ain't there some way we could get her?"

"What in thunder you want to get her for?" I says.

"Oh, I don't know," he says, "only I just want to get her out o' that. I can't think o' no way to do it," he says, "but I'm goin' to make a try for it, anyway."

Ever hear such foolishness! "No, there ain't no way," I says.

"Why," Sam says, "if you're scared to go I'll do it," he says. Hear him talk!

But the more I listened to Sam, the more I knowed I'd either have to j'ine in with him, or else go off an' leave him; an' of course there wa'n't but one thing to do ,an' I says, "All right, Sam; we'll give her a try."

I left Sam there, to watch out, an' I went back an' told the other feller what we was goin' to do. He was willin' enough, because he hadn't had no fun that trip yet.

Well, when the Sioux had got fixed for night, 'twa'n't but a little while till their fire died down. There was brush growin' within 20 yards o' the fire; only 'twas scattered, so's I had to get down on my belly an' wiggle acrost the bare places. Pretty soon I raised up an' looked over the top ,so's to locate the squaw. She wa'n't but about ten yards from me, but her arms was tied to that o' one o' the bucks. I just laid flat on the ground, where I could keep my eye on her, an' I begun makin' a lot o' noises, like crickets, an' diff'rent kinds o' bugs. I misdoubted if she'd be sleepin' very hearty, after what 'd happened; an' pretty soon I seen her turn over an' lift up on her elbow, like she was listenin'. I kep' on, chirpin' an' squealin', till she'd got me located an' looked out my way ,an' then I took off my hat an' reached it out from behind the bush, makin' motions with it, an' then I raised up so's she could see my face.

She was onto her job all right; she never made a move nor a sound. I signed to her what I was tryin' to do, an' then I took my knife out o' the sheath an' crep' in a ways further till I got where I reckoned I could pitch her the knife, an' let her cut herself loose. The knife lit right between her an' the buck, an' the blade hit a little rock. I'd oughter knowed better! It sounded like a clap o' thunder, an' the buck he begun to move an' throw his robe off him. The squaw, she snatched the knife an' slashed her arm loose, an' then she made a break for it; but the buck set up an' ketched hold of her. He wan't rightly wide awake, so's he didn't have his full strength, an' she jerked away from him an' begun to run; an' then Sam let go with his rifle, an' I seen the buck drop.

The whole camp was waked up then, o' course. Then didn't know what. 'Twas mighty lucky for us the fire was low. That give us a minute or two start. They throwed a lot o' dry stuff on their fire pretty soon, an' it blazed up; but by then we was up to the top o' the hill, where we'd left the other feller, an' then we all broke down to where the ponies was tied. Sam, he made a jump for the saddle. "That's no way, Sam. We'll have to let the ponies go," I says. I knowed them Sioux would be skally-hootin' 'round everywhere, right off, an' we must do somethin' to put 'em off our trail; so I untied the ponies, an' turned 'em, with their heads back t'wards the trails, an' then I took an' lashed 'em with my quirt; an' they started down the crick bed lickety-split. Soon as we'd got the ponies started, we went the other way, afoot, makin' all the trail we knowed how. We kep' down the creek bed for a spell, an' then we got out on the hills, an' traveled all night, straight north. Come mornin', we laid by in the brush, waitin' for night.

It proves what I've always said: Long as man keeps right on doin' things, he's all right, an' don't make no dif-rence; but as soon as he sets down an' begins studyin' about what a hard time he's havin', then's when he weakens. All night long we'd kep' on, stumblin' over them sand hills; an' once in a while me an' the other feller 'd say somethin' to josh Sam.

Sam, he didn't seem to mind what we said to him; he was too much took up with the girl. He sure did set a heap by her; he was as proud of her as if he'd made her hisself. She wa'n't much to look at, either, that I could see—only just a Winnebago girl, 16 or 17 years old, an' not no better lookin' than the general run of 'em.

Land, land! If the Almighty had sent an angel to us out there, I believe I'd 've picked a fight with him. There ain't no tellin' how I felt. Hungry! I could 've eat anythin.' We'd took the last of our water, too.

Come night, I act'ly didn't care. Me an' Sam, our tongues were swelled so by then that our teeth wouldn't shut, an' the others wan't much better off. We was clean tuckered out, an' couldn't hardly stagger another step. After the sun set, an' the wind begun to die down, an' after a while we could see the stars —just a big one here an' there. They looked mighty sickly, but they helpted us a heap, because we could tell which way we was goin'. 'Twas a little mite cooler then, an' we laid down for a spell, an' we was so beat out we went to sleep, all of us.

When I waked up, I act'ly felt chilly, an' I seen there was dew fallin'. 'Twas on my face, an' my whiskers was wet with it. I knowed we was all right then. I waked the rest of 'em up an' showed 'em what to do. The brush an' stuff that was growin' 'round was all speckled over with little shiny drops, an' us fellers took off the big bandanna handkerchiefs we had 'round our necks, an' went to work real easy, wipin' the dew off the leaves. It's a trick a soldier learnt me once, an' it's worth knowin'. We kep' wipin' an' wipin' till our handkachiefs was soaked, an' then we tipped our heads back and squeezed the dew out o' 'em in our mouths. It saved my life, an' I know it.

We just kep' on, all night long, wipin' and squeezin'. Next mornin' we felt mighty diff'rent, now I tell you! 'Twas a cooler day, too, an' we judged we wa'n't far from the trail where our squad was. We ate moss till come middle o' the mornin', an' then we shot a couple o' rabbits an' cooked 'em; an' t'wards evenin' we got to the trail and met up with in' we got to the trail and met up with some o' the boys lookin' for us. We was all right then.

But what do you reckon Sam done? He had a spell o' fever pretty soon, an' got his discharge; an' then he didn't do a thing but go back to the Winnebago rese'vation an' stay there, an' take up with that girl! But that's one o' the things I always say: You can't never tell. If you ever happen to meet up with any half-breed Winnebagoes out there, you'll know they prob'ly belong to Sam.

The Very Best Remedy for Bowel Trouble.

Mr. M. F. Burroughs, an old and well-known resident of Bluffton, Ind., says: "I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as the very best remedy for bowel trouble. I make this statement after having used the remedy in my family for several years. I am never without it." This remedy is almost sure to be needed before the summer is over. Why not buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency? For sale by all leading druggists.

The Newest Coiffures Liked by Women Are All Puffs And Curls

Hair is Parted When Done Low

Puffs are now Fashionable

Side View of Puffed Coiffure

Puffs in the new style hair dressing are universally used, the more the better, and, combined with the many short curls which fashion deems altogether correct, women are today wearing more false hair than since the 1830 days, when water falls were in vogue.

This may or may not be welcome news to the women who have neither the liking for the idea nor the money to invest in an artificial crowning glory, but from the simplicity of the Cleo Merode style of hairdressing, one by one new fashions have been adopted until now there is scarcely an inch of a woman's head that is not covered with either waves, curls, puffs or fancy combs of some sort. The becomingness of such a fussy style to the average woman is still a matter of discussion, but since Dame Fashion has issued the edict nine-tenths of the fair sex will doubtless follow her dictates and burden themselves with hair that is not theirs, not to speak of debts to the hair dresser, for in nothing can a woman be so gulled or spend more money with little to show for it than in the matter of false hair.

Without doubt the style most to be worn this summer is that known as the Virginia coiffure, which is a combination of the Marcel wave, scores of puffs, little curls and a draped pompadour.

First of all the hair is marceled in the regular way, then the woman's own hair is caught up with a big amber pin at the back after it has been rolled into a pretty puff and fastened in place just at the crown of the head.

The pompadour is next fastened into place, the "draping" meaning that the hair is pulled well forward over the forehead. It is generally slightly parted either to the right or left, as is most becoming. After this process is accomplished, then comes the placing of the false puffs and with this new style coiffure the woman with the least amount of hair is the better off for the reason that it is much easier to fasten the false puffs into place than make the same from one's own hair.

With the puffs in place the next step is to add the curls, and six or eight, as many, indeed, as one can find room for are tucked in about the crown of the head.

In nearly every style the low pompadour is best liked. Another pretty way of dressing the hair is to do it on top of the head, twisting it into a knot from the middle of which issue a series of little short curls. The back of the hair is marceled and the profusion of tiny curls lends a most bewitching effect to a certain type of woman and is essentially becoming.

In nearly every case when the pompadour is worn it is parted either on the right or left side, as is most becoming. With the coronet style of hair dressing the pompadour may be used, though the effect is prettiest when the hair is simply parted, the coronet resting just over the brow.

In the use of the Virginia coiffure, when the hair is dressed low, the puffs extend from ear to ear in the back, while in front there is the usual pompadour. All of these puffs are false, naturally, as it would be manifestly impossible to get the proper effect if the natural hair was used.

Probably the newest decoration for the hair is the use of amber combs of all descriptions. Very light amber for very dark hair, dark amber for very light blonde hair, always seeking as great a contrast as possible. Furthermore, as to the style of the combs, all of them have the olive shaped tops. A large comb is used in the back with at least two side combs. Since the run on gold mounted combs, and the consequent cheapening of the style has come about, the beautiful translucent amber comes as a welcome change, and it is universally becoming, not only to blondes but to brunettes.

Bleaches to Remove Tan and Freckles

By MARGARET MIXTER.

If freckles and sunburn descend upon the summer girl, it behooves her to rid her face and hands of them, or she will cease to look alluring, either to herself or others. Tan is no longer considered fashionable, and girls who care how they look do not try to turn the color of Indians. It is not, however, disfiguring the way that sunburn and freckles are, but it is more difficult to remove.

It is easier to prevent these blemishes than it is to remove them, and cream and veils are adjuncts that no self-respecting summer girl should be without. When going on the water, if a girl will put on a little protecting make-up, to be washed off with hot water on her return, she can go to a party in the evening wearing a low necked frock, and have the skin of her face as fine in texture as that of her neck.

Honey cream is the best thing she can use for this, for it is not only protecting, but is of itself whitening and softening.

Honey Bleaching Cream.

Two ounces of pure strained honey; half an ounce of glycerine; half an ounce of rectified spirits; one and one-half drams of citric acid; three drops of essence of ambergris.

Melt the honey, but do not let it get hot, and beat it into the glycerine. Dissolve the citric acid in the spirits and then add to it the ambergris. After the honey is quite cold, put the two mixtures together, and beat them until thoroughly incorporated. A silver fork should be used for this, and the mixing be done entirely in white crockery or glass bowls.

If put on the face at night this will remove light freckles. To use during the day before going into the hot sun, rub it well into the face and throat, and use as much as the skin will hold. Then put on as much powder as can be used without showing. Never forget that the neck under the chin and about the ears is as conspicuous as the face.

Then, if one is going sailing, or driving, put on a veil. There is actual virtue in chiffon veils of certain colors, for they lessen the effect of strong light on the skin. Black should never be worn over the face in summer, for it concentrates heat. Red and reddish brown are good, for they have a certain actinic effect, and so lessen the injury from the sun. White is not desirable, for it throws a glare into the eyes that is likely to redden them.

With the honey make-up a girl can be many hours in the sun without her skin being affected.

As soon as she arrives home she should wipe off her face with a cleaning tonic or a Hungarian water.

Hungarian Water.

1 dram of oil of lavender.
15 drops of oil of petit-grain.
2 drams of tincture of tolu.
¼ pint of rose water.
3 gills of rectified spirits of wine.

Mix well and bottle.

This should remove all of the make-up, but if it does not, and it may not if enough of the honey cream has been used, wash in very hot water, as previously directed.

The Hungarian water may take the place of the velvet lotion.

Removing freckles is an undertaking to be carefully attempted, and the danger is that in getting them off, the skin may be coarsened. As a rule the skin is peeled to eradicate the little brown or yellow spots, and that may make trouble. Therefore, I adjure the summer girl to use the make-up of prevention and avoid possible trouble later.

If pale freckles have made their appearance, masage the honey cream into the face when going to bed and let it stay on all night. After washing in the morning with hot water, use the velvet lotion. If several applications of this have not affected the skin, try lemon juice. Moisten the freckled places with the clear juice after washing at night, and over that apply the cleansing cream to prevent the skin drying. Wash with hot water in the morning. If this, too, fails after a week, it will be necessary to resort to strong measures.

Freckle Bleach.

½ dram of oxide of zinc,
¼ dram of bi-sulphide of bismuth,
1¾ drams of dextrin,
1½ drams of glycerine.

Wash the face with hot water when going to bed and then rub the paste over the freckles. In the morning remove with a little powdered borax and olive oil. Wash again in hot water.

This should be used no more often than is necessary.

Another lotion for the same purpose is made of:

2 ounces of lactic acid,
1 ounce of glycerine,
½ ounce of rose water.

Mop on the face several times during the day, using a piece of soft cloth. Be sure to pour the lotion into a saucer before using. If this irritates the skin too much, use less often and apply cold cream to soothe the skin.

The treatments for tan and sunburn are similar. The honey cream is the best thing for tan, and should be allowed to remain on the face all night.

If the arms and neck have become tanned, a bleaching lotion is good for them.

Tan Bleach.

Half a pint of milk.
Half an ounce of white brandy.
One-quarter of an ounce of lemon juice.

Bring the milk to a boil and then put in the lemon juice and brandy: Let it come to a boil again and then remove and strain carefully. As soon as it cools, bottle, and mop the tanned surface with it twice a day and at night, allowing it to dry on.

Sunburn is relieved by washing immediately in very hot water and then applying elderflower cream.

Elderflower Cream.

One and a half ounces of almond oil, two and a half drams white wax, two and a half drams spermaceti, one-half ounce lanoline, one-half dram oil of bitter almonds, one and a half ounces of elder flower water, one-half ounce of witch hazel.

Melt the wax and spermaceti in an earthenware dish set in a basin of boiling water. Add the lanoline and beat in the oils slowly. Remove from the heat and add the witch hazel and elder flower water.

Put a large quantity of this on the face and let it stay for certainly half an hour while one remains in one's room. Then wipe off, and with a fresh cloth wipe over with the Hungary water. Powder the face.

Be sure to wash with very hot water on going to bed in order to get all the grease out of the face.

Cucumber milk is equally good with this treatment instead of elder flower cream and agrees better with some skins. In case it is used, apply several times during the half hour.

New Bathing Suits Follow Princess Model

So popular is the princess model that even the bathing suits are being made up after the style and so faithfully has it been copied that, with the exception of the abbreviated length of the skirt, there is comparatively little difference noted.

Silk, too, rather than any other material, is the best liked, though mohair will always hold its own for the purpose. If silk be chosen, a piece with a good body must be selected if one expects any amount of satisfactory service from the garment. Soft peaus and heavy surahs are best for the purpose.

A surah weave in a royal blue shade is fashioned into a bathing princess gown that has the fulness laid in box pleats from above the waist line to quite below the hips. The neck is cut square, the front and back shirred and the sleeves are natty puffs with bands and under pieces of shirred tucks. Still further dressiness is given by a narrow yoke and sleeve finish of eyelet embroidery.

Still another princess is of fine peau de soie shaped to form a deep shirred corselet, which has stripes of featherbone tacked in places to obviate the necessity of the bathing corset and which yet holds the waist line smooth. This is a particularly good feature of the new model bathing suits, for while few women care to wear a corset in the water, yet they all desire to have their waists look trim.

The shirred blouse portion of this also shows touches of lace, a fashion more marked this season than before. One suit in shirt waist effect is of taffeta, a good quality that the shops say will take its sea wetting well. The skirt is laid in box pleats stitched to below the hip line and the blouse has its fulness pleated from the shoulder. The chemisettes of Irish crochet and the collar and turn back cuffs of the same lace add to the dressy effect. Jaunty bathing caps are of the waterproof silks matching in color the suits and fastened in front with exceedingly smart bows.

In bathing shops there are high boots in sandal effect, open the entire length, that give a trig appearance to the foot. Low bathing shoes, the color of the suit and tipped with white are also natty.

Sweet and Sour Cherries Preserved and Canned

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Dear Mrs. Telford:—

Will you please give full directions for putting up cherries in various ways? Very truly,

A CONSTANT READER.

Sweet cherries are suitable for canning, but only the sour ones make good preserves. Most housewives now prefer to leave all or part of the stones in the fruit when canning or preserving, thinking the stones add greatly to the flavor. If stoned, however, be sure and save every drop of juice. For canning, the sweet oxhearts are best. Sterilize glass jars by immersing can and cover for fifteen minutes in boiling water. Empty one can at a time and fill with sour, sound cherries. Have ready a syrup made by allowing one cup water and three pounds sugar to every six quarts of cherries. Boil sugar and water ten minutes, then pour the scalding syrup in the cans; cook in the oven or in hot water bath, according to directions already given, for ten or fifteen minutes. Take out, adjust rubber, fill with more scalding syrup, then seal. The cherries look very pretty with part or whole stems left on.

Preserved Cherries.

For this, the sour Kentish or Morello cherry, the Early Richmond or Montgomery, are best. Stem, but leave stones in or not as preferred. Weigh the fruit, allowing sugar pound for pound. Put the cherries in the preserving kettle in layers, springling sugar between the layers until fruit and sugar are about four or five inches deep. Add the juice if you have stoned the fruit, and heat slowly to the boiling point. Skim carefully, then simmer gently until the syrup begins to thicken and the cherries look clear; then seal in jars or glasses.

Cherry Jam.

Allow a half pound of sugar to a pound of fruit, measured before stoning. Stone the cherries and cook in the preserving kettle until the juice is nearly all absorbed. Now add currant juice, a pint of juice to every six pounds cherries and an extra pound of sugar to each pint currant juice. Cook twenty minutes, until the syrup jells, then pack in hot glasses or earthen pots. A few cherry pits should be cooked in with the cherries, to give their peculiar flavor.

Pickled Cherries.

The large sweet cherries are delicious for this. Leave them on the stems and do not stone. Make a good sweet pickle, allowing to every seven pounds of fruit four pounds of sugar, a pint of strong vinegar with whole mace, stick cinnamon and cloves to season. Pack the cherries in glass jars, stems uppermost, then fill the jars with the scalding pickle and seal.

Choke Cherry Jam.

Take the wild cherries, put in a granite kettle with just enough water to keep from burning, and cook until tender. Rub through a coarse sieve, then measure. Allow a little more than half as much sugar as fruit, then boil down until quite thick, stirring often meantime. Put up in small jars.

Cherry and Currant Jelly.

Use for this two-thirds wild cherries, one-third currants. Cook without stoning the cherries until tender, then strain and proceed as in making currant jelly, allowing a pound of sugar to each pint of juice.

Cherry Jelly.

While the cherry is deficient in the gelatinous property, it makes an appetizing sweet used with gelatine for present eating. Soak a half box gelatine in a cup cold water for an hour. Add to this a scant cup boiling water, the juice of a lemon and a cup of sherry. Have ready a cupful of fine fruit and, having poured some of the liquid jelly in a mould, set the cherries in as the jelly begins to harden enough to hold them in place. Continue adding jelly and cherries until the mould is full, then set on the ice to harden. When ready to serve, turn out on a bed of fruit leaves.

Philadelphia Cherry Vinegar.

Mash slightly two quarts cherries, put in an earthen bowl and pour over them one quart of vinegar. Cover and set in a cool place two days. Strain through a muslin bag and to each pint of liquid allow three-fourths pound sugar. Place over the fire and boil fifteen minutes. Strain, set aside to cool for fifteen minutes, when it will be ready to bottle.

VICTIMS PAY $2 FOR COMMON 2-CENT STAMPS.

Paris, June 29.—Stamp collectors in Paris have been victimized by a clever band of swindlers, who have been selling common ten-centime (or two-cent) stamp as a great rarity.

The Government recently issued a large number of new ten-centime stamps to meet the demand under the new inland postal tariff. They are red, like the old ten-centime stamps, differing from them only in a small detail affecting the shading of the design. Some smart fellows, trading upon human credulity, soaked numbers of these stamps in a chemical solution which changed the color to a pale purple, and sold them to collectors at fifty and a hundred times their face value as examples of a rare and special, limited issue.

Pretty Jewelled Neck Ornament

With a diaphanous summer evening gown to wear at the hotel dances at the seashore or mountains nothing is quite so pretty as one of the new jeweled dog collars with the elaborate plastron front which have come in demand for just some such dainty finish as this. Although particularly ornate, yet their appearance belies their costliness, for the gems are imitation. A score of strings of pearls constitutes the foundation of the necklace or dog collar, the main feature of the decoration coming squarely in front where it is most effective. For the woman with a long, thin neck they are a boon which none but those to whom nature has been sparing of her gifts can appreciate. While rhinestones and pearls are the most approved combination, colored stones are also used to a certain extent.

How Women Should Spend Sunday So There'll Be No "Blue Monday"

Don't eat too much.
Don't stay up late Sunday night.
Don't get tired trying to be amused.
Don't dress too much.
Don't see too many friends.

Do eat light meals at regular hours
Do rise at the regular time.
Do have complete change in surroundings.
Do associate with persons who rest and amuse.
Do have quiet pleasure.

How business women may escape the "blues" on Monday morning is a problem that most of them would like to solve, for nine out of ten if asked would acknowledge that they dread the day. Often, too, before they discover the cause of their headaches and general lastitude they are really ill with some nervous disorder which is in reality brought on by too much Sunday or holiday celebration. This, at least, is the opinion of a woman physician whose practice on the first day of the week consists largely of women and girls who have worked so hard trying to have a good time Sunday that they have made themselves sick.

"If working girls would only realize aside from a moral point, that on Sunday they should rest, that their bodies and minds need it after the duties of the week," she says "fewer of them would go into the offices and shops on Monday morning feeling blue, tired and wishing that they could have stayed home in bed. If I had my way with business women I should insist upon Sunday being observed as a day of rest—rest in the broadest sense. I should make it a rule that all thought of the daily work be banished; that nothing that is a part of the regular routine of duties be referred to during the day; that none of the wearing apparel used during business hours be put on; even associates that are regularly encountered in the work should not be seen.

"In this way a complete change is secured, whether a woman goes out of town for a day or afternoon or stays at home. By following these simple suggestions an entire change of thought, in fact, a different atmosphere, is created, and this, without any kind of amusement, is both restful and refreshing, for it helps the worker to get out of herself into another world, as it were, so that on Mondays she goes to work with a renewed feeling of interest in her duties and a mind at peace with the world.

"So thoroughly do I believe that change is restful and essential in a busy life that if home duties or the weather prevent one's going out of the house I advise changing the positions of chairs, bric-a-brac from one room to another, or if the girl is boarding, then placing a chair in an unfamiliar position, or turning the pictures with the glass to the walls for relief from the monotony of every day existence.

"Though every woman has her own definition for rest, it seems to me the most normal sort is that which makes up a quiet day. An hour or even less spent in church where there is beautiful music and a short service disposes of the first part of the day. After dinner a call on friends who are entirely congenial, and who give one a different viewpoint from that which is necessary during the week, is stimulating and at the same time restful. Or a walk in the country or park, a boat ride if a secluded spot can be found where quiet is possible, is decidedly beneficial, especially to persons of nervous temperaments. A concert or a lecture are equally good if the latter is on a subject that is of interest and will not fatigue the brain by demanding too much thought to comprehend the meaning.

"Crowds should be avoided, whether on boats, cars or on promenades, for there is surely nothing elevating in being pushed and jostled about by hundreds of people, all of whom are bent upon getting some kind of amusement and, therefore, are, as a rule, not particularly considerate about how they elbow those whom they pass. With the majority of women, especially those of an excitable nature, struggling with a crowd brings on a feeling of irritation and oftentimes anger that occasionally ends in a headache, or even sickness in the stomach, that spoils the day of rest.

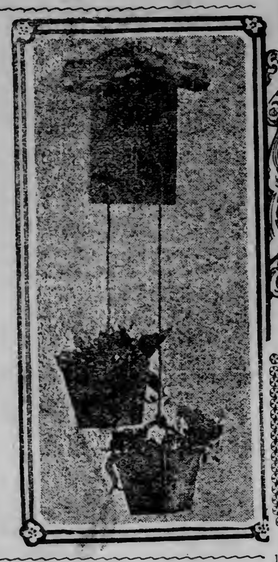

"How many girls and women, too, get up early on Sunday morning, prepare a lunch and hurry off for a train or boat excursion, feeling physically tired before they even get started. The day is spent in different surroundings, to be sure, but in sight seeing, where there is always a crowd, and they get home late at night more wearied after the day's outing than after a day of hard work. It is little wonder, then, after a day spent in this way that the next morning is blue Monday?

"For a very few who need this excitement to keep them happy, such a Sunday's pleasure is necessary, but to the average woman it is inexpressibly wearing to nerves and body.

"Sunday means to many women and men too a time for feasting, and they eat more and richer foods on this day than on the any other during the week, when they are physically better able to digest it, because they are working. Beginning with a late breakfast, as many do, they have an extra heavy dinner at noon, when ordinarily they are in the habit of taking a lunch. This alone throws the routine of the whole day out of gear. As a rule there is some kind of light refreshment eaten during the afternoon. Then tea is served at the usual dinner hour, and many girls before retiring have another lunch. By this time, with little exercise, the stomach is so overloaded with rich foods that pains caused by acute indigestion sometimes keep the person from sleeping, or else cause a heavy, dull feeling in the head that is uncomfortable. Is it any wonder, after such a day of feasting, that the next day the work has no interest for the girls?

"While pleasure is the rightful reward for work, particularly when the latter has been well done, I would advise a woman to select a kind that will not make her discontented with her business duties, nor one that is so different from very day routine that she will be consantly wishing for a life such as she lived on the day off, and so neglect the work that means her livlihood while she indulges in dreams of her experiences on Sunday and longs to repeat it.

"For women who go in for golf, tennis or swimming the best plan is, I think, to play during the morning, so that the afternoon can be spent quietly getting the much needed rest, and then, if they get to bed early, there should be no blue Monday the following day."

Smart Ornaments For Porch Use

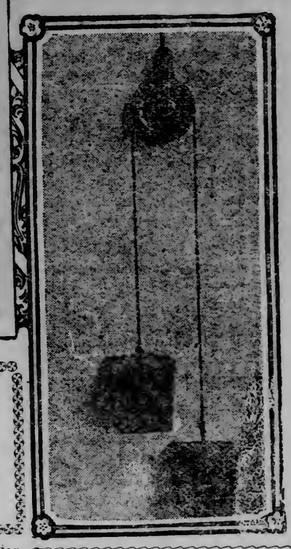

Dwellers in Oriental countries have learned the art of making the house and veranda most delightfully attractive in summer, to a far greater degree in fact than have those in the Occident, but each year there is a noticeable development of the desire for an al fresco existence, and consequently a greater tendency to more elaborate decoration for the porch or veranda.

Here is where the charming sidarris or bamboo screens come into play. Growing plants, palms, ferns, the many genestas, the dwarf vines and rambling roses are all easy to cultivate within the limits of a pot suited to a large jardiniere and they add much to the appearance of the hall, room or piazza at a minimum of cost.

Big imperial yellow jardinieres hung with bamboo ropes from the piazza eaves, in which are planted Meteor roses, will prove one of the prettiest and most effective pieces of piazza decoration that can be found. The rose, instead of being trained upward, can be left to hang over the sides of the jardiniere and the masses of bloom that fall over the pot will yield a sweet perfume with every breeze that blows.

Pretty little "old oaken buckets" are provided for post ornaments. They have a thatched roof, to which the pully wheel is attached, and a stout rope with a bucket at either end is slipped over this. The florist will fill the buckets with some good creeper for a trifle, and a quaint little piece of piazza decoration is effected.

All of the flowers so well loved in Japan—the wistaria with long characteristics stems and the drooping blooms in white or purple, the plum blossom with its snowy petals, the cherry blossom, single or double, white or rosy pink, are now imported by the Oriental houses in imitation of the natural flowers, but so cleverly done that they seem to exhale the delicate odor of the real blossoms. Branches of plum or cherry blossoms wonderfully near to nature may be procured for a couple of dollars and smaller ones for less.

The Old-Fashioned Way of Making Short Cake

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly send recipes for strawberry shortcake, the biscuit part especially; baking powder biscuit, popovers and one for a good corn bread? Thanking you, yours truly,

YOUNG HOUSEKEEPER.

Old Fashioned Strawberry Shortcake.

The real old-fashioned strawberry shortcake may be made with sour cream or rich sour milk and soda, or sweet milk and baking powder. Sometimes an egg is added and a tablespoonful of sugar, but it is a far cry from the French strawberry shortcake of hotels and restaurants, which is really a cake, either sponge or layer, with whole berries between the layers and thick whipped cream or a meringue on top. To make the genuine old-fashioned sour milk biscuit shortcake, which is really more tender than that made with sweet milk, put four cups sifted pastry flour in a mixing bowl with a half teaspoonful of salt and mix well. Add three tablespoonfuls of butter and chop fine, using a silver knife. Dissolve a level teaspoonful of soda in a little hot water and stir into a large cupful of sour cream or rich sour milk. When it stops "purring," add a tablespoonful of sugar and one well beaten egg to the milk and turn into the sifted flour. Mix well together with a spatula or flexible knife, handling as little as possible, then turn out on to a floured board. The dough should be soft enough to roll easily. Divide and roll lightly and quickly into two thin sheets. These may be baked separately in well greased round tins, or laid one on top of the other with a thin coating of butter between, and baked in one tin. Bake in a very hot oven. When done, separate. Have ready a quart of ripe berries washed, crushed and sugared. This should have been done before beginning the dough, so that the sugar will have time to draw out the rich juice of the berries. Cover the lower half of the shortcake with a thick layer of these berries, place the second cake on top and cover with the rest of the crushed and sweetened berries or large whole ones, dusted with powdered sugar. Serve with thick cream or a crushed berry sauce.

Sweet Milk and Baking Powder Shortcake.

Mix thoroughly by sifting four cups pastry flour already once sifted, a level teaspoonful salt and four teaspoonfuls baking powder. Chop or rub in with the tips of the fingers four rounded tablespoonfuls butter or butter and lard, half and half; then add gradually about two cups sweet milk, just enough to make a light, spongy dough, as light as can be handled. Toss lightly out on to a well floured board, pat into a ball, divide in halves and roll each out the size of a round, shallow tin and about half an inch thick. Spread softened butter on the surface of one, lay on the other and bake about fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Lay one on a large round plate, with room enough between the cake and rim for the syrup and cover thickly with the crushed berries. Put on the other cake and pour the remainder of a quart of well sweetened and crushed berries on top, letting the syrup run over the edge.

Baking Powder Biscuit.

Sift into a large mixing bowl four cups flour that has been sifted, one teaspoonful salt, a half teaspoonful sugar and three level teaspoonfuls baking powder. Mix thoroughly, then chop or rub in with the tips of the fingers one rounding tablespoonful butter or lard and butter mixed. Now see that your oven is very hot and your biscuit tin greased. Add cold sweet milk to make a soft dough, about a cup and a quarter. It should be as soft as can be handled. Turn on to a floured board, knead lightly, roll out into a sheet half an inch thick, cut into rounds not much larger than the top of a half pound baking powder can, and, by the way, an empty can makes a fine biscuit cutter. Stand in the pan, brush over the tops with milk and bake in a hot oven from fifteen to twenty minutes. The dough should be handled as little as possible after putting in the milk. These biscuits should expand to about three times their original bulk, be brown top and bottom and thoroughly baked on the sides. They are frequently used for individual shortcakes. They are split after baking, buttered and filled with sliced sugared berries. Sometimes a spoonful of whipped cream is added to the berries.

Maple Cream.

Break half a pound of maple sugar into small pieces, add one cup of cream and mix. Boil a few moments until it begins to harden slightly, then pour over broken bits of pecan or hickory nuts.

Vanilla Fudge.

Put into a shallow porcelain lined pan a heaping tablespoonful butter, a coffee cup granulated sugar, a third of a large cup condensed milk and water mixed in about equal parts, and a tiny pinch of salt. Set over the fire and stir constantly. Cook eight minutes from the time th emixture begins to boil, or until the mixture thickens so as to scarcely drop from a spoon. When it reaches this stage remove at once from the fire. Now add a scant teaspoonful of vanilla and stir briskly until so thick that stirring becomes difficult. This will be in about ten minutes. Turn onto a buttered pan, and when nearly cooled mark into squares. This is delicious either fresh or when several days old.

Molasses Kisses.

Make molasses candy by boiling together two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of white sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of water, a rounded tablespoonful of butter and a scant half teaspoonful of cream of tartar. As soon as this begins to boil cover with a tin lid, which keeps in the steam and washes the candy from the sides of the pan. When the candy has been cooked long enough so that a little dropped in cold water may be rolled into a ball of jellylike consistency between the fingers, take from the fire and pour on oiled marble or a buttered platter. When cool enough to handle get the mass into good shape, hold over the stove and pull briskly for a few moments. The heat and the stretching will whiten it in a short time. When light colored enough divide in two parts, place on a slightly floured board, stretch it out into long, narrow shapes, about half an inch thick. Have ready some French fondant, knead until soft and creamy and work into it a dozen almonds chopped rather fine. Place this fondant on top one cake of the taffy then cover with one cake of the taffy, then cover with ing the fondant between the layers of tafy. Press the layers firmly together and cut into strips half an inch wide, then with scissors cut into kisses.

To Keep Butter Fresh.

Dear Mrs. Telford:—

I have followed the directions for keeping eggs in lime, but the water evaporates. Should this be? And will you please tell me if the pot should be covered? Can you give me a recipe for keeping butter fresh, as I make my own butter, but after a few day it gets a strong smell? Thanking you in advance for this kindness, I am, truly,

MRS. S. D. W.

If your pot is kept covered I think you will have no trouble with the evaporation of the water. In making your butter, are you careful to wash it thoroughly that no milk exudes on being cut? Butter, imperfectly washed, will turn twice as quickly as it should. After the butter is well worked and washed, pack solidly into an absolutely clean jar. Now lay over the top a perfectly clean piece of cotton cloth, wrung out of strong salt water, and tuck down closely so as to exclude all air. On top of the cloth place a thick layer of salt, and then fit the lid of the crock on tightly. Store the jars thus filled in a cool place and I think you will have no further trouble with strong butter. Remember that if any buttermilk is left in the butter it will be next to impossible to keep it from turning.

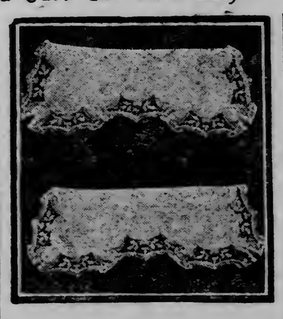

Collar and Cuff Set from Lucy photo by Vigus

Smart Coat Set

Nothing in a long time has so taken the popular fancy of womankind as the embroidered collar and cuff sets for wear with either the Eton or pony jackets. While scores of girls are embroidering their own sets, yet it is quite possible to buy them in many charming designs, one of the most effective of which has many insets of baby Irish lace, which add considerably to the decorative appearance of the linen.

One reason why women like them so well is that they are essentially practical, for when soiled they can be removed and laundered, so that it is well to have more than one set on hand. In the event of the coat sleeves being short, the cuffs are worn just the same, providing the cuffs are the right shape.

In some cases the material is of fine handkerchief linen, but the most serviceable as well as the most effective are made on the coarse butcher's linen, or that which comes with a round thread, and which has a soft, silky finish. Generally speaking, the pieces which have either a scalloped or uneven edge are prettiest, relieving, as the pattern does, just that severity of outline which is apt to be rather trying.

Think all you speak, but speak not all you think.
Thoughts are your own; your words are so no more.
Where wisdom steers, wind cannot make you sink;
Lips never err when Wisdom keeps the door. —Home Notes.

Navy Blue Mohair Bathing Suit Trimmed With Steel Buttons

Pretty Mohair Bathing Suit

One of the smartest models for a bathing suit is constructed of navy blue mohair, with the band trimming the Dutch neck, the belt and bottom of the sleeves studded with tiny steel buttons. While not conspicuous, this decoration is most effective and serves to brighten up the otherwise somewhat dull coloring. The waist is laid in pleats from shoulder to belt and the half sleeves hang full at the elbow. A couple of horizontal tucks, run above the hem, are the only skirt decoration.

A GRACEFULL MODEL IN GRIFFONETTE

THE SAILOR HAT IS FAVORED

Charming Novelties That Are as Fascinating as They Are Practical—Light-weight Materials, Specially Prepared, Are the Rule—Several Novel Showings in Repellent Mohair—Clever Devices in Sleeves—Hats and Headgear Still a Vexed Question for the Tourist—The Town and Suburban Runs.

Truly, it would seem as though all the world and his wife had decided to go a-motoring this summer. The streets, the avenues, boulevards, the highways and byways are thronged with motor cars, and each car carries a full complement of passengers usually in these sunny summer days.

To the lookeron in the modish world the various and varied styles of dress that are viewed in automobiles are far from being uninteresting. One can pick out almost at a glance the novice, the town and suburban autoist, and the woman who had made one or more long tours. The former usually has a modishly tilted hat arched somewhat perilously upon her well-coiffed locks, and then ties a voluminous veil on over that chapeau so that her face is covered, and there are long ends floating frenkishly in the breeze. She is all unconscious that the first smart run will bring that same smart hat over her ear, and that the veil will serve merely to hold it in the wrong position, hatpins or no hatpins. But since she is so evidently enjoying her experience what does it matter how her hat is tilted, or just how she looks at the moment.

The town and suburban woman, too, is somewhat given to the use of dressy hats, but she has learned of experience that the only veil that will hold the hat in any sort of decent position is the one that is tied in handkerchief fashion. Just pulled down tight over the crown of the hat and the ends tied beneath the chin as chicly as she may be able to manage. That is the rule with the short-run autoist, and both her hat and her complexion usually suffer enough by this contraption.

The seasoned autoist, however, well-nigh casts, looks to the winds, and goes in for solid comfort. Of course, she is not by any means regardless of appearances, but she knows full well that the cunning little tip tilted hat, with a steep cache-peigne, all befrothed with tulle in the back, is not for her. Not on the car at all events. A close-fitting shape that will offer little or no resistence to the wind is what is required, and here the English round hats assuredly do justify their appearance. The best makers have them in such charming models and in such variety that their points of variation from the dressier modes are scarcely noticeable. Some extremely pretty shapes are put forth in waterproofed mohair, some of them in exceedingly becoming delicate tints, and the fact that they are delightfully light, almost featherweight, on the head is merely another item added to their good points.

Little round sailors with a shallow saucer brim are extremely pretty in pale blue, buff, or pale pink mohair, and there is usually just a quill or two thrust through the side for trimming. The brim is stitched in several rows with a little featherbone cording between the rows to provide sufficient stiffness, and yet it is not so stiff as to offer any resistance to the wind when in full flight.

As for the shapes in straw—they are simply endless. All sorts of contraptions are put forth by the modish milliners under the guise of auto hats. Indeed, even those who take no interest whatsoever in auto cars have been compelled, willy-nilly, to install a special department for auto headgear and accessories, for every woman who can boast of even a modest income owns some sort of a car in the family nowadays; and auto apparel is just as necessary as dinner gowns and simple suits for Sunday morning wear to church.

The close-fitting turban is becoming to most women. Indeed, few there be that cannot wear it with good effect. But to the few who cannot—and they be chiefly of the stout and triple-chinned sisterhood—the round cap with a visor over the forehead is the best thing to fall back upon.

But to come back to the turbans, the pointed glengarry that Caroline Reboux introduced in Paris for general wear some two seasons ago is finding much favor in the eyes of the woman who dresses for comfort as well as for good looks. This is somewhat after the fashion of the former torpedo urban, but with a cleft in the center of the crown and clingly close-ly to the shape of the head, pointed back and front. Smart little mercury wings are posed at either side of the front, the tips pointing backwards; and, either with or without a veil, that smart little hat will hold its own, be the pace ever so swift.

And, by the way, there is a new wrinkle in auto hats. That is, that there is a well-fitting bandeau firmly stitched in all around the headsize, and this same bandeau is covered with velvet on both sides, in place of the usual velvet outside and silken lining. This is to make the hat cling more closely to the hair, an effect which the velvet accomplishes to perfection. With this little point attended to, there is far less danger of the chapeau careening over one ear or tipsily down over one eye, as happens all too often with some of us who are not on to all the tricks of the trade where hats for special occasions are concerned. One clever woman even goes so far as to cover the head-lining of the hat in velvet, being careful to keep the pile side of the fabric against the hair. Where one wears the high coiffure this plan will work like a charm; but where the fashion of a knot on the nape of the neck is followed, it does not have so much chance of success.

And, incidentally, the hair that is tucked well up on the top of the head and covered by the hat is far less likely to require frequent shampooing. The dust and grime of the road has a fatal facility for cutting the hair, with the result that single hairs snap off short and become brittle. Where the hair is piled on the top, a brisk rubbing with a bath towel on removing the hat and veil will do much to remove the accumulations of the dust of travel.

Some extremely smart coats of tussor silks are on view for auto wear, and charmingly smart and comfortable garments do they prove to be. A standing collar is quite a favorite on those, and it is seen at its best in black or a dull, porcelain blue velvet, with perhaps a rim of gold or silver braid to relieve the monotony. This same idea is carried out on the cuffs, the pocket-flaps, and, perhaps, as reverse, on the little shoulder capes that are becoming such a feature of those coats. These little capes are well weighted at the edges, and tacked down at intervals to the coat with a long but strong stem stitch of buttonhole twist.

Waterproof mohair is finding quite some acceptance in all sorts of modish wraps. So many and so varying are the cuts displayed that it looks as though the rule were to take your choice and run your chance of its proving to be the very newest thing there is. The mode runs almost entirely to wraps; it is seldom or never that one sees a suit or costume complete for auto wear. Indeed, many of the most correct dressers wear dainty little foulards and pongees, and even lingerie frocks, beneath the waterproof auto garments, and that without fear of crushing or of mussing them, either.

Where the wind and the dust make the face sore and painful it is an absolute necessity to give the skin a thorough rubbing with some good cold cream ere starting out, wiping it off with a soft cloth, but leaving sufficient on the face for the powder that follows to adhere. For cleansing along the road, or at the stop for tea, a little flacon containing equal proportions of some reliable eau de cologne and rose water will be found to cleanse the face thoroughly, and prove most delightfully refreshing as well. A dab or two from the powder-puff will not be amiss after this little help along the way.

IN VARYING STYLES

A Good Lamp is a Solid Comfort.

Present Styles in Lamps and Shades.

The woman who appreciates the comfort of a lamp is generally the woman who knows what real comfort is. Of course, there are lamps and lamps, and to a great many people a lamp means a smelly glass affair with a chimney, but no shade, that gives a ghastly appearance to a room and makes everybody blink to look at it. These are the people who are satisfied with a cluster of blazing electric lights suspended from the ceiling or a dim religious light from a flickering gas jet in an out-of-the-way corner.

Suggest a lamp with its steady, strong light that may be more or less shaded, and the answer invariably is: "Oh, but a lamp is such a bother."

On the contrary, if a little care is taken a lamp need not be very much trouble, and when compared with the amount of comfort that it affords it is surprising, when one considers the number of people who are content to blink under their electric and gas chandeliers.

The first thing to be remembered in the care of a lamp is that it should always be carefully wiped off after being filled. The least bit of oil left on the outside is certain to give a disagreeable odor, and there's nothing much worse than a smelly lamp. The bowl of the lamp should never be filled quite to the brim, as some of the oil is apt to leak out even when the cap is screwed on. When filling the lamp each day, if the charred portion of the wick is rubbed off with a cloth, it will always be in good condition, and there can be no excuse for using scissors on it.

The bowl of the lamp should be emptied and washed out about once every month to prevent the accumulation of sediment in the oil, and at least once every six months the burner should be cleaned by boiling it in a tin can half full of water in which a lump of washing soda has been dissolved. If this care is expended on a lamp there is no reason why it should ever smoke or have a disagreeable odor or misbehave in any way.

As to the different styles in lamps, they vary from a plain metal lamp costing $1.50, that is a good illustration of the old adage, "pretty is that pretty does," to the most expensive affair of bronze and brass. It isn't a particularly good-looking affair, the $1.50 article, but it is easy to keep clean and gives as satisfactory a light as though it cost $50.

There are lamps of brass, both the dull and the bright polish; of wrought iron, of pottery and of glass, in all sorts of shapes and sizes, many of them quite elaborate in design. The shades naturally afford the greatest opportunity for ornamentation. Beads are still largely used as trimming, deep fringes of green and red and white and yellow beads being shown on handsome shades of glass in harmonizing colors. The leaded glass shades, too, are many of them exquisite in shape and design. One of the prettiest of these shows a rose pattern, the light underneath bringing out the rich shades of red and green to the best advantage. Another has lily pods in dark green leaded with glass in a pale-yellow effect.

The good old student lamp is quite gorgeous in its up-to-date dress of dull brass in an elaborate design, with stunning shades of leaded glass or opaque glass of the richest coloring finished with bead fringes.

In Varying Styles.

Several styles of automobile apparel—and all of them correct according to current catalogues—appear in this photograph, a snapshot made on one of the fashionable avenues in New York a few days ago. The party is about to start for one of the many suburban race tracks; and provision for windy weather and dusty roads is apparent in each toilette. The coats are in every instance made from materials that have been subjected to a waterproofing process, and in the case of the griffonette articles they are guaranteed to be windproof as well. The several types of headgear favored by metropolitan devotees of the automobile are cleverly illustrated, from the somewhat dressy chapeau partially veiled in the tonneau—it is to appear at an invitation luncheon party at the clubhouse on arrival—to the severely practical hood and veil combined worn by the dainty chauffeuse at the wheel. Silk, mohair, covert, sicilienne are the materials in vogue; and the designs vary in degree of plainness and dressiness according to the class of material used. Rather high and plain collars are found serviceable by enthusiastic autoists, for whom wind and weather hold no terrors when in pursuit of their favorite sport. Sleeves are usually made with a cuff furnished with snap fasteners, so that they may be closed tightly at the wrist when desired, and so keep out both wind and the dust of travel.

THE SAUNTERER IN VANITY FAIR

Pierrot ruffs in malinette are being shown in the daintiest colorings to match every possible gown, and one clever retailer in New York has managed to get out a most fetching one in this for the small sum of $3. This is the regulation double box-pleated ruche that is mounted upon a ribbon band, and instead of the usual ribbon shower for a finish he has merely taken a full strand of the malinette, knotted it two or three times down its length, and let it go at that. Those soft ends reach well below the waist line for a tall woman and to the knees of her more petite sister.

Chiffon frocks are by no means uncommon upon city streets in New York. It sounds highly inappropriate, the scribe confesses. But it is one of those things that are worn, as Ophelia wore her rue, with a difference.

It is the sheer chiffon silk voile—nobody but an expert could tell the difference—and for its adornment there are tiny shaped folds of broadcloth of the chiffon persuasion, applied just like nun's tucks along the skirt and on the corsage. The cloth is of a quality that it may be applied with the edges left raw and without fear of raveling or frazzeling in wear. Linings of contrasting hue are coming back again in this connection and quite marked contrasts are in vogue. For example, a pale beige is worn over a watermelon pink taffeta; linc appears over a shot yellow and silver, while the rose pink shades are deepened by wearing over a deep geranium of a Jacqueminot tint.

Sashes of the lining silk are a frequent accompaniment, and some little hint of it also appears in the parasol and chapeau.

Suede gloves in the soft natural tint, almost approaching that of chamois, are now considered appropriate for all sorts of wear. In shoulder length they will be welcome to the girl who has many evening frocks and but few gloves to accompany them; while for daylight occasions they are surely pretty and appropriate in conjunction with all sorts of frocks. After this soft natural tint, the French grays are choice; but white gloves seem to have vanished, so far as fashionable favor is concerned.

Ribbons are coming more and more into prominence as the season flies by. One of the latest and prettiest devices that have been seen for sometime appears on an imported dancing frock for a Demoiselle of some 20 summers. This is one of those sheer undressed muslin that drapes most exquisitely. The clever sash that encircles the waist and dropped in long streamers down the back of the skirt is the feature of the costume. Two of the many streamers were tacked to the skirt right in the center back, a large loop stitched here firmly and several fluttering little ends applied deftly. When lifting the skirt for dancing, the wearer merely slips the hand through the loops, and behold the skirt drapes itself prettily at once, and the ribbon loops form a sort of bracelet effect upon the wrist. A pretty idea that may be put to use in more than one connection.

For every-day wear there are some of the handwoven homespuns in the usual pepper and salt mixtures that a few favored tailors have for their special customers. The fabric is woven in both Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, and is unusually light in weight for such wear-resisting qualities. A closely kilted skirt and one of those mannish loose sacque coats is the way that the best of English tailors make them up, varying the design occasionally with a Norfolk jacket and a strapped circular skirt.

The Alpine hat begins to show itself among the tourist accessories with which the shops are stocked at this time. Somewhat trying in its outlines to many faces, yet to those who can wear it it proves highly flattering. Then, too, it is easy to drape a veil upon, a point in its favor that counts for much just now. In straw, felt, and even in stitched cloth to match traveling gowns, one sees it oftentimes on ocean steamers, and, with an eagle quill or a bird's wing, it is trig and smart.

The Week in Stageland.

WHITE CITY'S OPENING

First Week of the New Park Will Include the Glorious Fourth, and Large Crowds Are Expected.

Next week will be a gala week at the White City.

All the attractions which were not ready for the opening today will have been finished by Monday or Tuesday, at the latest, and the park will be open every afternoon and evening.

In addition to the fact that it will be the first week of the new park, there will be, July 4, coming on Wednesday, to swell the crowds.

Practically the only big celebration that Duluth and Superior will have this year will be held at the White City grounds. During the evening fireworks will be added to the list of free attractions at the park, and the White City grounds will be practically the only place in the two cities where any large public demonstration will be made.

If the weather is fine on the holiday, the White City is sure to be the mecca of a very large percentage of the holiday pleasure seekers.

Outside of the grounds is Oatka park, the free picnic grounds, where families may take their dinner and spend the afternoon under the trees or on the lake shore, at no expense whatever.

In the evening "all roads will lead to the White City," and the numerous picnic parties that will spend the afternoon on the bay boating, or up the river, or farther down the Point, will naturally turn their steps toward the new park, to watch the display of fireworks and to enjoy the varied delights of an evening on the White City grounds.

A special feature is being made of Oatka park, the free picnic ground outside of the White City, and invitations have been sent by the management to all the churches and fraternal organizations in the city to make use of it for their picnics. It will be fitted up with benches, tables and other conveniences for parties of this kind.

One of the features of the White City which will be a never ending source of amusement for the children will be the menagerie, or "Hartman's Zoo," as it is to be called.

By next week the zoo will include five or six deer, four bears, four wolves, a porcupine, some young foxes and an owl. New animals will be added from time to time, and before the summer is over the zoo will probably be at least doubled in size.

A little pasture has been fenced off for the deer, and the bears have been provided with a new and commodious cage.

A laughable incident occurred in the building of the bears' cage. One of the carpenters was on top of the wire netting, driving some nails, when one of the bears began climbing about. He smelled something in the carpenter's hip pocket, and began searching for it with his teeth. By mistake he caught a piece of the carpenter, who uttered a startled yell, and scrambled down from his position.

The White City circus is a new feature which will be open tomorrow. The acts for the opening week include Rollo, jumping the gap of twenty-two feet, on roller skates. Rollo is the only man in the world doing this feat.

Flaaten's Third Regiment band will have two programs each week, one for the afternoon and one for the evening.

The programs include both classical and popular selections, and are along the line of those given in the Lyceum theater last winter.

THE METROPOLITAN

Professor Theodore Pull, the German Hypnotist and Mind Reader, Will Appear During the Coming Week.

The theater-going public tires of any one particular brand of entertainment if had as a steady diet, and as hypnotism had no fling during the theatrical season just past, so far as Duluth was concerned, the engagement of Theodore Pull, the famous German exponent of the hypnotic art, at the Metropolitan, next week, should be very favorably received. The Pulls will give their first performance tomorrow night, and will remain until next Saturday night.

Prof. Pull and his assistants do not go into lengthy discourses on hypnotism, and the reason why, theirs is to entertain and amuse their audiences with experiments. And their mission is said to be most successful, for they have received favorable mention wherever they have gone.

Following is what the Daily Mining Journal of Hancock, Mich., said of the Pulls:

"Theodore Pull, the hypnotist and mind reader at the Ishpeming theater this week, is attracting large audiences. He is an artist, easily making good his claim that he is the cleverest performer of the kind who has ever exhibited here. His feats in mental telepathy are surprising. In his hypnotic work he has had no difficulty getting subjects under control, and for an hour or more, while this part of the entertainment lasts, his audiences are in an uproar.

"Each evening a special feature in mental telepathy is introduced. Tonight's feature will be a difficult ribbon test. The hypnotic featrue will be a trip to the moon."

The Ralph Riggs Musical Comedy company will be the attraction at the Metropolitan, July 9, 10 and 11, offering a new operatic hit at every performance. The members of this organization have appeared with some of the leading musical comedy and comic opera stars, and their productions are said to be first class in every respect.

AT THE BIJOU

During the Coming Week There Will be a Fine Program of First-class Vaudeville Attractions.

One of the best mixed bills ever seen at the Bijou will be presented the coming week. The program will include a number of well known vaudeville favorites. Lewis and Lessington will present a beautiful rural playlet entitled "Seth Spinners Troubles," and it is full of good, clean comedy, and as well as clever dramatic situations a full set of special scenery is used in the production.

Mlle Aline, the charming and dainty juggler and champion lady hoop roller, will introduce many new juggling feats and expert hoop manipulations which are said to be better than most male artists doing the same work.

Mounts and DelMar, giving a highly refined and classical singing act, will be one of the leading features. Bright comedy is also introduced throughout the act.

A big gymnastic feature will be Ernie and Honegger, one legged acrobats and dancers, who will present one of the most novel acts ever seen in Vaudeville.

As a special attraction for the week Chas. Harris has been engaged to present his side splitting monologue and original songs and stories. Mr. Harris carries the name of being one of the funniest comedians before the public and has been on of the big eastern hits the past season.

Morey Long, the favorite tenor vocalist will render "Star of My Life" which will be illustrated with beautiful colored views.

The moving pictures will be exceptionally good, showing the latest film entitled "The Children's Holiday" and other popular subjects.

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and evening performances at 8 and 9:30 o'clock.

Performances Sunday afternoon and night.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Shakespeare Much in Evidence Throughout the Past Season---Broadway Now Thronged With the Idle Actor Class.

New York, June 30.—With only seven of the half hundred New York's regular theaters still open the season may fairly be said to have gone into history. Wonderful to relate, two of these seven have during the week presented Shakespeare to good houses.

Come to think of it, the season has been most remarkable for its Shakespearean revival. We have had all sorts and conditions of Shakespeare. We have had the greatest of all dramatists in English, American, French and Yiddish, and in whatever guise his immortal plays have been presented they have been well patronized.

Is this not a pretty good answer to the complaint that New York theater patrons demand the trash which has been purveyed for them so plentifully?

A list of the Shakespearean revival of the season is interesting. We have had Bernhardt, Mansfield, Sothern and Marlowe, Ben Greet, Mantell, Adler and Proctor's Stock company.

Sothern and Marlowe wound up their engagement at the Fourteenth Street theater last Saturday night. It has been most satisfactory, both from an artistic and a financial standpoint.

A good evidence of how prosperous the season has been is the number of American players who are spending the summer in Europe. A correspondent in London writes that the British capital is in sports almost like Longacre square in midseason.

The corridors of the big hotels are filled with American actors, and the talk is long and not always subdued of the individual successes scored last season and the still greater successes that are to be achieved next season. From afternoon until early morning nothing but hop is discussed, and the outsider who is not prepared to admit the transcendent genius of the actor gents with whom he is in company finds his reception so chilly that he needs a fur overcoat.

Frank Daniels, the comedian, has been spurting about London in a fine steam-motor car. His chauffeur is a tiny boy about 12 named Vivian Harris, whom he has adopted. Vivian's real father is also one of Mr. Daniel's party.

Charles Frohman has made a contract with Ellen Terry under which she will make a four months' tour of the United States next year. It is understood she will bring with her a new play written especially for her.

I hear that the friends of Miss May de Sousa, a charming young American actress, who made such a hit in the Drury Lane Pantomime under Arthur Collins' management, are a little anxious about her. She is so feted by everyone that she is in danger of injuring her voice. For weeks past George Edwardes, of the Gaiety, has been, more or less, sitting on her doorstep trying to get her away from Arthur Collins, and at length he has succeeded. Miss de Sousa will appear in a few days in the revival of "The Geisha" under Mr. Edwardes' management.

Mme. Melba, who two years ago introduced that charming American singer, Elizabeth Parkins, to London, has a new vocal protegee up her sleeve, so to speak, this time from the Antipodes. Miss Irene Ainley, who is quite young, was discovered by Mme. Melba during a tour in New Zealand. Her voice made a great impression on the opera singer. It is one of extraordinary compass, ranging from low F to high B-flat. The "find" was made three years ago. Since, Miss Ainley has been studying in Paris through the generosity of her patroness. Her wonderful voice is to be heard at a concert in London next July.

News reaches Broadway that Herr Conried has secured a contract with Mme. Phila Pleichniger, the famous soprano of the Royal Opera of Berlin. She will take the place of Mme. Nordica in the Metropolitan Opera House company.

Speaking of Herr Conried, Robert Mantell has been guilty of lese majeste in the first degree, and the theatrical world is holding its breath to see what will happen. In a signed article on the New theater, printed this week, Mr. Mantell says: "Since being made director of the Metropolitan opera, Herr Conried has done to warrant his being regarded, even en passant, for the post of director of the New theater. The former, a private enterprise, is under no obligation to the general public. The projectors of the New theater label it as, in effect, a gift to the general public. Why handicap it from the start with the proved ineptitude of Herr Conried, who has not even mastered the easy art of spending other persons' money gracefully?"

Now, what do you think of that?

Walter N. Lawrence has engaged Aubrey Boucicault for the principal role in a production that he is going to make early in the fall. Mr. Boucicault is to be featured. He will play a historical character. The production after a few weeks on the road is to be brought into New York for a Broadway hearing.

Arthur Dunn will join the stellar ranks next season in a musical play, "The Little Joker," written for him by Herbert Hall Winslow. It is hard to prophesy about such things, but there seems no reason why Arthur should not become a fixed star.

George Primrose has a class of twenty active young dancers rehearsing for the specialty features of his new minstrel show, to open at Manhattan Beach. He assembles them bright and early every morning in the big barn at his home in Mount Vernon. If any one thinks it's easy to become a song-and-dance man, he should see these youngsters work for a while.

"The Light Eternal," a new drama by Martin V. Merle, a bright young Californian, will be produced by Edward A. Braden in October next. Mr. Merle is a young man who has a reputation all over the Pacific coast for doing brilliant things. While in college he developed an unusual faculty for playwriting. He left college, joined Frederick Warde's company, and became an actor in order to familiarize himself with stagecraft. "The Light Eternal" was first produced last January at the Alcazar in San Francisco for one week's trial. It lasted five weeks and created a furore. On Monday, April 16 last, it was put on for a run at the Macdonough theater in Oakland, Cal., where it ran for two nights, and then the great earthquake came. Several producing managers of New York heard of the marvelous success of "The Light Eternal" and opened negotiations for securing the rights, but Col. Braden, with his usual facility, plucked the plum. "The Light Eternal" deals with the tribulations of Christians at the time of Diocleslan, the Roman emperor, who preferred to live on a farm rather than in a palace. Mr. Merle's method of handling his subject shows the work of a vigorous mind with novel ideas, and the new play, according to competent judges, will prove a valuable contribution to the dramatic literature of the time.

Rosenthal, the great Austrian pianist, who is to revisit America next season, is a phenomally strong man. All the tricks of the professional man of muscle are easy for him. He can tear a pack of cards, break a horse shoe, and he can lift 500 pounds with one finger with ease. One blow of his index digit will snap a taut piano string. His chest, arm and leg development compare with Sandows. What is most remarkable about this fact is that Rosenthal never practised physical culture in the ordinary sense. He never worked in a gymnasium. His strength comes entirely from playing the piano and from swimming and walking, the latter being his two chief open air diversions.

Rosenthal's muscular power, while resulting largely from exercise at the piano forte, is one reason why he stands supreme as a performer on that instrument. To accomplish the technical feats that are as play to Rosenthal, tremendous strength and endurance, not only of the hands, arms and shoulders, but of the body and brain are essential. Superb command of every muscle and every nerve is necessary. Mentally Rosenthal is as muscular as he is physically. While preparing for virtuosoship he took a degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of Vienna. He delights in the subtleties of metaphysics, and philology is one of his hobbies. This scientific training is as much of a factor in his playing as is his physique, for it is responsible for the intimate analytical characteristic of his interpretations.

There is an interesting anecodote in connection with Rosenthal's prowess in the water. One summer he and Rubenstein were staying at cottages on opposite sides of Lake Como. The great Russian pianist invited the rising young Austrian artist to visit him on a certain evening. A storm on the appointed day demoralized the ordinary modes of transportation. Rosenthal saw that the only thing he could do to get to the other side was to swim. And swim he did, pushing ahead of him a skiff containing his clothes. In a little over two hours the pianist was on the other side of Lake Como. After dressing he hurried by cab to Rubenstein's villa. Upon relating his experience, the surprised and delighted Rubenstein exclaimed:

"You are another Leander."

"Well," replied Rosenthal, "you are the hero."

Rubenstein was Rosenthal's hero—his ideal, his model, and now that he is hailed as the equal of Rubenstein he feels that his years of labor are well repaid.

One of the most important of the new, first class productions of next season will be played in Duluth early next September. The drama is entitled "Sam Houston," and is an elaborate and genuine setting in a big, patriotic American play of one of the most picturesque and admirable figures in the history of the country, the man who carved Texas into an empire and then handed it over to the United States legislature, to prevent the secession of the state. Sam Houston was a staunch Unionist. He was a born leader of men and remarkable as a soldier, statesman and orator. Like Lincoln, he was ever ready with a pointed jest to season his arguments or to remove the sting from his rebuke. The part will be created by one of the noted actors of the country, Clay Clement, who is peculiarly fitted, temperamentally and physically, to bring to mimic life before the American people of this twentieth century the most noted pioneer empire builder of the Southwest in the days before the war, that is, from 1830 to 1864.

Mr. Clement has spent seven years studying to perfect himself for creating the role of Sam Houston, and read a mass of published and unpublished biographical material. Beyond all doubt he will look the part and live the character, better than any other actor now on the American stage. The artistic and thorough excellence of any part he undertakes is a foregone conclusion. For the big production of "Sam Houston," the most ambitious undertaking of his long career, Mr. Clement has engaged a company of over forty people who are already studying their parts. He has a large force of carpenters at work on the Auditorium stage, Chicago, building the scenery, and a force of scenic artists painting the elaborate settings. All details will be accurately characteristic of the times, and the costumes alone, which are being made by Marshall Field & Company of Chicago, will cost several thousand dollars. Some beautiful incidental music is required and to sing it properly two of the most noted vocalists of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Watrous, have been engaged for. The production will be entirely above the melodrama plane, yet intensely interesting, as it reflects one of the most stirring and dramatic periods of the country's history.

While the recent appearances of Florence Roberts at the Liberty theater and Calve at Carnegie hall served to introduce John Cort as a producing manager, his plans for the forthcoming season portend an advance which will make the Western manager an important factor among our amusement purveyors.

Following her success at the Liberty, Miss Roberts will continue in "The Strength of the Weak," beginning in Philadelphia about Sept. 17. Some time during the holidays she will return to New York in a new play which is expected to last until spring with occasional matinees of "Glaconda," "Magda," etc.

Calve will again make a concert tour under Mr. Cort's direction ,opening at Carnegie hall some time in October. Her program will introduce an innovation in concert circles, details of which the diva herself refuses to divulge.

Maude Fealy, said to be the youngest dramatic star on the American stage, will make her stellar debut about Sept. 14 in the title role of Martha Morton's latest comedy "The Illusion of Beatrice." Miss Fealy will doubtless be remembered as leading woman with Sir Henry Irving and William Gillette, E. S. Willard and William Collier. She has been a stock star at Elitch's Gardens in Denver for several summer seasons, playing a great variety of parts. Mr. Cort will bring Miss Fealy to New York in the spring after she will have made a tour of the Northwest and South.

Max Figman, who was featured with Florence Roberts last season, begins a five years' contract whereby he will star under Mr. Cort's direction in a comedy which was one of the season's successes. Mr. Figman starred several years ago in "The Marriage of Kitty," but is best remembered by theater-goers in New York for his work with Mrs. Fiske. He is one of the best light comedians of the day and will have a metropolitan hearing as soon as a new vehicle is found. In the meantime he will spend his time in the South and West.

Plans for starring Sarah Truax are hardly developed, but as soon as a suitable play is available, Mr. Cort will annex a contract whereby the popular leading woman will be added to his list of attractions.

Associated with S. Kronberg, under whose able personal direction Calve made so profitable a tour last season, Mr. Cort will direct the first American tour of "Leoncavallo" together with the subsidized orchestra from La Scala theater, Milan, and eight or ten Italian singers. The repertoire includes "Pagliacci," "La Boheme," "Roland of Berlin" and "Zaza." The tour will begin at Carnegie hall in October, and return for a farewell engagement being scheduled at the Hippodrome in December.

Another important deal was consummated whereby the William G. Stewart Opera company, now playing a summer season in Rochester, will come under Mr. Cort's direction on Aug. 1. It is his intention to establish this organization as firmly as were the Bostonians and with that idea in view the bookings have been arranged for more than one season. The repertoire consists of "Babette," "The Two Roses," "The Geisha," "Dorothy," "Girofle Girofla," "Fatinitza," "Fledermaus" and "Chimes of Normandy." The personnel of the cast includes Edna Fassett, Edgar Temple, Bessie Fairburn, George Leslie and others. At least one new opera will be tried each season and whenever the success warrants the production will be seen in New York.

With this formidable array of attractions on tour, and a circuit of sixty-eight first-class theaters in the Northwest, it would appear that John Cort had gathered a considerable amount of work for one man's enterprises.

The central figure bears a striking resemblance to one of our most conspicuous leaders of finance today—John D. Rockefeller. Another character, singularly enough, has the peculiarities and courageous bearings of an Ida Tarbell, the his-

Early in the coming autumn, Edward A. Braden will produce a play that is destined to make a marked impression upon the religious world, as well as upon habitual theater-goers. It is a dramatization of Marie Corelli's famous work, "Barabbas," by the distinguished authoress herself. All the civilized world knows that what Marie Corelli writes is well worth taking notice of. Mr. Braden has secured from the authoress the dramatic rights of "Barabbas" for both America and Europe, and will produce it for the first time on any stage next October in New York city. The play is laid in Jerusalem and its environments at the time of the trial and crucifixion of Christ. The Barabbas of the play is the same Barabbas of the scriptures, only that the authoress has made of him a most interesting, loveable character.

SOME ANGELS ARE EASY

Two Young Men Who Have Dropped $150,000 Each ---One Wants His Betrothed to Become a Star.

New York, June 30.—"That story about a playwright who produced his own play on Broadway at a cost of only a measly $500 sounds pretty good, but it is calculated to give the public the wrong idea of the average financial situation surrounding the production of a new piece at a first-class theater," said a theatrical manager to the Sun. "By way of contrast, the theatrical profession is now talking of the splurge made during the past season by two rich young men who are now able to figure up approximately the cost of being an angel for a new show.

"Each of these young men dropped in the neighborhood of $150,000 in real money; but both are in the ring still, and as they are showing no apparent signs of contracting frigid pedal extremities, they stand to lose considerable more next season. As each of the G. Whatawads has about six or ten millions in reserve, the financial losses so far are about as important as the biggest dent you could make with a hammer on the Washington monument.

"One of these young men is from Butte, Mont., and he became interested in theatricals because he is engaged to marry a girl who was formerly in the chorus of a comic opera. He has produced three comic operas in succession for the purpose of giving this young lady a chance to shine in the center of the stage, and he is now arranging for a fourth production, to go out next season, by which time, he declares, he and the young lady will be married.

"The girl in the case has visited the young man's mother and sisters, who approve of the match and are quite willing that he should continue to spend money to advance her career on the stage.

"The other young man hails from a New England town, and invested his money in theatricals solely because he believed large profits would ensue. He was not interested in advancing the artistic career of any actress, and has made his speculation in the show business just as he would invest in real estate, a factory or any other commercial enterprise.

"His losses, while heavy, have been due to errors of judgment in selecting plays, but he believes he has now acquired sufficient experience to get back a considerable sum next season.

"The old proverb about the woman in the case applies with especial force to any theatrical venture. And nine times out of ten where a man's judgment is influenced by the personal equation in the shape of a pretty girl, the venture fails.

"That seems to have been the hoodoo that has pursued the Butte man during the last year. He has spent money lavishly in every direction to secure success. But instead of picking out a good piece of theatrical property and then engaging a good all around cast of players for it, he has first placed the ex-chorus girl in the center of the stage and tried to surround her with pleasing artists who would not overshadow her.

"His first comic opera, produced in Chicago last summer, ran eight or ten weeks and cost him about $35,000. Some of the newspaper critics said the young lady in the case gave promise of talent and this determined the millionaire to try again.

"Casting his elaborate production into the discard, he went right ahead on a more lavish scale than ever to produce a second comic opera, which he produced in Boston. He leased outright one of the leading Boston theaters for a couple of months and put on another $40,000 failure. One reason for this failure, I think, was that the manager of the theater, having secured the rent in advance, went off yachting, and never came near the theater during the time the piece was running there.

"He drew down $20,000 as his bait for the rental period, and naturally he didn't worry much more whether the piece succeeded or not. Meanwhile the Butte chap did all he could in a losing game, and after dropping $40,000 closed the show.

"His third speculation was the most disastrous of all, but he accomplished his chief aim, which was to make the young lady in the case a nine days' celebrity in the profession. Giving his third opera a magnificent mounting, with a great company of principals and elaborate costumes, he had the girl cast for the central figure in the story, and a clever libettist arranged that she should make her initial entree on a white horse.

"The girl, by the way, has very pretty red hair, and this spectacle of a red-haired girl on a white horse caught on. But the show did not, and though it subsequently finished out the season on the road, it is said that it cost the backer approximately $75,000 to keep it going.

"This shows what some comic opera productions cost. Although it is nearly a record breaking case in the way of losing money to advance the professional reputation of a mere girl, it is almost equaled by his own announcement that he intends to keep on producing operas. His exhibition of nerve in continuing the game in spite of unprecedented losses may be due to his Western training and the fact that he is a member of the copper crowd of Montana and likes nothing better than a swift game of poker without any limit.

"The New England millionaire whose plunge has been watched with interest this season, lacks the picturesque qualities of the Westerner, but he too seems to show some of the same staying qualities in sitting in a losing game. No one has yet been able to explain how he became interested in theatricals, but the most likely story is that, having made the acquaintance of many visiting managers who came to his home town in Massachusetts, he fell in with several of them on a visit to New York and was taken around to see some of the shows.

A couple of friends who knew of a supposedly good thing in the way of a new comic opera that could be purchased, talked figures to him one night until he consented to invest in the enterprise. But before he paid over a dollar of his money he had the producing firm incorporated as a stock company, with himself in control, and his name on the door of their offices.

He didn't let any one else handle his money. He accepted advice, it is true, but he was on deck all the time to see where the money went. And of course, being an inexperienced man, he paid out far more money than was necessary.

"Either one of the two managers with whom he had allied himself could have saved him probably $20,000 on the production alone, but he plunged to the limit. It cost $72,000 to raise the curtain on his first venture, a comic opera, and then many thousands more were spent in engaging librettists to rewrite the show, having stage managers prepare new dances, etc.

"This New England millionaire next conceived the idea that musical comedy was too expensive to dally with, and that money could be made much faster by producing dramas. He tried out a Western melodrama up state somewhere, with an $18,000 production of beautiful scenery and a fine cast, but a week on the road convinced him that the play was worthless, and it was never even brought into New York.

"Having this beautiful scenery on his hands, led him to produce another Western play in Philadelphia, but while the scenery fitted the play, the play itself was no good, and after four weeks that was thrown away.

"Still he had that beautiful scenery on his hands, and so it was not many weeks after that New York finally saw two of these beautiful stage pictures in a third dramatic production, which, after a brief existence, was finally laid away. These three productions proved heavy losses to the firm. Yet already the young millionaire is writing checks for new productions to be made next season, showing that he, too, proposes to continue in the game until the luck turns.

"There have been many angels on Broadway, but none of them expended money so lavishly as a California millionaire, who, having written the music of an opera, paid $120,000 for the privilege of seeing it played at a Broadway theater for two weeks. He rented the theater outright for five weeks at a cost of $17,500, but after two weeks the company broke up after a series of rows, disputes and financial troubles without equal.

"On the brief tour of two weeks before coming into New York, this generous angel provided every chorus girl with her sleeping car berths free. Four special sleeping cars were hauled on a special train, and everyone lived on the train during the two weeks' journey.

"The angel even provided a special dining car and fed the company for nothing during the two weeks. When some one told him that it was not customary to furnish free sleeping cars for the chorus girls and to feed them for nothing, he replied that each of the girls was accustomed to the best of everything, and that as the hotels in the one-night stands were bad, he preferred to spend the money rather than run any risk of any of the girls becoming ill on inferior food.

"The chorus girls who made that memorable trip on the special train, eating and living at the angel's expense, still speak regretfully of the passing from view of the best angel ever seen on Broadway."

WILDE WROTE THIS PLAY

And Then It Disappeared Only to be Resurrected by His Literary Executor---Plot Used by Another.

London, June 30.—At the moment of writing the theatrical event of the future which is being awaited with most interest in London is the coming production of Oscar Wilde's short unpublished play, "A Florentine Tragedy," which will be given an especially strong cast at the King's Hall, Convent Garden.

This is undoubtedly one of the most striking pieces of work that its author ever did, and it would not be surprising if the production in London led to performances of it being given in the United States, but perhaps the most interesting thing about the play is the curious story of its disappearance from its author's study soon after it was originally completed, and of how, five years afterward, another draft was discovered by Wilde's literary executor and by him pieced together for use upon the stage.

This story has just come to light, having been related to Robert Ross, the editor of Wilde's "De Profundis," apropos of the first production of the little play. According to Dr. Ross, "A Florentine Tragedy" was originally written for George Alexander and was completed in April, 1895, only a few days before Wilde was declared a bankrupt. "My friend then asked me," said Mr. Ross, "to go to his house and take possession of all his unpublished manuscripts, and I managed to reach his residence just before the bailiffs entered. Of course, the author's letters and manuscripts would have been exempt from seizure, but I found that the manuscript of "A Florentine Tragedy," with the manuscripts of two other unpublished plays, and the enlarged version of "The Portrait of Mr. W. H.," upon which I knew Wilde was engaged, had mysteriously disappeared. Someone had been there before me."

Ross adds that the thief was never discovered, nor did the stolen manuscrips of "A Florentine Tragedy' and "The Portrait of Mr. W. H." ever come to light, although that of the third play, "The Duchess of Padua," was discovered by a friend of Wilde's in a second-hand bookshop in London in 1897, and promptly forwarded to its author in Paris. After Wilde's death in 1900, however, Mr. Ross says he had occasion to sort a mass of letters and papers which had been forwarded to him by the author's solicitors, and among them he found some loose sheets containing the draft of a play which he recognized as the "Florentine Tragedy."

Oddly enough, there is another chapter to the rather singular story of this Oscar Wilde play, for the coming production of "A Florentine Tragedy," has led a well known English author and playwright to come forward with a voluntary statement, lest he should be accused of literary theft after the presentation of the piece. This is W. J. Locke, who wrote "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," and who produced a one-act play a while ago called "Flower o' the Rose," in which story and especially the concluding incident of "The Florentine Tragedy" were exactly reproduced. But Mr. Locke says that, although he knew the idea of his piece was Oscar Wilde's, he had no idea that Wilde had carried out his intention of writing a play around it. It seems that long after Wilde's death, Locke was told by Lewis Waller, the actor, that the author of "Lady Windermere's Fan" had offered to write "A Florentine Tragedy" for him, but that the play never had been actually written. "Then why should I not write you a play on the Florentine theme?" said Locke, and Waller thought it a good idea. "All he had told me of it," said Locke, "had been told in five minutes—it was simply the situation and the two concluding lines."

So Locke wrote his "Flower o' the Rose" and it was done at the Clement Scott benefit matinee a year or two ago, when, Mr. Locke says, it was his intention that the piece should be announced as "founded on a plot by the late Oscar Wilde." To this, however, the puritanic oragnizers of the matinee objected, it seems, and so now that the original Wilde play has come to light Mr. Locke is naturally anxious that the circumstances under which his "Flower o' the Rose" was written should be known fully.

THE GLORIES OF THE CIRCUS

Ringling Brothers' circus day will begin with the splendid street pageant leaving the show grounds at 10 o'clock. This feature of the great shows is known here as surpassingly big and resplendent. The procession is always spick and span in every detail, and the people and animals are smart and contented looking. A large number of the animal cages and dens are open, and a huge herd of forty elephants, gayly caparisoned, lumbering patiently through the crowded streets, is a sight of a lifetime. The wild animal collection with this show is the most extensive and valuable in the world and requires 108 cages, dens and lairs to house it.

The soldiery of the great nations of the world are represented by correctly uniformed companies equipped with colors and glistening accoutrements. Elaborately carved floats follow, upon which are depicted in magnificent allegory typical phases of national life and character. These living pictures are artistic creations, munificently presented and idealize in charming form and color their worldwide subjects. Lilliputian vehicles, with fairyland heroes and heroines, and squadrons of conceited ponies, beribboned and curled, delight the little people. There are 650 horses with the show and all of them appear in the street procession. More than 300 of these animals are of the finest breeding and education, and valued beyond price as performers. This number is more than twice as many as are owned by any other show. It represents a fortune in itself, but is only in keeping with the other big and excelling departments of Ringling Brothers' extraordinary circus growth. Modishly gowned equestriennes, gallant riders of knightly grace and style; daring horsemen of the plains and warrior fame; soldiers bold from every clime; and myriad other features of attractive personage, are woven into this magnificent street spectacle. Acrobats, clowns and musical "Merry Andrews" keep the fun rolling. The Ringling Brothers have always had a progressive, modern and incomparably big show, but this year they have gone to amazingly extravagant lengths in every department, not only surpassing their best previous achievements, but undoubtedly have reached the limit of human possibility. It takes 85 double length cars to transport the enormous shows.

Two exhibitions will be given here Monday, July 9, in the afternoon at 2 o'clock and in the evening at 8 o'clock. Reserved numbered seats and admission tickets will be sold at the downtown ticket office at exactly the same prices charged in the ticket wagons on the show grounds.

MIDNIGHT PHOTOS A NEW LONDON FAD.

London, June 29.—Midnight photography is a business that has lately arisen in the West end. On the night of the of their majesties' courts the fashionable studios may be seen brilliantly lighted from 12 to 3 a. m., with lines of carriages waiting outside.

For the convenience of ladies attending the evening ceremonies at Buckingham palace, photographers are ready to take photographs in the "small hours."

All American debutantes wish to be photographed as gowned for one of the great events of their social lives, and cannot spare the hours necessary for arraying themselves afresh in their presentation gowns. The photographers accordingly have arranged to take midnight pictures of court splendor.

After the palace ordeal is over the studio is a pleasant rendevous, where the evening's function may be discussed and refreshment taken. For the photographers these occasions are the busiest hours of their experience.

MISSISSIPPI BOY MOUNTAIN IS DEAD.

Hattiesburg, Miss., June 29.—Earl Dobbins, the champion fat boy of the United States, died at his home here after a brief illness from congestion of the bowels.

Earl was 14 years of age and weighed 407 pounds. He was widely known because of his great avoirdupois. His father, C. W. Dobbins, is a well known hotel man. Both his parents are of normal size and weight.

Earl was "born fat," and added to his stoutness each day up to about 18 months ago. He simply rolled in flesh. His features were tiny compared to his great weight.

He was of a studious temperament and well advanced for his years. Being burdened with the weight that is usually allotted to three ordinary men, Earl, of course, was not an athlete. He could not run a dozen steps, and his pedestrianism was limited. His tastes were exceedingly simple. He was not a gourmand.

TRUST WILL RAISE PRICE OF COFFINS.

Boston, June 29.—Coffins, breaking their custom for centuries for taking a downward course, are now going up. The coffin manufacturers' trust has sent out a circular letter to the undertakers declaring that the price of coffins will be raised 25 per cent.

The five big manufacturers of caskets say the increased cost of material is the reason of the raise in price. The undertakers in New England who have not a large supply of coffins on hand will be forced to pay the advanced rate.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

GENERAL AGENTS AT HEAD OF THE LAKES.

LOWER ROW—C. L. Kennedy, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; T. E. Blanche, Northern Pacific; G. M. Smith, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha.

When the announcement came that George H. Anthony, general agent in Duluth of the Wisconsin Central railroad, was to be transferred to Winnipeg, brother members of the Head of the Lakes General Agents' association, of which Mr. Anthony was a member, arranged to give him a farewell dinner. The spread was a success in every way. Following the dinner it was proposed that, before the Wisconsin Central man left the city, the members of the organization get together and have a group photograph taken. This was done, and herewith is shown a reproduction of the photograph. The association is composed of general railroad and steamship agents, and meets once a month in either Duluth or Superior to discuss matters of interest to its members.

ERIE ROAD'S NEW FERRY HOUSE, NEW YORK

NEW FERRY HOUSE FOR THE ERIE RAILROAD IN NEW YORK.

With the destruction of the Erie ferry-house at the foot of West Twenty-third street, to make room for a new one, there disappears an historic landmark of New York city.

When it was opened to the public in May, 1868, Twenty-third street, now one of the busiest of New York streets, was little more than a country road connecting the city proper with "Chelsea," then little more than a thriving village within the city. The idea of establishing a ferry so far up town to connect with a Jersey City terminal was deemed chimerical by many. The only rapid transit system of those days were huge, rumbling, uncomfortable busses running through Broadway, with one line going west through Twenty-third street as far as Ninth avenue to the barns.

Yet the Erie ferryhouse was considered so much of an architectural addition to the city that the Harper's Weekly and Frank Leslie's Paper of those days considered it worthy of illustration and elaborate description. The new ferryhouse at once began to play an active part in the rapid transit of those days. When the Erie's new ferryboats Erie, James Fisk, Jr., and Jay Gould were put on the route, downtown business men, who were in a hurry to reach the Chelsea and Greenwich village sections or the then "Upper West side," used to take the Pavonia ferry from Chambers street to Jersey City and then the ferryboats from there to Twenty-third street. This route was even largely used at so late a date as during the recent strike on the subway, as a quick and sure route up town.

This new water route achieved an instant success, and was so great an accommodation to the public that the Pennsylvania, and later the Lackawanna and Jersey Central, established ferry stations adjoining the Erie. The original Pennsylvania ferryhouse still stands. The destruction by fire in December last of the newly-built Lackawanna and Jersey Central stations is a matter of very recent history. The old Erie station, although practically adjoining these stations, escaped the fire without even a scorching. Wreckers are now establishing what fire could not do, by removing the old structure.

The New Station.

In place of this historic old pile is now rising a new station of most modern construction, and with all the facilities that modern transportation methods require. The house is located on a plot 200 by 298 feet and is two stories in height. The building is of steel construction, with as little wood as possible used in its finishing. The party walls separating it from the Pennsylvania ferryhouse on the north and the Lackawanna on the south are of fire-proof construction, extending from the lowest surface of the water up to and through the roof, which is what is generally known as a slag roof. The front elevation is to be entirely sheathed with decorated copper, aged prematurely by a by a comparatively new process, which gives it a delicate tint of green and entirely relieves the somberness usual in copper-sheathed buildings.

The street frontage is 181 feet, with a height of 45 feet, except in the center, where a decorative panel rises 10 feet above the general height. This panel 10 feet in height and 50 feet in length, represents an old Roman galley with dolphins rampant, done in copper. The galley is 25 feet long at the base and 12 feet in height. Over the center of this and 70 feet from the street surface is a globe inclosing incandescent lights aggregating 500 candle power. The entrances, which are sheltered from the weather by a canopy 50 feet in width, are also studded with electric lights, as is the edge of the canopy itself. Above these will blaze the word "Erie," also in electric lights, the letters of the name being each five feet in height.

The river elevation, also finished in copper, consists of three massive arches, the upper and lower of which contain the ferry slips, with accommodations for the double-decked ferry boats. This front also has the familiar Erie sign in electric letters. The interior finish is of sheet metal. All partitions are filled with mineral wool, which in itself is practically fireproof. Thebuilding is to be heated with steam and lighted with electricity throughout.

The nectnarl arch of the steel front affords entrance to the ticket office lobby, 40x44 feet on the ground floor. From this there are two entrances to the waiting room, 64x60 feet, which is supplemented by a commodious ladies' toilet and a smoking room. Back of this room is the cab stand with 6,000 feet of floor space connected with all train and passenger gangways, and both incoming and outgoing baggage rooms, the former with 1,800 square feet of space and the latter with 2,400. There is also a room for unclaimed baggage occupying 1,100 square feet of space. Telegraph, pullman car, baggage transfer and cab offices are on this floor, as are also telephone booths, news stands, parcel room and other public conveniences.

A broad staircase leads from the waiting room to a somewhat larger one on the second floor, 60x80 feet. Here also are a ladies' retiring room, a smoking room, toilet, and comfortable seats about the sides of the room, and surrounding the open "well" that admits daylight to the floor below. Skylights and windows provide ample light for the upper waiting room. From here entrance is had direct to the upper decks of the ferry boats, the lower decks being reached from the ground floor. Eight offices for the Erie's clerical forces are provided on the Twenty-third street front of this floor. These are connected by a passageway direct to the street.

THE OLD ERIE FERRY HOUSE.

To Face a Public Park.

In carrying out what is known as "the Chelsea improvement," the city department of docks and ferries has built a new sea wall 159 feet westerly from the old one at the site of the new Erie station. This has created a new strip of land 150 feet in width west of Thirteenth avenue, on which the old ferry building faced. This reclaimed strip is to be paved with asphalt and kept free from buildings, creating, in conjunction with Thirteenth avenue, a clear street 250 feet in width. On the easterly side of this street the land betwen Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets for a block back to Twelfth avenue, formerly occupied by the Erie as a freight yard, will be converted into a public park which will be a fitting finish to the improvements in this section. The present system of street railway tracks will be changed to conform with the new location of the ferry house. Cars will come down Twenty-third street and by means of a loop pass along the entire front of the ferry house, landing passengers under the canopy, and then proceed around the park through Twenty-second street, and so to the old Twenty-third street tracks, an arrangement which gives the best service imaginable to all the ferry houses in the vicinity.

How to Break Up a Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. For sale by all leading druggists.

WILLIAM G., THE ROCKEFELLER OF TOMORROW

He's More of a Sportsman Than Any Other Member of His Family Except His Uncle Frank---Not Straightlaced Like John D., Jr., But a "Model Family Man"---Is a Good Grand Juror and Proud of it--Severely Trained When Young, He Is Now a Hard Worker.

How John D., Sr., the Rockefeller of Today, and in the Course of Events Soon to be Rockefeller of Tomorrow, Swung His Benefactions From the University of Rochester Some Years Ago to the University of Chicago --- Wiliams' Charities.

By DEXTER MARSHALL.

The Rockefeller of tomorrow, William G., son of William, nephew of John D., and cousin of John D., Jr., is 33, according to the records, though he seems 38 or 40.

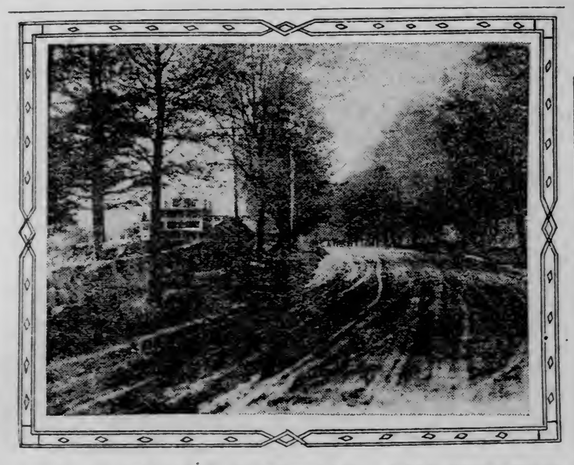

He is almost six feet tall, and is a sturdy looking chap, despite the occasionally published statements to the contrary. He has a long neck, his hair is getting thin, except at the sides and back of his head, and his upper lip is covered with a stiff, dark, well clipped mustache. His nose is longer, higher and more hooked than any other nose in the Rockefeller family.

His mouth is fuller than most Rockefeller mouths and he laughs oftener than any other member of the famous oil family, except his uncle Frank, who is on excellent terms both with William G. and "Brother William," but who hasn't any use at all for the John Ds., father and son. William G.'s laugh is full, hearty and unrestrained. When it breaks out many little wrinkles appear about his eyes, and his whole face is affected. His voice is clear and not unpleasant.

Next to Frank Rockefeller—a famous nimrod—William G. is the best sportsman in his family, though William, his father, used to be a great driver of trotting horses, and soon after removing his business quarters from Cleveland to New York established a private deer park at Greenwich, Connecticut, and the finest private trotting track in all New England. It was then that he drove his celebrated $50,000 team of trotters, Cleora and Independence. He is not so much interested in harness horses nowadays.

WILLIAM G., THE ROCKEFELLER OF TOMORROW.

HOME OF WILLIAM G. ROCKEFELLER, NEAR GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT.

William G. lives at Greenwich, on the place originally occupied by his father there, in a house which the latter rebuilt for his son. It is a frame structure, very large, rather plain, reached by an unusually picturesque drive of two or three miles from the station, and standing just across the road from the old deer park.

He is not straitlaced like his cousin, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the boys of Greenwich like him. Next to the deer park there is a field of several acres on which local amateur baseball clubs have been privileged to play for years. Three or four years ago a special game was planned there between the Greenwich Volunteers and the Yonkers Field club. There was nothing unusual about it except that the members of both teams being wage-earners and unable to play on week days, it was to be played on Sunday.

When the boys reached the field, Sunday morning, they found a notice posted up which read:

NO TRESPASSING.
BASEBALL FORBIDDEN.
Order of
WILLIAM ROCKEFELLER.

The boys didn't believe the order was genuine, and appealed indignantly to Mr. Rockefeller's superintendent. He didn't believe in its genuineness, either; he had heard nothing about it, and as William G. was not at home just then, appealed to Mrs. Rockefeller on behalf of the boys. She settled the matter, favorably to the boys, in an instant. Her husband, she was sure, had never ordered the notice put up, and hadn't the slightest objection to their playing the game as planned. Later it came out that two church deacons were the real objectors. When they saw the crowd going to the game they sent an officer of the law to stop the fun, but the game was played all the same.

William Rockefeller hunts and fishes with keen enjoyment and spends a part of every year on his father's 50,000 acre "private park" in the Adirondacks, which he seems to be maintaining in spite of Oliver Lamora, an old French Canadian not unknown to newspaper fame, and a few other residents of the former lumbering village of Brandon, who wouln't sell out after Rockefeller had bought the property of all the larger landholders.

Most newspaper readers will remember the bitter protests made against the "wiping off the map" of Brandon, and how after the murder of O. P. Dexter, millionair Adirondack land owners two or three years ago, William Rockefeller himself, according to the dispatches, was threatened with death by a $50,000 bullet if he ventured into the region. William G. Rockefeller is the only one of the family who has ever talked for publication about this trouble. He ridiculed the notion that there had been any threats, said his father was afraid of "neither murderers nor blackmailers," and maintained that the entire anti-Rockefeller agitation at Brandon was due to a petty local lawyer who had been collecting money in fifty-cent and dollar lots to keep up the fight.

William G. Rockefeller is as fond of dogs as his Uncle Frank is fond of bears, and his kennel of beagles is one of the show features of the Rockfeller place at Greenwich. He shares his fondness for beagles with Harry Payne Whitney, who has a fine kennel of them on his Long Island place, and the two young millionaires often exchange visits to examine each other's dogs and compare notes in 'beagleology." Both Rockefeller's and Whitney's dogs have taken prizes at many bench shows.

Wm. G. Rockefeller as a Grand Juror.

So far as this writer knows, William G. Rockefeller is the only member of the family who has ever taken any part whatever in the conduct of public affairs.

Nor has he ever sought office or been a factor in any campaign, local, state or national. But within the last few years, his legal residence being in New York city, he has served on the grand jury, several times—oftener, perhaps, than any other citizen, though of that I am not sure.

His first appearance as grand jury foreman was seven or eight years ago, and the newspapers, quite naturally, sent reporters to look him over and interview him if possible; also photographers to make snap shots of him. The photographers were never successful, but occasionally he was known to talk a little. Once, when asked whether he had ever tried to avoid doing jury duty, he answered rather sharply:

"Of course not. It isn't the pleasantest thing in the world to attend to, but somebody has to do it, and when it comes my turn there is no reason why I should shirk. If the example of those who shirk were generally followed there would be no jurors at all. The law is supposed to treat everybody alike, and there's no reason why a rich man, any more than a poor man should evade helping to carry on the work of the courts."

There was some lifting eyebrows when his reference to the law's supposed "impartiality" was published, but all the same William G. Rockefeller has always been an admirable grand juror.

As the presiding officer of the grand jury he arrived on time—11 a. m.—invariably; he picked up the business in hand without unnecessary delay and he kept it moving steadily every day till the day's work was completed, often working from fifteen minutes to half an hour overtime.

At first some of the grand jurors demurred with regard to the overtime, but he explained that, in his judgment, whatever case was under consideration when the regular time for adjournment came around should be finished then and there, while its points were fresh in the minds of the grand jurors. He added that the grand jurors were all busy men, probably, as he was himself, and that the completion of all the cases taken up daily would materially lessen the number of days the jury would have to sit, even if it did use up a little more time each day.

From that time on there was no objection to his plans, especially as it was seen early in the session that while he was thoroughness itself in the examination of witnesses, he worked with the greatest expedition.

Although the district attorney of the county is supposed to be present while the grand jury is in session, to pass upon law points, it is the duty of the grand jury foreman to examine every witness himself, exactly as a lawyer examines a witness during a trial. After the foreman has asked all the questions he cares to, the other jurors are privileged to question the witness, and a foreman lacking in thoroughness would leave many points uncovered that would have to be taken up by his fellows.

But this foreman did his work with such lawyerlike thoroughness that there rarely remained any questions for the district attorney to make. It should be added that his plan of finishing all the cases every day was fully appreciated by the witnesses who thereby were never obliged to go to court more than one day for examination. Thus it has fallen out that whenever since his first grand jury experience William G. Rockefeller has been a member of the panel, the judge before whom the jury was organized has chosen him for the foreman, a compliment of which he is really very proud.

William G.'s Severe Training.

William G. Rockefeller's friends say that his thoroughness as a grand juror is equaled by his thoroughness in business, and that both are due to the simple, hard training he received when young, as a son of one of the "original" Rockefellers and the nephew of another.

As soon as he was out of college he was assigned to a desk in the gray building at No. 26 Broadway, in which the world's greatest monopoly is housed. From the first it was impressed upon him that he might some day be called upon to be the business head of the house of Rockefeller, and that, therefore, it would be positively necessary for him to understand all the ins and outs of the family holdings, all the history of the family's enterprises, and the significance of all the family's traditions.

His uncle, John D.'s, saying, that "it is impossible to understand the whole of anything without being familiar with all its parts," was deeply impressed upon him, and the young man devoted some years to acquiring a knwoledge of the details, not only of the Standard Oil's business, but also of the business carried on by all the corporations in which Rockefeller money is invested.

This invoived the closest application, an incredible amount of labor, and great powers of assimilation. There could be nothing of the dilettante about any one who should prepare himself to take up the burdens that will probably be his to bear by and by, and it is quite possible that he shrank from the task at first. It is understood, however, that there may have been something slightly akin to jealousy for a while between him and his cousin, John D., Jr., since had the latter proved fit for it, his father would undoubtedly have preferred that he should ultimately assume the family headship.

It was seen long ago, however, that John D., Jr., would never be the man for that place. His health is insufficient, for one thing, and it is said that he is lacking in certain other qualifications. Perhaps it would not be hard for any one who has read the reports of his remarkable Bible talks before his Sunday school class to understand something of these lacks.

The probability that it would be William G. and not John D., Jr., who would take up the burden when his father and uncle are ready to lay it down was hinted at in various ways two or three years ago. Lawson of Boston, intimately familiar with Standard Oil and other Rockefeller affairs in the early days of Amalgamated Copper, said as much in his Frenzied Finance, and ever since then the probability has been increasing.

Last March, soon after the publication of the alarming reports of William Rockefeller's bad health were received from abroad, definite and seemingly authentic statements were put forth that the fortunes of the Rockefellers are not to be instrusted to the young man "with the eyeglasses, the suppressed lisp and a certain dilettantist habit of expounding the sacred Scriptures," but that William G. has been definitely agreed upon as the man.

It was pointed out that this young man would have a different problem to wrestle with than had come up in the management of any of America's multi-million fortunes. Most of the other solidified estates have come directly from a single creator; it was so with the Astor, the Vanderbilt, the Gould, the Gerry and other great fortunes.

In each of these instances the elder son took the helm, but in the case of the Rockefellers, William G. will have charge both of the fortunes accumulated by his father and that accumulated by his uncle. These include "majority holdings of Standard Oil certificates, probably majority holdings of the St. Paul and other railroad corporations and undoubtedly the Rockefeler interest in the United States Steel corporation." Curiously enough, it was then said that William Rockefeller's copper properties are not to be included among the common Rockefeller holdings.

"An Ideal Family Man."

It is not surprising with all this responsibility looming before him that William G. Rockefeller has been one of the steadiest men at his desk of all those who daily go to the Standard Oil headquarters to earn their bread. Besides, he is now as intensely interested in the vast and manifold interests with which he is connected as ever his uncle was and much more than his father has ever seemed to be.

William Rockefeller, as those who have followed his movements, has always seemed almost pathetically in search of amusement. The great business of which he was a part, but which owed its unprecedented expansion to his brother, seemed to irk William, hence his fast horses, his deer park and his box at the opera, forms of amusement in which John D. never indulged.

William G. has all his father's taste for amusement without his restlessness; all his uncle's keen interest in the business without the ostentatious religionism inherited by John D., Jr., which is said to include a rather close and sometimes annoying supervision of the personal morals of Standard Oil employes and a desire to know as minutely as possible their incomings and outcomings, both in busines hours and out.

William G.'s family life, however, is described as altogether what it should be. He was married to Miss Elsie Stillman, daughter of James Stillman, the banker, ten years ago. They have one son, who is described as a mechanical prodigy, though still only a mere child.

So far as the world knows there was no special romance in the match which not only united William G. Rockefeller and Elsie Stillman, but the interests of the country's greatest banking establishment with those of the greatest oil dealers in the world. But there was a romance in the marriage of William G.'s youngest brother, Percy A., with Isabel G. Stillman, the banker's younger daughter, albeit it was of the most conventional sort and admirably adapted to the needs of the cheap story writer.

Not long after William G.'s marriage, Percy fell ill at his brother's house. During that illness the younger Miss Stillman came to know the young man better than ever before, and it was not long after his convalescence was announced that the announcement of their marriage came out.

Percy Rockefeller has kept out of the limelight of publicity even more than William G., whose last public appearance—and almost his first, except as a grand juror—was in April of the present year, when he was called as a witness by the inquisitive Mr. Hadley, Missouri's attorney general, in the course of his inquiry held in New York as to whether the Standard Oil had violated any Missouri laws.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.,
Who Has Shaved His Mustache Since This Photograph Was Taken.

At that time William G. strove as hard as any other member of the Standard crowd to avoid being sketched by the newspaper artists, but he wouldn't have done so had he not been prompted by some of the older men. While on the stand he behaved himself like a veteran, exhibiting all the skill of a multi-millionaire who had been in the habit of answering disagreeable questions in court all his life. And at the end, after a most grueling strain, he showed a more level head than any of the older ones. As he stepped down from the stand he placed his hand on Attorney General Hadley's shoulder and said good-naturedly.

"Well, old man, you let me down easy, didn't you?"

No Rockefeller except John D., the elder, has ever been ostentatious in his giving. His brother William—father of William G.—has sometimes been suspected of being "a little near," as they put it in Greenwich. Yet William maintains his charities, though with a secretiveness that may be born of a supersensitive desire not to be considered an imitator of his brother.

Thus, in the winter of 1893-4, when there was much destitution in New York, William Rockefeller gave a very large sum of money to a friend with instructions to turn it over to one of the standard charitable organizations of the city, but under no circumstances to make his name public. It was through the sheer carelessness only that any one knew of his, and when it was mentioned in his hearing Mr. Rockefeller bore himself like a man who was accused of committing an offense.

Once, also, when he heard of a family in which the mother had died suddenly after which all the six children were attacked with malignant diphtheria, leaving the father, a wage earner, to care for the children alone, with the danger that the entire family might be thrown upon the town, Mr. Rockefeller went to the rescue, paying the funeral expenses, liquidating the doctor's bill and furnishing a nurse. This was done anonymously, however, and the father never knew who his good Samaritan was.

It is so with William G.'s charities. No one, not even his intimates, knows what his charities are, but every one of them believes that he gives extensively. It is only fair to both the John D. Rockefellers to say that while the gifts of the elder to institutions of learning and his other great benefactions are given the widest publicity, no one knows much about the money he gives t orelieve the needy, though the Rockefeller acquaintances understand that he gives a great deal in that way.

ONE OF THE LATEST SNAP SHOTS OF JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, SR., WHO WILL BY AND BY BE THE ROCKEFELLER OF YESTERDAY.

SOME OF WILLIAM G. ROCKEFELLERS BEAGLES.

So much for the Rockefeller of Tomorrow, his antecedents, his characteristics and the problems which confront him. John D. Rockefeller of Today, will soon be the Rockefeller of Yesterday, in the natural course of events.

That whatever may be John D. Rockefeller's faults, the institutions he has founded and assisted will be factors in the national life long after he has passed away, there can be no doubt.

Apropos of his interest in the University of Chicago, it may be said that seventeen or eighteen years ago it was generally expected that Mr. Rockefeller was getting ready to do for the University of Rochester what he has since done for the Chicago institution. Young Prof. Strong of the "Rochester Baptist Strongs" was then courting Miss Elizabeth Rockefeller, whom later he married, and whose broken health is the cause of John D.'s present European visit.

Like practically all the smaller colleges, the Rochester University was denominational (Baptist); its president, the still revered, though now deceased, Dr. M. B. Anderson, was an ordained minister, and the religious welfare of its students was looked after as closely as their intellectual progress.

The Rochester Theological Seminary was connected with the school in a way, and its then chief building, "Rockefeller Hall," still standing, was probably the first structure erected in behalf of either religion or education with Rockefeller money. Every year John D. himself was an honored guest of the university at commencement season, and he made at least one contribution to the school. Nothing then was too good for Rockefeller in Rochester.

At about that time a certain graduate of the Rochester University, a lawyer by profession, began to make money pretty fast out of various real estate and building operations in New York city. Like many another alumnus of many another college, he was intensely loyal to his Alma Mater. He was always in Rochester at commencement time; he was always finding jobs for promising Rochester graduates and he began to talk large about the extensive benefactions he proposed bestowing on the institution.

Moreover, he began actually to give and with some freedom. Rochester graduates whom he had "placed" advantageously in the metropolis used to write and Rochesterians who visited New York used enthusiastically to tell their fellow townsmen about the rows upon rows of new houses and flat buildings in the far uptown section of Manhattan Island, called Harlem:

It appeared so clear to the friends of the university, both that this man meant to give the institution a lot of money and that he was sure to have the money to give that he soon became a strong rival of John D. Rockefeller in their affections. For some time the latter's name and personality had been talked over, but now he had to share first place with another.

Naturally this couldn't go on. Some men might not have objected to a divided loyalty; some men might have welcomed help in the building up of their pet school, but apparently John D. Rockefeller was not one of them. It had to be Rockefeller or the other chap, and as the latter would not stop giving, and promising to give more, Rockefeller gradually withdrew from the contest by ceasing his benefactions.

There may have been other reasons for his actions, such as differences as to the university's policy and the like, but this was understood as the surface reason. At all events the dream of greatness, through Rockefeller, long cherished by the friends of Rochester's university, was found, eventually, to be nothing more than a dream.

TRYING TO LENGTHEN THE LIVES OF POLES

Boston, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The summer campaign of the men who carry the telephone into still more distant places each year is in full swing. From the time the frost leaves the ground in spring till it hardens the earth in the fall against the onslaught of pick and shovel, the construction army marches back and forth, the length and breadth of the country, setting poles and stringing wires. And now, when the days are longest and the skies are clearest, their campaign is the most strenuous.

To most travelers on a country highway where the Bell forces are engaged in the pioneer work of their battle against time and distance, all telephone poles look a good deal alike. But to the engineers the pole lines present many puzzling problems, chief among which is that of prolonging the life of the timber of which they are constructed. Indeed, so serious has this problem become, that the forest service of the United States government has taken the investigation of the matter in hand. The forest service, as well as the Bell engineering department, is conducting experiments with a view of determining the durability of different kinds of wood under different conditions of climate and soil, to finding some way of lengthening the life of timber, and to extending the variety of trees from which poles may be made, since the suitable forests of those now in use are fast becoming depleted.

There are now in the Bell system something like 8,000,000 poles, of which about 1,100,000 were used in new construction work last year. Besides the telephone there are many other industries, such as the telegraph, electric light, and power, which draw upon the forests for big sticks. There are probably from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 poles of all descriptions in service at the present time, and probably at least 2,000,000 a year are required for replacing those no longer serviceable, to say nothing of the hundreds of thousands that go to extending the fast-spreading network of wires—enormous figures, but, they will, of course, increase rapidly within the next few years.

The average life of a pole is about twelve years and it requires in the neighborhood of sixty years for a tree to reach a size suitable for making a pole of it. In other words, the telephone and telegraph companies use up trees about five times as fast as nature produces them. A large proportion of the telephone poles now in use are of white cedar and chestnut. Most of the former have been obtained from Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, the center of supply gradually moving northward, though Idaho cedar poles are being used in the West and as far East as Michigan. The chestnut timber is more widely scattered, and is not as plentiful where it does occur. In the South and East pine, juniper and cypress have been used somewhat, but they are relatively short-lived unless treated with some preservative.

The vitality of a pole is affected by two things—the gradual disintegration from which everything in this world suffers, and the attacks of insects and of vegetable growths. The latter are the main cause of its more or less speedy decay. In some parts of the South, particularly, ants destroy poles very rapidly, eating them through till they would crumble and break if they were not replaced. Everywhere vegetable growths, such as the familiar punk, toadstools, and mushrooms, are likely to fix upon poles, and drawing from the wood its albumen, starch, sugar and oils for their food leave only rotten fibre which has no strength. To exist, the fungi must have air, or oxygen, water, and a certain amount of heat, in addition to their food supply, however; and it is in the direction of these necessities of life that modern science is attacking them.

Telephone poles nearly always decay at or just below the ground line. The upper portion of the pole, permanently in the air, rapidly drying after rain, is practically always dry and is rarely found decayed. The butt of the pole, deeply buried in the ground, is in a permanently damp condition, but oxygen being excluded it is seldom badly affected. Close to the ground line, the soil retains the moisture and keeps the wood constantly damp where it is exposed to the air and to the heat of the sun—which is just what its little vegetable enemies like. Alternate dampness and dryness, or the combined action of dampness and heat, make wood more vulnerable to the attacks of both insects and plants, but if the albumen in the wood can be rendered unfit for food the wood tissues offer practically no support to fungi. Timber preservation amounts, then, to poisoning the food supply of the destructive agencies and making their living quarters generally uncomfortable.

Preservation of timber is attempted in three ways—by seasoning, either natural or artificial; by outward mechanical means, such as charring in fire, or the application of antiseptics on the surface of the stick; and by impregnating the wood with antiseptics. Of these the last is by far the most important. The most perfect method—which is also the most expensive—is the injection of dead oil of coal tar into the whole fiber of the pole.

The treating of poles with dead oil of coal tar is an interesting process. The actual treating is done in big iron cylinders, built like the shells of huge steam boilers, six or seven feet in diameter and from 110 to 125 feet in length. The cylinders have movable ends hung on hinges, as if they were big, round doors—which, indeed, is exactly what they are. Inside are tracks for the little tramcars on which the poles are moved about, and there are several rows of steam pipes for heating. Nearby are big tanks holding several hundred thousand gallons of the preservative oil, and smaller measuring tanks.

After the poles have been placed in a cylinder the ends are closed and locked tightly, and steam is turned in for the purpose of making the structure of the green wood more easily penetrated by the antiseptic bath which is to follow. A portion of the moisture which gets into the wood during the steaming, and of the sap, as well, are withdrawn by maintaining a vacuum in the cylinder for several hours. When that has been done, dead oil of coal tar, heated to a temperature of about 150 degrees, is allowed to flow in till the metal shell is full. Then more oil is forced into it by pumps until the wood is thoroughly impregnated. For treating poles the Bell specifications prescribe from 12 to 15 pounds of oil for each cubic foot of wood, and as the ordinary poles are 30 and 35 feet long and a foot in diameter at the larger end, and the cost of creosoting is about 20 cents a cubic foot, it is evident that preservative treatment of this sort adds greatly to the cost of up-to-date telephone construction.

Poles are only one of the timber troubles of the telephone engineers, after all. Enormous quantities of wood are consumed in making crossarms and insulator pins, too, and these present their own bothersome difficulties. For a long while Norway pine and yellow pine, well seasoned and painted, were the standard materials for crossarms. Eight or nine years ago, however, it became impossible to get enough properly seasoned material, and since then the Bell lines have creosoted a large proportion of all the wooden bars on which their wires are strung. Norway pine is getting scarce, and yellow pine is therefore used for the most part today. In the South, cypress, and in the Rocky mountains, fir are also employed, but they have not as yet been creosoted. Crossarm of red gum and of black gum treated with creosote are being experimented with, and tupelo and Western hemlock are other possibilities the telephone men have in mind.

Though insulator pins seem to the average person a small detail in construction, they are, as a matter of fact, of great importance. The most satisfactory wood is locust, which is exceedingly strong and durable, and for a long while it was the only one used. The demand has become so heavy, however—not less than 15,000,000 pins being used last year by the Bell companies alone—that it is impossible to get enough locust to supply it. This scarcity was anticipated and an extensive search has been made for some wood to take its place. Osage orange—the bois d'arc of the voyageur—is as good as locust, but is scarce; mulberry is satisfactory, too, but limited in quantity. Live oak, rock elm and locally pius are also being experimented with.

The tendency in the future, experts say, is going to be toward the use of inferior timbers of requisite mechanical strength their lives being lengthened by some kind of preservative treatment. This would make available large supplies of trees, well distributed over the country. Meantime, the forestry experts and the telephone engineers have still many obstacles to overcome before they can make use of these materials.

REOPENING SERVICES OF THE METHODIST CHURCH AT HIBBING

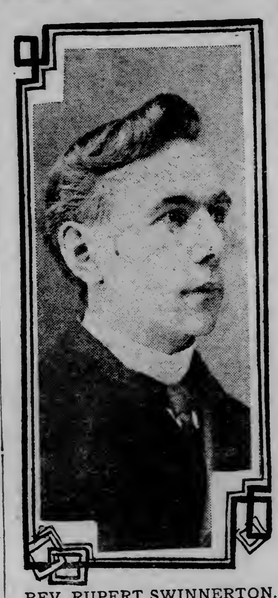

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH AND NEW PARSONAGE AT HIBBING.

Hibbing, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hibbing Methodists are rejoicing at the successful church reopening services held Sunday, June 24, when subscriptions amounting to $600 were pledged.

The church building has been greatly improved and remodeled, and now is one of the best churches on the Mesaba range. A new parsonage has been built, and altogether over $3,500 has been spent on improvements, all of which is practically provided for by promises and cash.

Rev. Rupert Swinnerton is the pastor who has brought to pass this happy consummation in the first year of his pastorate at Hibbing, and he was largely assisted by the members and friends.

All the old pastors but two were present at the reopening services as follows: Revs. G. E. Satterlee, of Crookston; A. F. Thompson, of Minneapolis; J. T. B. Smith, of Frazee; Joseph W. Robinson, of Duluth, and C. H. Blake, of Ely. The church and parsonage places the Hibbing Methodists in a position to do more active spiritual work.

PROPER WAY TO BUILD SILOS

Timely Suggestions Offered by a Missouri Man, Which May be of Value to St. Louis County Farmers.

The silo question that has been agitated a great deal of late among the agricultural and dairy interests in this portion of Northern Minnesota, has brought forth a number of inquiries as to the best methods of silo construction, in fact, but few farmers seem to have any practical idea of that sort of construction.

Another question that has been asked is whether the climate of Northern Minnesota necessitates the construction of a silo somewhat out of the ordinary would be subjected to in the southern counties of the state. The experienced dairymen claim that the latter question is one difficult to answer yet for the reason that the county has not yet had any silos.

The Jean Duluth company announced this week that with a view of building a silo protected absolutely from the frost it would this season construct a series of stone circular bins in the side of a gravel bank flanking a large barn that the company expects to erect very shortly and which will inclose the exposed portion of the silo bins. It is figured that the animal heat in the barn will be a frost preventive.

As to silo construction, in general, R. M. Washburn recently offered some timely suggestions in a monthly bulletin published by the Missouri State Board of Agriculture. The suggestions have been receiving very favorable comment from many of the prominent agricultural publications. They are as follows:

"It does not matter what material the silo is made of; it must be air tight on sides and bottom. Any crack or knot hole or poor joint at the door will admit air, and the silage will rot just in proportion to the amount of air that enters. The receptacle must be strong enough to withstand the lateral pressure of the silage when it settles. This lateral pressure at 10 feet from the top is 110 pounds per square foot, at 20 feet, 220 pounds ,and at 30 feet, 330 pounds, and at 40 feet, 440 pounds. It is very difficult to make deep rectangular silos whose walls w'll not spring enough to allow air to circulate up and down the sides and cause losses.

DEPTH OF THE SILO.

This should be made as great as practical, because, first, in this way the largest amount of food per cubic foot of space may be stored; and second, the silage keeps better because packed so solid; and third, there is less relative loss at the surface. The top of the silage always spoils to a depth of 3 to 8 inches. No silo should be less than 25 feet deep. A silo 20x40 will hold twice as much as one 20x25, and one 36 feet deep will hold five times as much as one 12 feet deep.

Summer silos should be deeper in proportion than those intended for winter use, because the silage spoils faster in summer and must be fed down at the rate of about three inches a day to have always fresh silage.

FOUNDATION.

The silo should start on level, firm earth, and should extend about two feet above the surface of the ground. If the foundation is started deep the hole should be dug large enough to give ample room outside of the wall to thoroughly tamp the earth up close to the foundation. There is a tremendous outward pressure against the wall, especially in deep silos, and if it is not made strong it will crack and admit air. It is also well to build into this wall, about 18 inches above the surface of the ground, several heavy wires to keep the wall from cracking. It should be made of stone or brick, laid in cement mortar, or of concrete, and from 12 to 18 inches thick, depending on the height the silo is to extend above it.

PLACED PARTLY IN GROUND.

It is a good plan to dig down 4 or 5 feet in order to secure good, firm earth on which to start the foundation, and also in order to get the greatest capacity in the silo without going too high into the air. Deeper than 5 feet would not be either convenient or safe.

Care must be taken in wet places not to dig down much, or else the soil must be drained. In many places even a good wall of stone, laid in cement, and well plastered inside with cement, will not keep the soil water out. In some parts of the south the houses can have no cellars on this account.

PROTECTION AGAINST FROST—FLOOR AND ROOF.

It does not injure silage to freeze. Even if the heat of the silage itself should not prevent the portion close to the wall from freezing, that portion may be piled up by itself on the silage and fed as soon as it does thaw out.

On sandy soil a floor will be needed to keep out soil air, but on clay land there need be no floor unless rats and mice trouble, then a cement floor may be laid.

In the southern portion of this state and south no roof is needed. Farther north, where a snowfall may be counted on, a cheap roof will be found convenient, not that the snow would injure the silage, but that it would mix with it and be in the way when fed.

PAINTING OF WOOD SILOS.

A coat of paint or tar on the inside of a wooden silo does not prevent the silage juice getting into the wood, but does retard it drying out when the silo is empty, and thus hastens decay. The outside may be painted andthe inside washed with a wood preservative, something that will not hold the water and will destroy the mold plant in the wood.

BEAUTIFUL AMERICA FOR THE CHILDREN

Extracts From a Recent Address by J. Horace McFarland, President of the American Civic Association.

I think every child, except those who live in cities that have no parks or playgrounds, knows just what sort of a beautiful America will suit the children. Grass to roll upon; dandelions to pick, with long pipes of stems to make hose with; violets and daisies coming with and after the dandelions, and other flowers to look at but not to take; trees to shade big enough to hide behind in play; a pond to wade in, to sail little boats upon; a tennis court, a baseball diamond, a football field—all these belong to Beautiful America for children. And this much of Beautiful America must be near enough to all the children's homes to reach every day before school and after school, and on holidays.

Holidays—I forgot about the picnics that belong to the holidays, when we want to go on a longer walk into the woods, where the squirrels and the rabbits live, and birds nest and sing in the trees, while we look and listen, and eat the lunch spread out on the grass or the last year's leaves.

This sort of Beautiful America for children, as I have said, ought to be near our homes, whether we live in big towns or little towns, or in the real country, which is for the most part Beautiful America anyway—but not always!

Now, when Columbus sailed across the Atlantic ocean to that island in the Bahamas—down near our state of Florida—which came then to be called San Salvador, but is now plain "Cat" island, the great America close by had no cities or farms, no factories or houses. The Indians lived there, in tents or "wigwams," and America was surely beautiful, even if it was wild, and it was clean—fit to live in, work in, and play in.

Is it clean now? Any boy or girl who reads this can easily answer about that: Dirty yards in the towns, dirty streets, dirty corners! Many dirty houses and more dirty factories, dirty rivers, and even dirty snow in the winter, when the smoke from the factories sticks to it.

The real country is only a little better, I fear, for there are dirty stables and barnyards, nasty pig-pens and home yards, shut-up smelly houses.

Are these dirty cities and country places fit to really live in or play in? I think not. Men and women, as well as boys and girls, do better work and have the fun that belongs to them in the clean, brighter places. The real Beautiful America would be a good place for clean towns and the right kind of factories, and clean streets would make cleaner business, too!

It isn't telling a secret to the boys and girls to say that the pigs are not really fond of a nasty pen. If they have a chance they will clean themselves, and they live in dirt only because they must, to live at all. So, having a really Beautiful America means giving the pigs a chance to be clean!

But some older folks will tell you that this is poor talk and that the country might be "improved." To be sure, we can't have and don't need the great woods of the time of Columbus, but we don't need, either, to have piles of tin cans, ugly billboards, dirty backyards and farmyards to be "improved." We can "improve" all the time.

Now some will wonder why I am preaching such things to the boys and girls. I'll tell you why.

Some years ago good women began to clean up the city I live in by putting up large iron cans for waste paper and asking people to put in them not only the waste paper, but banana and orange skins, and such things as had been making the streets nasty. These ladies went to all the schools and talked to the boys and girls about helping. Of course, the boys and girls were willing, and they remembered what was told them. My own boy was one of them.

One day after that my boy went with me to the postoffice, and as we walked along the street I tore the wrapper from a magazine and threw it away.

"You mustn't do that papa," said the bay; "the ladies told us it is wrong to throw loose papers in the street."

I was ashamed, and I picked up the paper, putting it in one of the iron boxes. My boy was a better citizen than I.

This convinced me that the boys and girls had a great part in making things clean, and as I think about it, I am sure that children can do a wonderful work for this great country that we all love.

Most of the dirt is made a little at a time—one tin can on the dump, one paper in the street. That is, each thoughtless person helps to make America dirty. If the children—the boys and girls who will in a few years be the men and women of the country, would do a little toward cleaning up, we would soon be all stirred up about it, and America would get beautiful again.

Each girl can try for a cleaner place about the home. Each boy can help keep the stuff off the street. Many of the children can easily induce their parents to plant some vines or flowers and it would be nice to have one tree planted each year by each child, or for each child.

The boys and girls can ask their fathers, too, who have votes, to try to have the streets made cleaner, and to try also to have parks and playgrounds for both big and little Americans. All these things require votes, and the boys in a few years are the men who vote. These same boys become the officials of our cities and towns, and some of them are sent to the legislature and to congress at Washington.

All my message to these children, then, is to get them to do two things. First, to clean up, and keep clean, about home and school; pick up papers and boxes on the street; take care of green growing trees and plants, and have some flowers of your own, if possible. Second, to talk about it to each other, and to your parents and home people, trying to get them to help. Do this, and you will be helping much toward a beautiful America for children and all the rest.

A SCOTTISH MARQUIS CANNOT PAY HIS DEBTS.

London, June 29.—The law against delinquent debtors spares not even peers of the realm. The marquis of Huntly, whose title is one of the oldest in the Scottish nobility, is in danger of being imprisoned for a debt of $500 to his wife's modiste.

The creditor, a fashionable court dressmaking firm known as Frederics, obtained a judgment against the marquis for payment of the debt before June 2, when he was to be committed to jail if he did not comply with the order.

Lord Huntly then applied to the high court for a dismissal of this order, as he could not pay. He explained that he had no property of his own, and that the joint income of $20,000 that he shared with his wife was not available for paying the debt.

Nevertheless, Mr. Justice Bigham refused to interfere with the order, and now, unless Lord Huntly finds $500, he will be incarcerated in a prison cell —with certain ameliorations of the felon's lot.

This distressed nobleman, who is 59, is the head of the Clan Gordon and one of the handsomest of that renowned tribe.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.—

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 29th, 1906.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles Edward Milmine, Executor of the Estate of George Milmine, deceased, representing, among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law, and for the discharge of the petitioner and the sureties on his bond,

IT IS ORDERED, That said account be examined and petition heard by this Court on Monday the 6th day of August A. D. 1906 at ten o'clock, A. M., at the Probate Office in the Court House in the City of Duluth in said County.

AND IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 29th day of June A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
J. B. MIDDLECOFF,
Judge of Probate.

WHITE SOX COME HOME

Ball Team Returns for Seven Games on Local Grounds.

New Players Will be Tried Out During Coming Week.

The members of the Duluth ball team arrived in the city this morning, together with the Lake Linden players, who will be their opponents here for three games.

This morning a practice was scheduled to be held at Athletic park, and the new players who are to join the team here were to be tried out.

Krick and Cummings will pitch in the double-header scheduled for this afternoon, and tomorrow Treadway will be in the box.

The first game this afternoon was to be called at 2 o'clock, and the second at 4 p. m. The two games will be played for one price of admission.

Tomorrow's game will be called at 3 o'clock.

On Monday, Fargo will come for a series of four games. The Fargo team has been showing surprising strength on its present trip, and has been climbing steadily up the percentage table, in spite of the fact that it has been meeting some of the strongest teams. Two games will be played on July 4, and the White Sox will then leave for a Western trip, playing at Fargo, Grand Forks and Winnipeg.

There are three positions to be filled from the five or six men who are available. Summers, Lovet and Adams have been released, and a shortstop, third baseman and outfielder will have to be chosen. Holding may be played in the outfield, if one of the new men is found to be good material for a backstop.

The three games today and tomorrow will show what the new men are, and if they do not fill the bill, they will be let go, and new ones signed. Whatever they are, they cannot play much worse ball than Lovett and Summers did for the last week they were with the team, and if they show a disposition to work hard, the fans will deal leniently with them. It was the listlessnes of the team rather than the errors made, that disgusted the fans during the last home series, and if the new men want to win a home they will go after everything in sight, regardless of the chance of bungling a hot liner.

In the shift made today, Fargo remains at Calumet, and Houghton and Hancock play at Ripley park. The Winnipeg and Grand Forks teams are en route to Grand Forks, where they will play tomorrow, and then go to Winnipeg for two games, returning for a double-header in Grand Forks on July 4.

LIPTON'S CHALLENGE CUP.

Trophy Offered for the Championship of Massachusetts Yachts.

Sir Thomas Lipton, who is a shrewd as well as aggressive yachtsman, appears in Massachusetts as a champion of the rate rule of the New York Yacht club, under which he has been unable as yet to secure assurances of a race for the America's cup.

Believing that he would have a better chance for the America's cup under the present rule than he did under the length and sail area rule, under which his three previous matches for the trophy have been sailed, he has turned his attention to a study of that rule and is doing what he can to assist the New York club in bringing about the good and bad traits of the rules through the test of continued racing.

Last winter Sir Thomas had as his guest in London Winfield M. Thompson, a Boston yachtsman, through whom he made an offer of a handsome cup to the yachtsmen of Massachusetts buy, to be raced for under the new rule. Mr. Thompson arranged to present the cup to the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts, through the Boston Yacht club as trustee. There are twenty-five clubs in the association, and the cup will go to the owner who twice takes an annual championship in Class Q under the association rules. There are twenty-one races scheduled for the cup this season, in which a number of existing boats altered to conform to the new rule have been entered and for which one new boat is being built. Next season a large Q class will undoubtedly be seen in Massachusetts waters, and racing for the cup will wax warm.

FIRST REGATTA OF THE SEASON

The first of the club regattas of the Duluth Boat club is being held this afternoon.

The races were scheduled to begin at 4 o'clock.

Four or five regattas of this kind will be held during the summer, and the men winning the greatest number of races in each class will be awarded medals or watch fobs, which have been donated by the club as prizes.

The races will be followed by a dance at the club house this evening.

OLD-TIME FAVORITE.

Fleischmann's Old Horse Goes to Breeding Bureau.

New York, June 30.—William K. Vanderbilt, whose great racing stables in France lead all the others this season in the matter of money and stakes won, has donated to the breeders' bureau of the Jockey club his stallion Halma, 14 years old, by Hanover, out of Julia L., by Longfellow.

Mr. Vanderbilt paid the heirs of the late Charles Fleischmann the sum of $30,000 for Halma, who had won the Kentucky and Latonia Derbies. Imported to France to strengthen Mr. Vanderbilt's stock, about seven years ago, Halma has begot, among others, the good horse Malta.

Halma will be sent to America about July 1. He will be located at some point in New York state that will be most convenient to the owners of mares. The committee in charge are Messrs. Clarence H. Mackay, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., and H. T. Oxnard.

WRESTLING IS REVIVED

Duluth is Once More the Rendezvous of Budding Champions.

Several Matches Will be Pulled Off in Near Future.

The wrestling game appears to have been revived again in Duluth, as a result of the match Thursday evening at the Temple rink, when Lundin threw Carl Mattson of Minneapolis, before a good crowd of spectators.

When the wrestlers migrated from Duluth early in the spring after the flim-flam match between Johnson and Rooney, it was thought that the sport would be dead until next winter, at least, but the followers of the game seem to be trooping back into the city, and the prospects are that several matches will be pulled off during the next two or three weeks.

Maynard and Parr are likely to come together again, and Parr is also looking for a match with Lundin. The Englishman, however, wants to wrestle for a side bet, the winner to take all, and this is not agreeable to the others, or at least they have not yet come to terms.

Both of these watches will probably be arranged, however, and will be pulled off either at the Temple rink or the Metropolitan opera house.

Wrestlers travel in troops, and if the news is passed around that Duluth is again good for a "piece of money" at the wrestling game, the city will be as full of budding champions as it was for a short time last winter, when the sport was run into the ground.

The sport was given a black eye in Duluth last winter, when the fake match was pulled off, but judging from the attendance at the match Thursday night, it is still as popular as ever here.

MATCH RACE AT READVILLE

Eaton, Ohio, June 30.—The big match race between Sweet Marie (2:04¼), Tiverton (2:04½) and Wentworth (2:04½), which is scheduled for Readville, Mass., July 4, will bring together three of the greatest trotters in training, and as the big event will inaugurate the racing season of 1906, it has attracted a great deal of interest among horsemen. The race will be for a purse of $15,000, and it should be the most interesting light harness event of the season. It is the general report that all the contestants are in good condition and if they continue so up to the time of the race the eastern folks will have a chance to witness a great speed contest.

On public form a race of this sort would find Sweet Marie favorite, for the game daughter of McKinney (2:11¼) has shown on more than one occasion her superiority over Tiverton, and there is no reason to suppose that she should meet defeat by Wentworth, a horse who is known to be inferior to both. Sweet Marie is in many respects the greatest trotter that the turf has ever seen. In looks, conformation, speed and manners no other fast trotter offers her any comparison. No other trotter has ever possessed the ability to put in so many heats at top speed as the great daughter of McKinney, and her marvelous endurance has caused her to be termed an equine giantess.

The racing career of Sweet Marie has been an eventful one, and in her two successful grand circuit campaigns (1904 and 1905) the greatest of trotting race horses has participated in 23 races, consisting of 62 heats, winning 38, counting her dead heat at Brighton Beach with Aristo.

Thirty-three of her winning heats were in 2:10 or better.

Tiverton has never failed to show that he is a speed marvel, and an extremely reliable one as well. It is said when he is at his best he is capable of two miles in 2:05 or better.

Tiverton trotted some wonderful races in 1904, especially at Cincinnati and Lexington, and his victory in the Charter Oak $10,000 stake at Hartford was among the sensational performances of the great trotting gelding that year. In 1905 Tiverton won the free-for-all trot at Buffalo, N. Y., in 2:05½ and 2:06. He beat Sweet Marie in a special race at Philadelphia, Pa., wagon, in 2:10½ and 2:07¾. He also won the free-for-all trot at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in 2:07½ and 2:06¼.

Tiverton has been more or less a cripple, yet he is thoroughly reliable, and rarely ever makes a mistake.

Wentworth is a game and courageous horse, but he cannot always be depended upon. He has never given evidence that he classed with either Sweet Marie or Tiverton, but his race at Columbus, Ohio, which he won in 2:06¾, 2:04¼ (his present record) and 2:07½, was a hard-fought one.

BOUTS ARRANGED FOR THE FOURTH

New York, June 30.—In the fight game the most important battle on the tapis is the match between Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, and Frankie Neil, the champion of the Pacific coast. These two clever mitt artists are to fight twenty rounds on July 4, before the Pacific Athletic club of Los Angeles, Cal. Both of these little fighters are well acquainted with the punching game; they are, in fact, considered two of the most scientific featherweights that ever donned gloves.

In addition to the winner's share the title is at stake, and the club has announced that a belt, valued at $1,000, will go to the victor. Both boys are bending their energies to be in the best possible shape for the encounter. The betting shows Attel a favorite, at 10 to 8.

Another prominent battle arranged for Independence day is the match between Willie Lewis, a welterweight of New York, and "Honey Billy" Mellody of Boston, a claimant for the title, who are to meet before the Lincoln Athletic club of Chelsea, Mass. They are signed to try conclusions for fifteen rounds. It is thought that this fight will be one of the hardest that has ever been fought in New England.

At Hamilton, Ohio, on July 4 Charley Neary and Young Donohue will appear in what promises to be one of the most interesting contests of the season. They are to box fifteen rounds before Jack Dougherty's club, and big crowds of sports are expected from Cincinnati, Dayton, Middletown and other near by places.

The Wabash club of Terre Haute, Ind., will give a boxing exhibition July 3.

Arrangements are being made to have John L. Sullivan serve as referee. It is to be the week of the Trotting association's races, and the club thought that the horsemen and race followers would like to see the old champion as the third man in the ring. The main bout is between "Greek Jimmy" Ryan of this city, and Dannie Hayes of Springfield, Ill. The other bouts will be between Frank Batson of Peoria and Billy Griffith of Indianapolis and Patsy Hogan of Terre Haute and Eddie Gallagher of Chicago.

Morris Levy, the Frisco promoter, has practically matched Battling Nelson and "Kid" Herman of Chicago, to fight in San Francisco on Sept. 10. This will be the first fistic exhibition since the fire.

Levy has been in telegraphic communication with the managers of the fighters, and will leave next week for Chicago, where all parties concerned will meet to arrange the final details of the match.

FISTIC DOPE FROM FRISCO

Little Men Are Carded at Los Angeles on July 4.

Neil and Attell in Daylight Battle of Twenty Rounds.

San Francisco, June 30—On the Fourth of July, Los Angeles will try its hand at the daylight fight game, when Frankie Neil and Abe Attell will be sent into the ring. These lads have been on the verge of having it out a number of times, but various things have happened to prevent them getting together. This time it looks like a go, and for the sake of the long-suffering Los Angeles fight fans it is to be hoped that the event will come off on time and be worth the patronizing.

Like all affairs in which very little fellows are the principals, the contest is not creating undue excitement. It is not by any means preceded by the fervor of expectancy that was noticeable when the date of the late lamented Herrera-Nelson fizzle was approaching.

For all that there is every reason for expecting an entertaining bout, although for reasons which I will presently explain, the event may not be marked by frequent collisions and much blood letting.

Neil is a sturdy youngster with the fighting instinct of a game chicken. He is a stiff puncher and fairly clever but it is cleverness that shows only when the other man is willing to stand close and cut loose at a fast gait.

Attell is superlatively clever, so much so in fact that when he makes a specialty of defensive work, he can convert what opened up like a promising contest into a tedious spectacle. In this particular connection I must say that the go between Eddie Hanlon and Attell at Woodwards was the dreariest event I ever looked across the ropes at and considering the ground I have covered that is saying a good deal.

This time it may be that Attell will show the best that is in him. It is to be hoped he will. It is said that this is one of the few times he has had a bit better of the weights and the fact that he is tackling a lad who is naturally a few pounds lighter than himself may spur him to fast fighting. It is said further that there is genuine jealousy between the Attels and the Neils and anything in that line always comes to spirited milling. One thing is certain. The fighting, whether it be good, bad or indifferent, will in all probability be strictly on the level.

That Herrera-Nelson bungle is a hard subject to get away from. Like most affairs in which there is no commonly accepted explanation, it is continually cropping up when least expected, and the matter is likely to continue a fruitful source of argument until some entirely new and highly probable version of the fiasco is sprung.

A few days ago I thought I was on the track of "astounding revelations." I received a long typewritten communication from a Bakersfield sport in which those who had attempted to saddle the entire blame of the episode on Herrera were handled without gloves.

Said my correspondent in one portion of his missive: "Herrera has still a trump card to play in connection with that affair in Los Angeles, and if subjected to more unjust criticism he may play it."

I glanced hurriedly through the letter for further references to what Herrera had in reserve, but this is all I could find:

"I do not advocate the playing of this trump card by Herrera. For the good of the game I hope it will never be played."

There's deep mystery and dark for you. If Herrera is withholding something the exploiting of which will clear his skirts of blame, it appears to me he is acting foolishly. The suggestion that "the good of the game" is keeping Aurelio tongue-tied won't go. The "good of the game" didn't deter him from telling that his match with Jimmy Britt at Butte fell through because he refused to lay down to Britt a story, by-the-bye, which no one believed—and the plea that he is eager to keep the boxing game above reproach doesn't ring true.

It will be for the "good of the game" if Herrera unfolds anything in connection with the fizzle with the Dane which will bring all the people to the one way of thinking. Just try it, Aurelio.

Eddie Graney, the "Little Horseshoer," is still hopeful of getting Joe Gans and Battling Nelson together, despite denials and denunciations on the part of the Dane and his manager, Billy Nolan. As a matter of fact, the magnificent optimism in which Graney has steeped himself is very puzzling to those who have read Nelson's declaration that he will never enter the ring with the clever negro.

Through years of connection with pugilism Graney has shown himself to be a practical fellow, and even those who cannot reconcile his hopeful demeanor with Nelson's assertion that there is no Gans-Nelson match in prospect, point to the fact that in all that has been said Manager Nolan has not denied that he empowered Graney to make the match. The inference is drawn that there is "somethin' doin'," all right, but that Nolan, after setting his face against a match with Gans so long, doesn't want to have it said that he experienced a sudden change of base.

When asked if any further move had been made toward matching Gans and Nelson, Graney said: "No. But I haven't dropped the matter, by a long shot. When I said I had Nolan's sanction I said what was true. I suppose there was nothing binding about the matter, at that. One thing is sure. I don't intend to get into any controversy with Billy Nolan. We are friends and I think we will continue as such. And you can say for me that I am not giving up hopes of a Gans-Nelson match."

GOOD RULE IS ADOPTED

For the Practice of Baseball Teams on the Field.

National League Gives Plenty of Time to Limber Up.

Boston, June 30.—I was very much pleased to find the National league magnates had realized they owed something to the patrons of the game who got out early to see the boys limber up.

For years at every ground in the country the spectators in the center of the grand stand, as well as the reporters and telegraphers who are forced to work, often unprotected, have complained about the way players practice, especially the pitchers, by sending the ball to the catchers gacked up against the stand, every high wild pitch going into the crowd. I have seen a number of people injured in this way, and complaints were numerous, but of little avail, as the players kept right on. The throwing around of the ball was not dangerous. It was the pitchers warming up, trying out new curves, and often having no control. The usual fifteen minutes' practice on the playing field is a treat for spectators, for they are sure of witnessing fast playing, and the faster the practice, the more spirited the playing later. For the day has passed for slow, deliverate practice.

The first ball team to indulge in fast practice was the Cincinnati Reds, back in '69, and even to this day no ball team has ever approached this lot of players in exhibition work. Several members of that famous team were clever juggilers. Dug Allison, George Wright, Andrew Leonard and Cal McVey in particular keeping the ball in the air most of the time as they practiced before the regular game.

Later the Chicago club, with Ed Williamson, Tom Burns, Fred Pfeffer and Jimmie Ryan, displayed several juggling feats that were enjoyed by the crowds. The Baltimore team, with Jennings, McGraw, Keeler and others, was fast in its practice and trick work, while the Boston team for years in the early history of the game delighted in fast practice work. It was the fast practice that brought the Boston club to the front in '97 and '98, for Tenney, Long and Lowe were full of ganger before a game, and Martin Bergen was a superb practice player.

The Pittsburg club was noted for fast, clever practice until after this great team commenced to feel the strain of three hard campaigns, when it slowed up, but started off at a fast pace the last time I saw it at the South end.

With La Chance at first and Collins in his form two years ago, the Boston American infield gave a clever exhibition of fast practice without frills, and the present Chicago National league team gives a fine all-round exhibition. The greatest exhibition player today, however, is Catcher Schreck of the Athletics, with his big mit.

The spectators at the games never enjoy the practice work of the pitchers warming up, and this phase of the game should be confined to the space back of the grand stands, as it is after the game once begins, and a man is held in reserve, constantly being warmed up for emergencies.

I have often noticed players practice so hard before a game that it weakened them before the regular game was over.

The latest rule made by the league at its meeting in New York gives the players just double the time for practice, furnishing the public almost a double exhibition, which I know will be fully appreciated by at least one-half the fans in the big cities, where they go much earlier to the games than they do in the smaller places.

I think this move will improve the work of a great number of ball players who are slow in starting. It will also help to keep weight off and cut out morning practice. Morning practice of late, however, consists mostly of card games in the dressing rooms, scraping of bats and reading the papers. The rule to have the players at the grounds each morning at 10 o'clock was originated by Harry Wright, not so much for the practice as to see the boys were up early and ready for the afternoon game. As a rule, ball players are fond of sleeping until very late morning, and manage to keep up this habit on the road to this day. A few ambitious players will rise early and pick up all the knowledge they can while in the business, with the idea of bettering their condition after passing out of the game. The players from small colleges are apt to keep up reading books for improvement, and this is the main reason why college men remain so short a time in the big leagues. Reading by artificial light soon effects the eye, and the player soon becomes a weak batsman. The men who remain in the game the longest are the ones who read very little at night or on trains, and keep regular habits.

With the appearance of the Chicago Cubs at the South End grounds I have witnessed every team in the two major leagues at work.

Pittsburg and Chicago looked better than for years. The Pirates were full of confidence and eager for work, with most of their great old players back in line, and should keep the others worried to the last if their pitchers hold out. I must say I am not impressed with the work of the box men Pittsburg presented here, and among them was Phillippi and Leever. On the other hand, Frank Chance has a lot of clever slab men, all willing workers and dead anxious to get into the money.

Outside the box the team is a perfectly balanced organization—good batsmen, fine fielders and clever base runners. As far as playing the game, no team in the National league has anything on them. It will come down to a case of staying powers, and no man can predict the result by past individual performances.

Frank Chance leads his team as an Indian chief would a band of warriors out for real business. He never smiles and walks to and from his position with his head down. He forces the impression that he considers each game a cold business proposition, with no time for levity. His players go about their business without any attempt to bother the umpire. For example, Umpire Johnston allowed a home run on a ball that went out of sight at least one foot foul. It was the last play of the day and lost the game for Chicago by a score of 3 to 1. The Chicago players sitting on the bench, as well as newspaper men sitting on a dead line could plainly see the umpire's mistake, and to their surprise Captain Chance took his medicine like a gentleman and won many a friend among the fans.

The Cincinnati team played a neat society game while here, but were not champion timber, Joe Kelley doing the best all-round ball playing.

Lake Linden, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Three scattered singles were all that the Duluth batters were able to secure off Balliett yesterday afternoon, and Lake Linden won out by the score of 2 to 0. Krick also pitched good ball, and only one of Lake Linden's two runs was earned. The home team secured one run in the first on an error by Summers, when the bases were full and two down. McCormick and O'Dea were the only Duluth men who had any success with Balliett whatever.

The visiters got two men on bases in the ninth, but the needed hits were not forthcoming. The score:

SHOW NEW LIFE.

Hancock Plays Snappy Game Against Grand Forks and Wins.

Hancock, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Patriots went into the game yesterday with new life, and the change in management has apparently had a good effect. Rogers was in the box, and he held the Browns safe at all stages, allowing but five scattered hits. Bushelman also pitched good ball, but the hits on him were bunched in two innings.

CALUMET WINS OUT.

Aristocrats Bat Out Victory After Game Was Apparently Lost.

Calumet, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Calumet and Fargo had another hard-fought game here yesterday, both teams bunching their hits, but Calumet profited by the errors of the visitors and by some timely hitting, batted out a victory in the seventh, after the game appeared to be hopelessly lost.

Fargo got all of her runs in the sixth on a hit by Finnegan, an error, Grogan's sacrifice, a passed ball, Rose's single, and a home run by Mehl.

With the score 4 to 1 in Fargo's favor, the Aristocrats started a rally. Corrigan was hit, and Butka and Cox both singled, filling the bases. Kaiser rapped out a two-bagger and scored himself on Laughlin's single. The score:

NEW YORK, 8; BOSTON, 4.

New York, June 30.—The New York Americans easily defeated Boston yesterday by 8 to 4. Score:

Boston	4	8	4
New York	8	12	0

Batteries — Dineen and Armbruster; Chesbro and McGuire. Umpires—Connor and Hurst.

DETROIT, 7; ST. LOUIS, 3.

Detroit, June 30.—Detroit bunched hits with errors and two passes, scoring seven runs and making the game safe. In the eighth inning for St. Louis the first five batters hit safely, but only one tally scored. Powell, who led off, was caught napping at third and Donahue forced Wallace to pop and struck out Koehler with the bases full. Score:

Detroit	7	8	1
St. Louis	3	10	4

CLEVELAND, 9; CHICAGO, 2.

Cleveland, June 30.—Cleveland defeated Chicago by the score of 9 to 2. Walsh and Owen were hit hard, while Townsend was effective except against Jones and Donohue. Jackson was overcome by heat and forced to retire, while Bradley was hurt sliding. Score:

Cleveland	9	15	0
Chicago	2	7	2

Batteries—Townsend and Bemis; Owen and Walsh. Umpires—Connolly and Evans.

EVEN BREAK AT WASHINGTON.

Washington, June 30.—Washington and Philadelphia split even in a double-header, the visitors winning the first 9 to 5 and the local team the second, 6 to 5. Kitson was hit hard and timely in the first. Patten was knocked out of the box in the seventh inning of the second game, while Philadelphia used three pitchers. A remarkable catch by Hickman while lying prone on the ground was the feature of the afternoon. Scores:

CIRCUS TENT BLOWN DOWN

Two Are Killed and Many Injured at Aurora, Ill.

Chicago, June 30.—Two persons were killed and several injured at Aurora, Ill., yesterady, when a mammoth tent of the Ringling Brothers' circus was blown down during a severe wind and thunder storm. A panic followed, in which scores narrowly escaped being trampled to death. Eighteen elephants, performing in the arena at the time, were prevented, by the prompt action of their keepers, from stampeding. The dead are:

MATHEW BURY, Aurora, who was struck by a falling tent pole.

WILLIAM CRESS, Geneva, Ill.

Cress died from heart disease, due to shock. Three women are among those severely injured. There were 5,000 spectators in the tent at the time of the accident. When the crash came the performing elephants had just begun their act. The first gust of wind gave but an instant's warning, and the next moment the center pole supporting the canvass roof, snapped near the top. The audience was composed largely of women and children. They were unable to lift the heavy canvass.

Egress was slow at the regular exits, and it was in the crush at these points that many were injured. Rescue work by the police and fire department was under way within twenty minutes.

The storm, which approached the proportions of a cyclone, damaged many building in Aurora and vicinity.

MARKSMEN ARE COMING

Trap Shooters From All Parts of Country Will be Here.

Duluth Gun Club Will Donate $350 for Cash Prizes.

Trap shooters from all parts of the country will be in Duluth on July 16 and 17, to attend the open tournament which will be held by the Duluth Central Gun club on those dates.

The prospects are that the tournament will be the largest and most successful ever held in the Northwest. The way was paved for it last year, with the tournament held by the old Central Gun club, on the grounds at Thirty-second avenue east. Some good records were made on that occasion, and they served to advertise the Duluth club throughout the country. Since that time Duluth marksmen have attended a number of tournaments and have carried off their share of the prizes. This has all served to boost the Duluth tournament, and this year the list of entries is likely to be the largest ever seen in Duluth.

Since the Duluth and Highland clubs have joined hands, the interest in the sport has shown a marked increase in Duluth.

This year the club has raised $350, which will be divided among the marksmen entered as high average prizes. An entrance fee will be charged for each event, and the money will be divided among the winners as a sweepstake. The man making the highest score will take 60 per cent of the entrance money; the second place will take 30 per cent, and third place 10 per cent. The entrance fee will be based on a charge of 10 cents for each bird, so that in a twenty-five bird event the fee will be $2.50, and in a fifty bird event, $5.

With from 50 to 100 entries the entrance fees will make a neat sum to be divided among the winners.

The tournament will last two days, and from ten to fifteen events will be pulled off each day. The total scores for all events will be kept, and the money donated by the club will be divided into twenty cash prizes for those making the twenty highest averages during the entire tournament. In order to qualify for the high average prizes the marksmen will have to enter in all of the events.

In addition to the regular events, the state championship shoot will be pulled off during the tournament. This will be open to all the amateur marksmen in the state.

Professional marksmen, employed by powder and cartridge companies, will not be allowed to participate in the tournament, although they will be permitted to give exhibitions of shooting, and will shoot with the amateurs in all events.

Notices of the tournament are being sent out by the secretary to gun clubs in all parts of the country, and it is expected that the majority of the clubs in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and the Dakotas will be represented, in addition to numerous entries from clubs in the Eastern and Middle Western states.

The official program of the tournament is being prepared, and will be published within the next few days.

SPORTING COMMENT

Back from the country that used them so roughly,
Back from their short, but unfortunate tour,
The Sox are returning, so treat them quite tenderly,
Forget that the showing they made was so poor.

Gone are the confident airs of the Champions,
Humbled, they're dragging their tails in the dust,
Speak to them softly; don't deal with them harshly;
If they don't win at once, don't show your disgust.

Nurse them along, through their convalescense,
Kindly and gently smear balm in their sores,
Root for them; cheer for them; shut your eyes to their failings,
Give the new men a chance to wipe off the old scores.

Slumps are queer things. They get a ball team like an attack of stage fright will sometimes sweep over a theatrical company.

They lose just because they are losing.

And vice versa. A team will get a winning streak, and it doesn't seem possible to head them. They are confident; show all kinds of ginger; and fairly play their opponents off their feet.

Winnipeg and Fargo are enjoying a winning streak just at present, and they have been climbing up the percentage table, while the Sox appear to have struck the toboggan slide.

But it can't last. Duluth is a long ways from being out of the race yet. The team is only a short distance behind the leaders, and with some new blood they should be able to shake off the hoodoo which has followed them relentlessly since that one brief day they spent at the top of the league.

It is a killing pace which the Chicago Nationals are setting, but they don't seem to be able to shake off the Giants and the Pirates, and the three teams are racing away from the others in the fight for the flag.

Most fans thought that the Chicago White Sox was too good a team to have kept down long, and they seem to have caught their stride and have started after New York, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

The American Association pace seems to be a little too swift for Minneapolis and Kansas City, and they are gradually dropping out of the race, together with St. Paul and Indianapolis.

The wrestlers have migrated back to Duluth again in their wandering search for meal tickets. But the time when Duluth sports would bet on wrestling matches is passed. They may buy gold bricks and Texas oil stocks, but betting on wrestling matches is now confined to a few towns back on the border.

The unaccustomed feeling of victory after the Yale-Harvard boat race is said to have so far affected some of the Harvard seniors that they forgot their dignity and broke into a real, loud cheer.

The management of the Duluth ball club is respectfully advised to purchase a checkerboard for the ball players. Furnish the young men with clean, pure, enjoyment for the summer evenings, and they won't go out on the streets of the great city.

Some fans can't see why Superior with 40,000 people and Ashland with 20,000 wouldn't be better ball towns than Hancock and Lake Linden with about 5,000 or 6,000 each. But then the figures for Hancock and Lake Linden don't take the cemeteries into account.

The results of the sprping training of the Duluth Boat club oarsmen will be shown this afternoon at the first regatta of the year. The senior four-oared race promises to be of special interest.

There will be an awful slaughter of the clay pigeons here next month, when the Duluth Central Gun club holds its open tournament.

Wouldn't it be a "blawsted shame if those blooming Colonials" should carry off the grand challenge at Henley next month? From reports it looks as if the Toronto Argonauts would succeed in doing it.

If this drought lasts for a few days longer, the Endion tennis club members will begin play on their first club tournament, and the golf players will be able to finish up their events.

DU PONT CUP, PRESENTED TO WEST DULUTH ROD AND GUN CLUB.

A loving cup, a picture of which is shown herewith, has been presented by the Du Pont Powder company to the West Duluth Rod and Gun club to be shot for this year. In a fey days the rules of the shoot will be made by the club and they will be somewhat different from last year, when the cup was won by W. F. Hurst on a straight handicap shoot. This year it is likely that the man who is to possess it must win it three times before the cup becomes his. That is the talk at least. The cup itself is a beauty, much prettier, though simpler in design than that offered last year. Last year's cup was a three-handled one, while this possesses only two. The cup is of fine workmanship and is enclosed in a handsome leather case.

FAMOUS COLLEGE RACES

It is a long cry from today back to that August day in 1852 when a few men, enthusiastic over the new sport of rowing, came down from New Haven and Cambridge to Center Harbor and had the first college boat race.

They had no shells then—only great barges; they knew nothing of nerve-destroying rivalry, but were so boyishly anxious to discover the best crew that they had a tryout on the morning of the race day and were so well pleased with the afternoon's sport that they waited over until the following morning to have another go. Harvard still cherishes a victory of the gallant Oneida, while Yale yet knows the Halcyon, the Undine and the Atlanta.

From that simple little race on Lake Winnepiseogee, when they did not row much before the race for fear of blistering their hands, down to the present day, when the eights are training so solemnly at New London and Poughkeepsie, is surely a far cry, and many a remarkable contest has happened in these 50 odd years.

They had so much fun in this first race that they decided to have them often, but the next regular race of any note did not happen until 1659, when they met at Worcester; the Harvard and the Yale six-oared shells—they had shells now—and the Avon of Harvard and the Atalanta from Brown, lap-streaks. The Harvard shell had no steering gear and frequently they stopped to regain their course, but so superior were they that they won by several lengths. The next day they met in a city regatta and Yale picked up the first prize of $100. The matter of professional and amateur was entirely one of spirit and not of definition.

In those days affairs were conducted with a refreshing simplicity. The captain coached the crew and the selection was by a survival of the fittest method, in which any collegian might challenge the strength of a man in the boat, and then they had it out. Of course, they had on sliding seats and the shells were more what today one would call a gig.

After the Civil War names that are still famous come to notice Wilbur Bacon at Yale and William Blakie and Frank Crowninshield at Harvard. Bacon introduced a far better style of oarsmanship at New Haven; when they reached Worchester the day before the race, Harvard asked them out to witness an exhibition of fine rowing, but Yale showed her appreciation of the lesson by soundly trouncing Harvard in the race. But then came the great Blakie crews, and Yale could not win.

The old idea of training reached its culmination about this time. The scheme was to take off all the flesh that the man could spare without becoming a corpse. They rowed twice a day, and always hard; if a man showed an extra pound of flesh he put on flannels. They ate little and only the plainest food—beef or mutton with the blood running out, and perhaps a few potatoes and rice. Water was apt to put back the weight lost by perspiration, hence the best trainer was the man who got along with the least water. A glass for breakfast, two for dinner and another for supper was the absolute limit. Between meals they had none whatever, and the agony of such a mode of living while rowing under a blazing sun can hardly be imagined. Some men became almost crazy and would get up at night to drink the water from the wash pitchers. Further to increase the torture, many coaches prohibited bathing during the final weeks. Blakie's crews were the first to modify the atrocious system, but some of the ideas still linger.

In 1869 came the great race between Harvard and Oxford over the Putney-Mortlake course on the Thames, which, it is estimated was witnessed by a million people. Harvard made a magnificent race, but they could not hold a lead gained in the first two miles and were gradually rowed down and finally beaten by a length. The interest generated in America by this race caused the formation of the Rowing Association of American Colleges and the startling victory of the Massachusetts Aggios over Brown and the champion Harveard; it was the first year that the Farmers had rowed, but year that the Farmers had rowed, but Josh Ward coached them into form in short order. Harvard went down the next year before another newcomer—Amherst—while Yale entered had finished a quarter of a mile behind the leaders.

By this time professional coaching had become general and only Harvard was without a paid instructor. The slide was just coming into use, but it was not much in favor, and the smooth board, well slushed with tallow, found many advocates.

After Yale's disastrous showing, the students at New Haven clubbed together and found enough money to send their captain, the famous Bob Cook, to England to pick up a new stroke. He spent a couple of months among the British oarsmen, and returned with new ideas; he lengthened the stroke and paid more attention to the recovery, abolishing the 40-to-the-minute jab that was in favor. The papers had plenty of fun with him, but he kept to his theories.

The victories of the smaller colleges brought everyone into rowing, and eleven coxswainless sixes came to the line for the 1873 race; the river at Springfield is none too wide, and the flotilla of boats had numerous mixups; the race itself will always be known as the diagonal line race. The final line was not at right angles with the shore, and the apparent winner would not be the actual one. Each of the contestants had an undergraduate judge at the finish, and as the crews came down the course, these enthusiasts cheered so lustily that they quite forgot their duties, and when the timer gave the various marks the crews could not be found to fit them. Harvard decided at once that they had won, and got away with the flags, but they had not reached Worcester before the troubled judges settled on Yale, and gave Harvard third.

The regatta of 1875 was the largest that has ever been held in this country, and nowhere, before or since, have so many crews competed in one race. Springfield was quite too small for the event, and the college men selected Lake Saratoga. Six-oared shells came from Cornell, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Dartmouth, Wesleyan, Amherst, Brown, Williams, Bowdoin, Hamilton, Union and Princeton—thirteen in all, which may explain why this was the last general regatta. The sight of the thirteen lanes, stretching half across the lake, was one that will never again be seen. Yale was the favorite crew, and the six from the new Cornell university was held to be rather a joke. The race would surely go to either Harvard or Yale.

But sturdy John Ostrom was the Cornell stroke; he did not know much about rowing, but he also did not know how to stop. Harvard went away first at the start, with Cornell hard after on the other side of the course; Columbia and Dartmouth followed, while Yale took command of the second division. The race developed between Cornell, Harvard and Columbia; on the last half mile Cornell drew away and Capt. Goodwin, the Columbia stroke, and now their coach, started a famous spurt. Harvard began to weaken, the Princeton stroke fainted, and they were out of the race. Columbia passed Harvard, but they could not gain on Ostrom, and Cornell finished four lengths in the lead. This was the first, and perhaps the greatest, of Cornell's many triumphs on the water. When the news reached Ithaca, President White ordered out the cannon.

The Centennial exposition brought out another noteworthy race, and the only international college contest that has ever taken place in this country. Yale and Columbia rowed for America in fours, and First Trinity (Cambridge) represented England. Yale, stroked by Julian Kennedy, won, with Columbia a close second. The Cambridge captain could not stand the hot climate, and collapsed early in the race.

Two years later, Columbia with a veteran crew and Jasper Goodwin still at stroke, entered the visitors' cup in the Henley regatta and scored the only victory that an American crew has ever won there. At that time three crews rowed in a heat, and Columbia met the strongest crews on the first day—Jesus College (Cambridge) and University College (Oxford.) Until near the finish Columbia and Jesus were stroke for stroke, but in the last quarter Goodwin went to 44 and Columbia won by a scant length.

Among the Harvard-Yale races none is more remarkable than the 1882 struggle. After Harvard and Yale withdrew from the open regatta the racing centered for some years about New London, until the new Intercollegiate Rowing association was formed. In the early days Harvard, starting with the Bancroft crews had all the better of the racing and Yale could not win. In desperation, they turned at New Haven to Mike Davis, who came forward with a brand new selection of freak ideas for getting speed out of a boat. Davis was a professional oarsman. He finally secured full sway in 1882, and then began the donkey engine stroke proper. He made a long narrow shell, with the men seated in pairs, with a beck between each pair, so that from a distance the strange craft looked like a collection of pair-oared shells. They had leg-of-mutton oars—that is, oars with the blade entirely below the loom—and numerous other schemes came from the brain of the ingenious Mike. The stroke was short and fast, running up to 50, and never went below 40. In practice the crew regularly broke the record, and when the boats lined up for the race the Yale men offered to bet the Harvard oarsmen that the record would go.

Yale began at 48 and the crew rasembled a waterspout; but Harvard did not go back, but, instead, stayed alongside. At the end of the first mile Yale had only three quarters of a length. Then the Yale coxswain steered far eastward into the eel grass. For nearly two miles Yale kept on the flats and Harvard gained nearly two lengths. On the last mile Yale came out of the grass and went hard after the exhausted Harvard eight. The coxswain took another mysterious tack to the other side of the river and beyond the Harvard crew, but in spite of all, Yale finished only a half length behind the Harvard crew.

Coming down to more recent years there have been many stirring college contests both at Poughkeepsie and at New London, but the memory of them is still green. Every freshman dreams that he will be an Allen and leap from the boat after he breaks his oar in the race, as did the stroke of the Yale crew when they won from the Atalanta. The victories of Cornell and Pennsylvania at Poughkeepsie; the vicissitudes of Harvard at New London; the 1888 record crew of Yale and the 1901 record of Cornell; the gallant struggle of Pennsylvania at Henley and the defeats of Cornell and Yale there. And so on—but why mention those that are so familiar?

A MEMORIAL EOR SYSONBY

Lexington, Ky., June 30.—The remains of J. R. Keene's sensational race horse, Imp. Sysonby, will not be brought to Kentucky for burial, nor will a monument to his memory be erected here at Castleton Stock farm. Sysonby will remain buried on the grounds of the Coney Island Jockey club at Sheepshead bay, and what sort of memorial Keene may later decide on as a tribute to his memory wil lbe set up on the race track where he received most of his racing preparation and where ie scored his brilliant triumphs in the Tidal, Lawrence Realization and Annual Champion stakes and other races.

The turfman's reason for this is the fact that Sysonby's life was more connected with the race track than with the Castleton stud. His dam was bred in England and was the property of Marcus Daly. While foaled at Castleton farm, Sysonby's life there ended in the summer of his yearling form, and Keene, as a result, regarded him as belonging more to his racing stable than his breeding establishment. Had he lived to be installed as a sire at Castleton stud the story would have been different and he would have then been regarded by his owner as belonging to the breeding interest, inside of the racing stable possessed by this Eastern turfman.

With all of his success on the turf, much bitter as well as the sweet has come to James R. Keene during his career as a racing man and breeder. First a disastrous fire visited Castleton farm, and Hyder Abad, which cost him $30,000 as a 2-year-old, and the English horse Imp. Illiterates perished in the flames. Domino, the largest winning horse in American racing history, which alone leads Sysonby in this respect, was the next big loss sustained by him. This matchless horse only made two seasons in the stud. He died when he was 7 years old. A costly monument marks his resting place at the farm of the late Maj. B. G. Thomas.

In 1902 Imp. Horoscope ran into a tree while exercising at Castleton and was killed, and then followed the death of the mighty Commando in March, 1905. The latter is buried in his paddock at Castleton, and Horoscope was laid away elsewhere on the place, but as yet neither of their graves has been marked with a monument. What may be termed the horse cemetery at Castleton farm now contains the graves of many famous stud matrons.

Keene gave $18,500 at the Marcus Daly closing out sale for the English brood mare imp. Field Azure and she died the next season after dropping a colt by Le Var. This colt Maj. F. A. Dalmgerfield raised by hand, and he developed into an Eastern stake winner Sinister. Anna Gray was another mare he bought at the Daly sale which died early in March, 1904. Keene lost two very great mares on the same day in imp. Mavourneen, dam of imp. Voter, and imp. Flying Squadron, the dam of Clarion and Kearsarge; about a week later imp. Duchess Caroline also died. Mares valued at $25,000 thus dropped off inside of a few days.

There are also other mounds at Castleton where repose the bones of mares famous as producers and in their lives valued by their owners as priceless, such as Belel of Maywood, the dam of Tenny, Olympian and Robin Hood; Ella T., the dam of Banquet and Tea Tray, and Blue Grass Belle, another famous daughter of War Dance. These three mares, however, all died of old age, but their last resting place is held in reverence by the Wall street magnate.

With all the losses in hirseflesh experienced in the last few years, Castleton stud is today pre-eminent as the home of the great stars of the breeding ranks. The stallion barn still contains such brilliant horses as Kingston, Ben Brush, Disguise 2d, imp. Voter and Delhi and in the brood mare paddocks roam the only American bred winner of the English Oaks and the only mare in America that is the dam of an English Oaks winner, and there, too, the dam of the lamented Sysonby nibbles the blue grass. She may produce another like him.

TWO MORE TROPHIES

Golf Players Will Compete for President's Cups Each Year.

G. G. Hartley Sets Example by Offering Two Handsome Prizes.

Two more cups have been added to the list of trophies at the Northland Country club.

The cups will be known as the president's cups. Each year the president of the club will donate two trophies, one for the men and one for the women. G. G. Hartley has presented the club with two handsome trophies this year, and they will be played for sime time during the coming month.

The rules of play have not yet been decided upon, but it will probably be a handicap affair, and the cups will become the property of those winning them.

The club now has trophies for six different events, as follows: Club championship cup, second flight cup, Ames cups, Towne cups, shortstop tournament cups, and the president's cups.

Rufus H. Draper has won out in the match for the second flight cup, and the play for the championship cup is down to the finals, between L. J. Hopkins and Ward Ames, Jr. This match will be played off tomorrow.

Play has not yet been begun for the Ames and Towne cups.

On July 4 the shortstop tournament cups will be played for. All of the members will be entered in a qualifying round, and the sixteen getting the lowest scores will then play down for the trophies. The play will be completed during the day, and the cups awarded before night.

The wet weather has kept back the events now under way, and the ladies have been unable to play off any games in their tournament for the last week or ten days. Some games will be played this afternoon, however.

BIG FAMILY OF BALL PLAYERS

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 30.—When Thanksgiving day of this year rolls around one of the most remarkable family reunions will be held in Kalamazoo. On that date will be the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ganzel, the head now of a family of 52, in which there has not been a death during the past half century. The five sons of the aged couple are more or less widely known as stars, or former stars, in the baseball world. The children, especially the men, are giants in size, all but one measuring over 6 feet 1, and weighing close to 200 pounds. As they were naturally of an athletic turn, and when Charles, now 44 years of age, started on a career of professional baseball playing, it was not strange that the other boys followed in his footsteps. Charles Ganzel began his professional playing in 1884 with a St. Paul team as catcher. During the following year he played with Philadelphia, and during the season of 1886 he started the season again with the Quakers, but was released to Detroit. He became the principal backstop for that team, and it will be remembered that it was in this year the Detroit won the pennant. In 1887 Ganzel again returned to Detroit, and it was during that season that his team won the world's championship series. Ganzel again returned to Detroit in 1888, but it was that year that the entire team was sold to Boston for $45,000, and Ganzel became a part of the chattels. For the nine years that followed Ganzel continued to play with the Boston club, at the end of which time he resigned and took the management of a shirt factory, in which business he is at present engaged. Charles Ganzel was one of the most popular catchers of his time, and in a contest conducted twenty years ago, he and Charlie Bennett both secured over 90,000 votes.

Fred Ganzel, the eldest of the five sons, 40 years of age, and now a resident of South America, did less ball playing than any of his brothers. He played some with independent clubs, and during his first season with the Philadelphia team, in the early '80s, sprained his ankle and was forced to retire forever from the diamond.

John Ganzel, the third son, is a former National league star, and is now the owner and first baseman of the Grand Rapids team of the Central league. He is 31 years of age, and is one of the best first basemen the country has ever produced.

Joseph Ganzel, aged 37 years, like his brother John, first played ball on the Kalamazoo diamond, and started his professional career in 1896 with the Saginaw team of the old Michigan State league. He played his second season with the same club, and then went to Ionia and captained an independent club for three years. For the two years following he was with a club of the Copper State league, and was later one season with the Petosky team. Last year he played with his brother's team in Grand Rapids, and this season he is the manager and first baseman of the Flint club of the Interstate league. George Ganzel, the only son who remains in the home town, is 42 years of age, and his baseball playing began in 1886. During that year and 1887 he was with the Minneapolis club, and in 1888 went to Winnipeg. In 1889 and 1890 he went to the Western coast, and was with the different teams of the Washington State league. He quit for a part of the season of 1890, and the following year went to Roanoke, Va., where he played in 1892. Back again to Michigan with the Port Huron club in 1893 and 1894, and for the following two years with the Newcastle, Penn., team, with his brother, John, and finally with the Saginaw club in 1897, and George met his fate, was married, and since that time has been employed as a machinist in a foundry here, and has never played a game of ball in nine years.

The Ganzel family stands as a living example of the president's theories of right living, the half century's end finding a family of ten children, twenty-eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

THE COLORADO DISTRICT

Colorado Springs, June 30.—A special train containing eighty-five capitalists from New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, Indiana and Illinois arrived here last week. The new Park county field, Hartzell, will be visited, also Cripple Creek and other mining camps. The party is traveling in a train known as "The Fifty Gold Mines" special, and it is rumored that a merger is contemplated to bear that name. Gen. Fred W Peck of Chicago, who recently acquired control of fifty mines in Gilpin county, is a member of the party. His mines include Bobtail, Fisk and Cook lodes. New York is represented by J. L. Greatsinger, G. J. Hermann, Dr. C. E. Seofield, Brooklyn; K. Brown, W. W. Churchill, H. Y. Darnell, J. W. Ferguson, M. W. Ferris, J. W. Hussey, Charles H. Jones, Jr.; F. Lomax, F. C. Morehead, H. L. Marsha, W. L. Moyer, J. C. O'Brien, F. W. Park, C. S. Powell, W. H. Stuart, C. M. Vail, F. H. Wilson, New York city; T. E. Foster, H. O. Horton, E. C. Lyon, G. S. Lyson, White Plains. The visit is significant and will doubtless result in investments in Colorado gold fields.

Much interest centers in the new gold field recently discovered on the Tennessee fork of the Arkansas river seven miles west of Leadville, within a mile and a half of the main line of the Denver & Rio Grande road, on its way across Tennessee Pass. The formation resembles that of the better part of the Leadville district. Blunt, loose covers the ground, assays from which show two to forty ounces gold per ton. There is some copper stain and the ore is heavily oxidized. The area of the district is two by six miles. Development consists of prospect holes only. The area seems heavily mineralized, the main values being gold.

Supt. Richard Blanchard of the Metallic Gold Mining company, leasing on the Hill No. 3 Copper Mountain, Cripple Creek, is in a two and a half foot vein carrying six-ounce ore in free gold and sylvanite. D. H. Moffatt, the Denver banker and railroad builder, plowed up a pocket on this ground in 1892 which netted him $300,000.

The El Paso Gold King is sinking its shaft 85 feet from the 900-foot level to water, where a level will be run 500 feet northward. This is one of Cripple Creek's oldest mines. The El Paso Consolidated, Cripple Creek, is shipping four cars of ore weekly, from low grade to $140 ore.

A mill may be erected at the mouth of the Gold Links tunnel near Pitkin, Colo., which will be the third in operation on Ohio creek. The Carters contemplate erecting a fourth mill.

Lambright and associates, leasing on the Beacon Hill Ajax, Cripple Creek, are in a large body of ore carrying smelter and mill grades.

Saturday 108 cars of ore were shipped from Cripple Creek. The June tonnage is heavy and the output will be large if cars are available and ore treatment plants prove adequate.

The Eureka Exploration company, near Eureka, Colo., is shipping regularly. The ore is sulphide, carrying good gold and silver values. The process in use by the Ross smelter is adopted to treat the ores economically.

The Morning Star mine in Jenny gulch, Idaho Springs district, owned by Lynn, Mass., capitalists, has opened up good ore at the second level. The shaft is down 330 feet through a continuous streak of ore encountered at grass roots. The second level east shows a 14-inch streak of copper iron ore, which is being sacked for shipment without assaying.

The laterals being driven on the Dorit from Peters tunnel, now 1,010 feet in, are in the best streak of ore on Chicago Creek, Idaho Springs district. On the foot wall is a 10-inch streak of talc, containing some mineral, samples of which have returned $200 gold per ton. There are three feet of milling ore.

Frank Andracich, an Austrian, has found on his homestead, at the head of Oak creek, twenty miles southwest of Florence, Colo., a vein of gold ore twenty-seven feet wide. Five tons of ore, which were treated at a Pueblo smelter, returned $57.40 average ton value, and $27.40 net. The ore was taken indiscriminately along the vein. Edward Spaulding has located six claims, one of which contains $40 ore on the surface.

Rule & Co. have obtained a lease on the Roderick Dhu company's Protection mine, Central City district.

UTAH MINERS MAY STRIKE

Prospect That Clash May Come on First of Month---Higher Wages Demanded---Many Non-Union Miners Working.

Salt Lake City, June 30.—Utah metal mining camps have been noted for their freedom from labor troubles, but there is every prospect that a clash will come on the first of the coming month between the miners' unions and the big operating companies in two and possibly three or four camps, with a chance of the struggle finally involving all camps of note in the State. Cool heads are at work on both sides and there is a bare possibility that a general strike may be averted. An increased wage scale and recognition of the unions are in brief, what the miners are contending for, and, as is usually the case in such controversies, the mine managements charge the brewing of all the trouble to the intemperate utterances and domineering attitude of professional agitators and walking delegates in the ranks of the union men.

The first serious break is looked for at Bingham. There have been two special meetings of the miners' union there, and it has been decided, according to authentic reports from camp, that the minimum scale of wages for men employed in the mines shall be $3 instead of $2.50, as it now stands. The advanced cost of living is given as the reason for demanding a raise.

The miners of Tintic are working along the same lines as their brethren in Bingham, and warnings have already been sent out and posted throughout the district for union men to keep away. Back of the movement that has been inaugurated at Bingham and every man has a right to work if he Tintic is said to be the union men of Park City, Alta and other camps, where there is no complaint over the wage scale or hours, but where, it is said, a promise has been made to support the miners of Bingham and Tintic, even to the extent of quitting work themselves, and thus compel the smelters to close until the demands of the miners have been complied with.

No sane person is attempting to deny the seriousness of the situation, and the moderators on both sides are searching for a way to avert the threatened calamity. Mine managements are, of course, unalterably opposed to being dictated to by the unions and insist that every man has a right to work if he wants to whether he belongs to a union or not. As it stands today, there are more non-union than union men employed in Bingham. The same is probably true of Tintic, but this will not be fully known unless a strike is ordered.

Should the miners of all the camps mentioned stand in together, as threatened, it would probably result in the closing down of the smelters, as it would be next to impossible for them to get the required classes of ore for fluxing purposes. Mine managers have been holding meetings to discuss the situation, but they are even less inclined to say anything concerning their plans than are the miners. No one wishes to see a repetition of the Colorado struggle, a struggle from which the camps of that state have not yet fully recovered, and the common sense that has been equal to every emergency in the past, it is hoped, will be sufficiently in evidence this time to avert serious consequences.

During the week the Boston Consolidated company placed orders for 540 concentrating tables to be used in its new milling plant at Garfield. Wilfley and Johnson machines, about half of each, will constitute this feature of the plant's equipment and delivery is required within seven months, or not later than January next. This means that the company will have its big works ready to go into commission early in the spring, as the tables are about the last and easiest part of the equipment to be installed.

The Utah company, operating at Fish Springs, in Deep Creek, doubled the size of its dividend this month, making it two cents instead of one cent a share. cents instead of one cent a share. It also posted an extra of two cents a share. The Horn Silver company has declared its regular quarterly dividend of five cents a share, or $20,000, for payment on the 30th.

Fifty-four horse teams are now employed in hauling ore from the Columbus Consolidated of Alta, and the company is receiving an average of close to $3,500 a day for its product from the smelter.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN MINES

Looking Well, But Putting in of Machinery Delayed ---Wonderful Strike in Rabbit Foot Gold Quartz Mine.

Boise, Idaho, June 30.—J. M. Ellis, who arrived from Thunder Mountain last week, states that the mines of that section are looking well, but that owners delaying the putting in of machinery until the cyanide plant at the Sunnyside is completed, and its ability to successfully treat the ore tested. The Dewey mill has been kept running all winter and the cleanups have been satisfactory.

W. F. Sommercamp is pushing work on the Potosi, at Silver City. This property yielded much gold thirty years ago, but for many years laid idle until taken hold of last fall by the present owner. He has developed a large amount of high grade ore and installed a hoist and pump.

A company has been formed by prominent business men of Challis, with a capitalization of $1,000,000, to work mines at Custer.

Next week Morrell's sawmill will commence cutting the lumber for the new South Africa quartz mill at Idaho City.

S. M. Smith, general manager of the Greyhound group of mines in Central Idaho, has returned from an extended trip to Eastern cities. He informs me that the force of miners will soon be increased and the smelter blown in.

The old Belshazzar mine at Placerville, Boise county, is again coming to the front. An adit tunnel that followed a vein from six to eighteen inches thick of sulphide ore for 100 feet, run during the winter, which was not suspected of being good ore until a test was made last week, was found to be worth from $100 to $500 to the ton in gold. The average of the dump is $171.50 a ton.

The late strike in the Rabbit Foot gold quartz mine at Salmon City is provign a wonder. The ore is yielding over $1,000 a ton on the plates of the 10-stamp mill. The rich ore comes from a two-foot streak in a big low grade dyke. The Rabbit Foot company purchased the property last year for $30,000.

A move is on foot for the organization of a company to place dredges on a tract of 400 acres of placer ground, near Bonanza, Custer county. Borings made prove the ground good.

The Golden Rod mine on Mineral Hill, near Pioneerville, is turning out well. It is worked under a lease by Frost & Blum. The ore mills from $11 to $72 a ton. Fifteen men are employed. The ore is improving with depth. Work will soon be resumed in the Berkshin, near the Golden Rod.

A man named Parker is crushing twenty-five tons of ore per day from his mine adjoining the Confederate, at Quartzburg.

Parker Mountain, in Custer county, continues to attract considerable attention. An Ohio company has two feet of ore uncovered that gives average values all the way from $1,000 to $2,000 to the ton in gold and silver. There is considerable activity in the district, and two or three stamp mills will go up during the summer.

handling the former tonnage and the Great Northern the latter. Both of these mines have large deposits, although the Shenango's ore is the better. Extensive shipments will be made from the group of mines controlled by the Cherry Valley Iron company through the recently organized Rhodes Mining company, which has the LaRue, Croxton, Hobart, Brunt, Nassau and other properties all of them new, and which altogether contain a very large tonnage, including some very fine ores.

The total tonnage handled by the Steel Corporation's two Minnesota roads this season will not come far from 20,000,000. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern, it is figured, will transport 11,250,000 tons, and the Duluth & Iron Range in the neighborhood of 8,000,000. From the Hibbing district alone, the Steel Corporation, from its own mines, will forward 7,000,000 tons. The Great Northern road will doubtless move 6,000,000 tons or more from the Messaba range, so that altogether there will oe shipped from Minnesota ore to the amount of 25,000,000 tons or more, of which about 2,000,000 tons will be from the Vermillion district. It has been expected all along that the Missabe road's western Mesaba branch, extending from Alborn to Bovey, a distance of fifty-five miles, would be ready for operation by the first of July, but it is doubtful now that it will be much before the latter part of August before the new line goes into commission. The bridge work has not gone along as well as had been hoped, and while practically all of the steel is down there is much ballasting yet to do.

Through the Chicago Ore company, a subsidiary concern, the Central Iron & Steel company of Harrisburg, Pa., has acquired from the Blue Ore Mining company a forty-acre tract in the Hibbing district for a consideration of a royalty of forty cents per ton on all ore produced, the minimum annual output to be 100,000 tons. As so far shown up, there are upwards of 4,500,000 tons of ore in the tract, all of desirable grade and about a third of it of the bessemer quality. The property was explored in 1903 by M. W. McDonald of Minneapolis, who principally constitutes the Blue Ore Mining company, and it has been sought by a number of concerns in need of ore but which have failed to offer sufficient inducements. There is a possibility the tract may be found to contain several million more tons than now proved up. It adjoins the Mesaba Chief and St. Paul mines, the latter of which is being opened by Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland. No start upon the development of the property will be made this season. A new comer on the Mesaba is the New York State Steel company, which is now putting in furnaces at Buffalo. It has taken a lease to a forty-acre tract near the big Mountain Iron mine, and is exploring the property.

superintendent of operations, and being an old Michigan mining man, will undoubtedly make good.

The Butte & Summit Valley Copper Mining company, which was organized about two months ago for the purpose of developing a group of promising claims a short distance southeast of the Amazon or Brundy property on that east side, is now in shape to proceed with the development work orighally planned. Eastern men have secured control of the property and there is no stock in the company on the market.

The company is organized by Thomas W. Buzzo, manager of the Alice company's property; C. D. Joslyn, James A. Talbot, J. W. Thomas, William C. Buskett, J. F. Brazelton and E. A. Moseley, all of whom are officers. M. L. Holland was placed in charge of development.

The engineers in the employ of the Amalgamated and Butte Coalition companies have struck an agreement for a division of the disputed ore bodies which for years were in litigation between the Amalgamated and United Copper companies, the latter a successor in interest of the Butte Coalition. What the terms of the settlement and division are have not been made public, but have been taken to New York by B. B. Thayer, assistant to President H. H. Rogers of the Amalgamated, and they will be laid before the directors of each company for approval. There is no doubt that they will be approved, as it was agreed to leave the adjustment to the engineers. As soon as the boards formally pass on the records the various mines which have been closed by injunction for many years will be reopened. The Amalgamated company has already begun sinking a shaft on the Tramway, one of the mines that has been in litigation, and will sink it to a depth of 1,800 feet. The Parrot also has begun mining on one of the big veins from which it was excluded by an injunction for a number of years.

The Raven Mining company has suspended operations and there is a great deal of mystery about its affairs and future. Its best mine, the Spoozer, was operated through the shaft of the Buffalo mine, owned by the Anaconda company, but it had no stated lease on the shaft. Last week the Anaconda took the shaft away from the Raven, and will use it for the purpose of developing some of its own properties. The old hoisting building is being torn down to obviate the danger of fire, and it is stated by officials of the Raven that as soon as the work is completed the Anaconda company will hoist the Raven ore under an agreement that will be much better for the Raven than the old one. The Raven has a good mine in the Snoozer, but unfortunately it does not own all the interests in it, the Butte Coalition owning an eighth, and under the laws of Montana the owner of one interest cannot operate a property without the consent of the co-owner, so that at any time the Coalition company can, if its wishes, completely stop operations in the Snoozer. In order to reach the Snoozer the company is working through a tunnel driven through the property of the Old Glory company, and the latter has been for a long time threatening an injunction suit.

As a rule, "kickers" are not much account, but there is an exception. The North Butte Mining company has some in its employ, and they are all right. The company employs them to kick and does not require them to do anything else. Their business is to kick loaded cars from the cages in order that the product of the property may be handled as rapidly as possible without the loss of too much time on the surface. At all mines where cars instead of skips are used one or two men usually attend to the shifting and dumping of the cars, and considerable time is lost in pulling the loads from the cages and replacing them with empty cars. The pull is a hard one, and a loaded car often requires three or four strong jerks before it is off the cage.

The North Butte company has a different system, and, while it costs something for extra help, it evidently pays well in the long run. As soon as a cage lands on the surface two men grab the cars and pull, and two others at the opposite side, grab the iron railing of the cage, place one foot each against the car and give it a kick, with the result that the car runs off the cage as if it were shooting a chute. Empty cars are in waiting and the instant the loaded ones are off the decks the empties are substituted and the cage goes down the shaft for another load. The entire work of unloading and loading requires only a few seconds. While one cage is going down another is coming up, and the pullers and kickers therefore do not have much time to discuss general topics.

The company with this system, is raising about 1,000 tons of ore a day. Work on the new head frame is not interfering with operations below or at the collar of the shaft. High above the apex of the old frame the riveting crew is busy and the chuck of the electric hammer is not unlike that of a thrifty woodchuck getting in his work on a dead poplar tree. The riveting will soon be finished. The engine is almost ready for its trial run, there remaining only a few more minor details to complete it.

It has been officially announced that the Washoe smelter at Anaconda is to be materially enlarged and that an expenditure of $600,000 for that purpose has been authorized. It is the purpose of the company to increase the plant so that its monthly output will be 20,000,000 pounds of copper. The plans provide for a complete electrical installation in the concentrator plant and a partial electrical installation in the smelter power house. In the latter plant all the power not generated by the waste heat boilers will be developed by electricity when the new system is completed. Eight roasters will be added and another 112-foot reverberatory furnace. A new giant blast furnace eighty-seven feet long will be put in, the largest ever constructed. Two stands of converters will be added in order to take care of the increased production of matter. Additional machinery will also be placed in all other departments of the plant. The enlargement of the Washoe is in addition to the work that is to be done by the Amalgamated at its smelter in Great Falls, which is to be enlarged for a production of 10,000,000 pounds of copper a month. All the ore for this enormous production at the two smelters will come from the mines of the Amalgamated company in Butte.

When a native becomes hungry or needy in other respects, he brings in carbons to these trading posts. Apparently there is no regular industry in mining the stones, as is the case with the white diamonds procured in South Africa. Some fifteen years ago, a number of the larger concerns in this country using black diamonds in drill work, among them the Sullivan Machinery company of Chicago, the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company of Michigan, and the Minnesota Iron company of the Vermilion range, shared in the expense of sending a representative to Brazil to investigate the carbon business. He reported that he could do nothing. Conditions there are practically unchanged now, and a pool of the drill men doubtless could accomplish but very little. Trust or not, it is a case where, a commodity being needed, the consumer must pay the price demanded or go without.

As in many other mining districts, the diamond drill is used to great advantage in the Lake Superior iron and copper regions. It has been responsible for the discovery of many valuable mines that would never have been developed but for it. A case in point is at the Maas mine at Negaunee, Marquette range, wherefor the past two or three years the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company has been sinking a shaft to reach ore bodies lying at depth. It is estimated that the first skip-load of ore hoisted from this shaft will represent something over a million dollars, including in this figure the cost of the lands—too great an expenditure to have been incurred had not the company certain knowledge of what is to be encountered in the bowels of the earth; but it is positively known that the mineral wealth exists, for the reason that the diamond drill has located rich deposits and has determined them to be extensive. In the same district the Jones & Laughlin Steel company of Pittsburg is sinking a double-compartment shaft at the old Rolling Mill property for the purpose of mining ore bodies, the existence of which at a depth of about 600 feet has been disclosed in the same manner. The hard jasper and diorite rocks common to this particular district are difficult of penetration by shafts, yet are rapidly cut by the diamond bits, and hence the drill here is spreme in exploratory work, especially as the bulk of the ore is found hundreds of feet below the surface. The instances noted in connection with the Maas and Rolling Mill mines are but two of scores of cases that could be mentioned illustrating the value of the diamond drill.

In the Iron-River-Stambaugh district of the Menominee range, in portions of which there is a heavy overburden of quicksand capping the rocky ledge below which lies the ore, mines have been opened that doubtless would never had been discovered had not the diamond drill been resorted to, the expense of sinking through surface material of that nature being too great to undertake unless known in advance just what depth will reveal.

Many of the larger mining companies have their own drills, with crews of runners and setters, and keep them working the year round locating new ore deposits as the old become depleted or exhausted, but for the most part the drilling is done by contract. On the Gogebic range, the drill has added greatly to the life of the district by locating tremendous bodies of ore at depths previously supposed to be barren of mineral. This has been the case at the Norrie, Ashland, Colby and other properties. At the Norrie, about fifteen years ago, a diamond drill hole was put down to a depth of 1,500 feet, and no less than six dykes were located upon all of which considerable bodies of ore were found. Not all mines can establish claims to having more ore "in sight" than has already been removed—mines with the productive record of the Norrie—but in this case there can scarcely be any limit put to the future productivity of the property.

mill with which the properties are to be equipped during the fall and winter. Contracts for power have been awarded and a large force of men have been put on development in the mines. Within another twelve months the company should be one of the biggest gold producers in the state of Nevada.

The announcement that the San Pedro company had decided to build a road into Pioche and the news that the construction company had been formed has had the effect of causing a number of representatives of big operators in this section to pull out for that old camp and the region surrounding it. It is known that the country is full of splendid opportunities for investment and the intention is to get in on the ground floor. Mining men of this place, and Tonopah as well, realize that railroad connection with Pioche means a boom and a big one, and they are not of the kind to be missing when the shakeup comes.

Work on the Las Vegas and Tonopah road is still being crowded to the limit and already preparations are under way in the Bullfrog camp for the celebration that will accompany the toot of locomotive whistles in Gold Center on the 15th of next month. Operations at the mines of the southern camp are also being crowded and there is reason to believe that Bullfrog will be one of the liveliest camps in the state next fall.

New strikes are being made in the mines of this camp every day. In fact they have become so common that they no longer create the excitement they used to. Like Tonopah, Goldfield is now settling down to a career of production and dividend earnings that is of the regulation type, and as the camp is growing at a marvellous pace and new producers are being regularly added to the list we have come to accept them as a matter of course.

Good reports continue to come from the new camp of Phillipsburg and new strikes are being reported from the Lone Mountain district. The weather is warm, and while such conditions are considered as detrimental to great activity in this region there has been no easing down for the summer as yet.

Searchlight, Nev., June 20.—The Searchlight district is now in that attitude which may be described as "crouching for the spring." New companies are being organized, large orders placed for machinery, appliances, etc., and general preparations being made for the tidal wave of prosperity and activity which is confidently expected with the coming of fall.

Among the new companies recently organized is the Searchlight Bronco Mining company. The company was incorporated on June 8, the capitalization being 1,500,000 shares of a par value of $1. The company owns several claims lying about eight miles southeast of Searchlight, and the showing made up to this time is very good. Active development will proceed with the greatest possible speed.

The Nevada-Searchlight has begun sinking an additional 100 feet from its present depth of eighty feet. In following an excellent hanging wall of about 65 degrees the streak of good ore found on the surface has widened considerably, and the additional work on this property promises handsome returns.

RICH STRIKE AT SHATTUCK

are in the Johnson district. The Peabody mine adjoins the Johnson Copper Development company's property on the north and the Arizona Consolidated company's property adjoins the group on the south, both of which are shipping a carload of high-grade ore daily to the El Paso smelter.

The gentlemen backing the Johnson Copper Development company are reported to be well known and substantial business men of the East, who are large holders of the Bonanza stocks of Bisbee, and the Black Mountain Mining company of Sonora.

The Franklin W. Smith company of this city has recently been surveying the group and J. M. O'Connell was employed to make examination of titles. The directors of the company are: E. D. Brigham, secretary of the Black Mountain Mining company; A. Nast of A. D. Nast & Co., members of the New York Stock exchange; A. C. Murdough of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company; D. J. Johnson, capitalist of Chicago; D. Rees of James Rees & Sons, shipbuilders of Pittsburg; E. C. Sattley, manager of the Page Woven Wire company, Pittsburg, and George W. MacMullen of George W. MacMullen & Co., one of the leading brokerage firms of Pittsburg.

The property has a shaft down 100 feet from which several carloads of copper ore have been shipped to El Paso. The ore crops at the surface, having the extension of the Peabody veins. A superintendent thoroughly versed on copper mining in Arizona will be on the ground in a few days and the company proposes to begin at once active development work by sinking a shaft and running drifts from time to time.

The Johnson Development company is organized with a capitalization of $3,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares par value of $3.

Denn is drifting north and south on the 1,000. The north drift is in soft porphyry, while the south end shows still in the conglomerate. Preparations are being made to start sinking to the 1,200 from which level drifting will be pushed toward the dividend fault.

But little can be said of the progress at the Cochise during the past week, except that development goes on as rapidly as facilities will permit. The end of each week finds Cochise 25 or 30 feet ahead in development work.

is underway. The Briggs shaft is 1,150 and the Hoatson 1,190 feet deep. Drifts from the 975 and 1,000-foot levels of the former have developed a good bunch of ore. This shaft is connected through to the Junction workings. Drifts from the 900 and 1,000-foot levels of the Junction into Calumet & Pittsburg territory have developed some ore in the Ormond claim.

"It seems to be the consensus of opinion among the geologists who have made a study of the district that the Calumet & Pittsburg's property is exceptionally well located. This opinion is gaining strong confirmation in the recent development work. On my last visit to the property its waste piles showed as much and as deeply colored leached material as those around the most productive shafts of the Calumet & Arizona and Copper Queen, and assays indicated that another ore body, heretofore undiscovered, was being aproached.

"Lake Superior & Pittsburg's extensive property is in part located farther away from Sacramento Hill than the others in this group. As this hill is commonly understood to be the source of the mineralization, the developments in the extreme portions of the property will be watched with interest. Included in just what depth will reveal.

Many of the larger mining companies have their own drills, with crews of runners and setters, and keep them working the year round locating new ore deposits as the old become depleted or exhausted, but for the most part the drilling is done by contract. The company owns several claims lying about eight miles southeast of Searchlight, and the showing made up to this time is very good. Active development will proceed with the greatest possible speed.

The Nevada-Searchlight has begun sinking an additional 100 feet from its present depth of eighty feet. In following an excellent hanging wall of about 65 degrees the streak of good ore found on the surface has widened considerably, and the additional work on this property promises handsome returns.

RICH STRIKE AT SHATTUCK

are in the Johnson district. The Peabody mine adjoins the Johnson Copper Development company's property on the north and the Arizona Consolidated company's property adjoins the group on the south, both of which are shipping a carload of high-grade ore daily to the El Paso smelter.

The gentlemen backing the Johnson Copper Development company are reported to be well known and substantial business men of the East, who are large holders of the Bonanza stocks of Bisbee, and the Black Mountain Mining company of Sonora.

The Franklin W. Smith company of this city has recently been surveying the group and J. M. O'Connell was employed to make examination of titles. The directors of the company are: E. D. Brigham, secretary of the Black Mountain Mining company; A. Nast of A. D. Nast & Co., members of the New York Stock exchange; A. C. Murdough of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company; D. J. Johnson, capitalist of Chicago; D. Rees of James Rees & Sons, shipbuilders of Pittsburg; E. C. Sattley, manager of the Page Woven Wire company, Pittsburg, and George W. MacMullen of George W. MacMullen & Co., one of the leading brokerage firms of Pittsburg.

The property has a shaft down 100 feet from which several carloads of copper ore have been shipped to El Paso. The ore crops at the surface, having the extension of the Peabody veins. A superintendent thoroughly versed on copper mining in Arizona will be on the ground in a few days and the company proposes to begin at once active development work by sinking a shaft and running drifts from time to time.

The Johnson Development company is organized with a capitalization of $3,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares par value of $3.

Denn is drifting north and south on the 1,000. The north drift is in soft porphyry, while the south end shows still in the conglomerate. Preparations are being made to start sinking to the 1,200 from which level drifting will be pushed toward the dividend fault.

But little can be said of the progress at the Cochise during the past week, except that development goes on as rapidly as facilities will permit. The end of each week finds Cochise 25 or 30 feet ahead in development work.

is underway. The Briggs shaft is 1,150 and the Hoatson 1,190 feet deep. Drifts from the 975 and 1,000-foot levels of the former have developed a good bunch of ore. This shaft is connected through to the Junction workings. Drifts from the 900 and 1,000-foot levels of the Junction into Calumet & Pittsburg territory have developed some ore in the Ormond claim.

"It seems to be the consensus of opinion among the geologists who have made a study of the district that the Calumet & Pittsburg's property is exceptionally well located. This opinion is gaining strong confirmation in the recent development work. On my last visit to the property its waste piles showed as much and as deeply colored leached material as those around the most productive shafts of the Calumet & Arizona and Copper Queen, and assays indicated that another ore body, heretofore undiscovered, was being aproached.

"Lake Superior & Pittsburg's extensive property is in part located farther away from Sacramento Hill than the others in this group. As this hill is commonly understood to be the source of the mineralization, the developments in the extreme portions of the property will be watched with interest. Included in just what depth will reveal.

Many of the larger mining companies have their own drills, with crews of runners and setters, and keep them working the year round locating new ore deposits as the old become depleted or exhausted, but for the most part the drilling is done by contract. On the Gogebic range, the drill has added greatly to the life of the district by locating tremendous bodies of ore at depths previously supposed to be barren of mineral. This has been the case at the Norrie, Ashland, Colby and other properties. At the Norrie, about fifteen years ago, a diamond drill hole was put down to a depth of 1,500 feet, and no less than six dykes were located upon all of which considerable bodies of ore were found. Not all mines can establish claims to having more ore "in sight" than has already been removed—mines with the productive record of the Norrie—but in this case there can scarcely be any limit put to the future productivity of the property.

mill with which the properties are to be equipped during the fall and winter. Contracts for power have been awarded and a large force of men have been put on development in the mines. Within another twelve months the company should be one of the biggest gold producers in the state of Nevada.

The announcement that the San Pedro company had decided to build a road into Pioche and the news that the construction company had been formed has had the effect of causing a number of representatives of big operators in this section to pull out for that old camp and the region surrounding it. It is known that the country is full of splendid opportunities for investment and the intention is to get in on the ground floor. Mining men of this place, and Tonopah as well, realize that railroad connection with Pioche means a boom and a big one, and they are not of the kind to be missing when the shakeup comes.

Work on the Las Vegas and Tonopah road is still being crowded to the limit and already preparations are under way in the Bullfrog camp for the celebration that will accompany the toot of locomotive whistles in Gold Center on the 15th of next month. Operations at the mines of the southern camp are also being crowded and there is reason to believe that Bullfrog will be one of the liveliest camps in the state next fall.

New strikes are being made in the mines of this camp every day. In fact they have become so common that they no longer create the excitement they used to. Like Tonopah, Goldfield is now settling down to a career of production and dividend earnings that is of the regulation type, and as the camp is growing at a marvellous pace and new producers are being regularly added to the list we have come to accept them as a matter of course.

Good reports continue to come from

They had made eighty miles of mountainous desert in three hours.

There they met Chafey, the young fellow who had flashed the first news of the strike. He informed them that he had sent on a mule team with provisions to Stove Pipe spring, on the edge of Death valley. A half-hour stop was made. Breakfast was eaten. A new supply of gasoline was taken aboard, and each man was given a South African canvas bag full of water. Several coal-oil cans full of water were also lashed to the shelf behind, for they were entering the country of Death and Desolation.

They started off again with the green sky of dawn behind them and whirred down a dry wash through a canyon of red walls. The enfevered breath of the still invisible valley struck their faces, as if she were hissing warming to them. After a while the canyon walls opened, and Death valley was below them—a huge bowl, its bottom leprous with some loathsame-hued sediment. They whirred on, down a wash of black flint rock; with each plunge of the machine they entered a layer of air hotter than the preceding, till they panted as at the finish of a mile run. They rolled on, and the mountains rose on the sides, veiled, painted, mysterious mountains. Finally they were at the bottom, one hundred feet below sea level, and stopped at Stove Pipe spring, a hole in the sand from which a little black water oozed.

The mule wagon which Chafey had sent ahead was there, driven by Mr. McCullough, a desert prospector of years' experience. They loaded up with the water from the spring for the machine, hoarding the better water for drinking, and they then went on, across the Valley of Death.

A half mile on they reached the sand-dunes, and the big machine stuck, its wheels whirring impotently through the elusive stuff without catching.

"We can't make it," said the chauffeur.

"We've got to make it," answered Sullivan and Campbell in one breath. Before them, blue with the distance, rose the Panamints with its mine, the mine that they were after.

The three men got out. With a shovel they cleared the sand heaped up before the wheels; they placed gunny sacks beneath the tires; then, putting their shoulders against the tonneau, they pushed and strained while the chauffeur applied full power. The wheels whizzed, caught the sacking, the men strained and toiled. The machine gave a jump—one foot, two feet, three! It stuck again. More shoveling, more placing of sacks under the wheels, more pushing and straining. The machine jumped six feet and then stuck again. For 200 yards, foot by foot, they went thus across the dunes. Then the sand grew deeper and their best efforts unavailing.

"Can't make it," said the chauffeur.

"Got to," said Sullivan and Campbell.

Before them, far, mysterious as a veiled woman, the Panamint range rose with its promise of golden splendor.

They sat down upon the baking sand to consider the matter.

"The mules!" exclaimed Campbell at length.

"You've got it," said Sullivan.

With ropes they tied the wagon to the front axle of the auto. McCullough took the reins. "Yip! Yip! Yip!" he yelled, urging the animals with voice and gesture, while the chauffeur put on full power and the men pushed from behind. The machine vibrated, it jumped up and down in its tracks. There was a crash, and the mules started forward at a gallop dragging McCullough with them, while the auto remained in place, immovable as a rock. The whiffle tree had broken.

With the handle of a pick, Campbell and Sullivan improvised a new one. Then they hitched the mules directly to the auto. There was a sharp struggle. The mules tugged, the men pushed, the wheels whirred through the yielding sand. The auto began to move, an inch, a foot. The men panted. The wheels began to take hold, the machine gave a jump, and rolled forward.

For a hundred yards it went. Then the mules stopped exhausted, and the men rolled over, half dead. The perpendicular sun fell upon them like drops of molten lead. The shimmering sand caught the heat and threw it back to the sun, which promptly poured it down again, till earth, sky and air pulsated with a blinding glow. But ahead, far, mysterious, the Panamints rose with their purple promise of riches.

"Let's go on," said Sullivan.

They went on. For seven miles, by hundred-yard stretches, they heaved the machine over the sand. And finally they struck hard ground.

They left McCullough there with the wagon and the mules and a supply of water. They got into the auto and buzzed on across the shimmering alkali, a hundred feet below sea level, through an atmosphere that scorched. And ever before them the Panamints rose, veiled and inscrutable.

The machine struck a down grade and whizzed along. At the bottom of the grade, a faint, green mustiness was visible. The machine approached it with vertiginous speed. Suddenly, with an exclamation, the chauffeur leaned forward and put on both brakes. There was a thump, a screech of tortured steel, the machine skidded and jumped, then came to a full stop, like a cow pony that throws itself on its haunches. The front wheels were buried into the treacherous soil.

With infinite labor, they pulled her back out of it. They examined the ground and found that the road led through an alkali swamp. Over the oovz depths, a crust that seemed hard, but broke to weight, stretched like a shimmering white line.

Chafey went up on a little knoll to reconnoitre. The heat waves, rolling like gigantic breakers, caused strange illusions. On the top of the knoll, Chafey seemed to be limping as if his left leg were cut off at the knee. Then he began running in an extraordinary fashion around in a circle. The rest of the party called him back, afraid. He assured them that he had been walking peaceably along the ridge. They were in the land of delusions, and everything was false.

They held a conference, and then decided upon taking a wild chance.

With only the chauffeur in it, the auto was backed far up the grade it had come down. The rest of the men spread along the path through the marsh, ready for any emergency. Sullivan d

HIBBING

Hibbing, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—People in Hibbing are closely examining their calendars. It can't be the Fourth of July already, but still the small boy and his twin sister cannot be convinced that it would be much better to wait. Starting with Monday morning the noise of the 4th has been ringing in the ears of the old and young of Hibbing. Some of the pedestrians smile, and some scowl, but all will forget about it after another week has passed. The small boys, after all, only mean this for a warning for what is to come and what is to happen on the eventful Wednesday of next week. Every boy that loses a finger on the 4th is after all a veteran and a patriot.

The Fourth of July celebration in Hibbing will be the greatest and best of the city history. It will lack nothing that will help to make it long remembered to the people of this city. A special committee has been appointed to consult with the weather man, and if necessary they have permission to offer almost any inducement to that person, if it will insure us a rainless day. Other committees are preparing the fine program, which will be continued throughout the entire day. The following program will be carried out in all possible splendor:

CHINA STARTING A DIPLOMATIC SCHOOL.

Shanghai, June 29.—China is to open a school of diplomacy. This is a move far in advance of Western ideas and must be ascribed to Japanese initiative. The Chinese, however, are already the most skillful diplomatists in the world, as the powers know to their cost.

The school is to be instituted in connection with the Pekin foreign office, which will supply professors and frame the curriculum.

The students will be chosen from among the most promising scholars of the high schools, who, on graduating, will be paid a salary and given appointments in the diplomatic service. The course of training will be three years.

As the reorganization of the Chinese army involved the abolition of silken robes and pigtails, it is likely that this new departure in Chinese diplomacy will remove the picturesquely robed Chinese delegate from foreign capitals, replacing him by a silk-hatted and frock-coated Celestial. In any case, the foundation of the school marks a new era in Chinese relations with the outer world.

No Rain July 4th.

If it does go to Lyceum—Matinee and Night.

ISSUES THAT PRESENTED THEMSELVES SUDDENLY

By Charles M. Harvey in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Possibly President Roosevelt, Speaker Cannon, Representative Williams, Senator Bailey and the rest of the Republican and Democratic leaders are correct in assuming that the president and congress are now laying down the lines on which the campaign of 1908 will be fought. Usually the first congress of a national administration is by far the most important of the four years. Both sessions of it are ended a year before the delegates are beginning to be chosen to the convention which will name the next president. Only one of the sessions of the second congress of any president is finished by the time the conventions meet to nominate his successor. Chosen in the same year as himself, the president's first congress always is expected to deal with the issues which came up in the campaign in which he was elected. More interest is taken in its proceedings than in those of its successor. The manner in which it deals with the questions which the president urges in his first annual message is always of particular interest to the country. Its success or failure in its work are apt to determine the questions which will be at the front in the approaching presidential canvass.

Issues, however, have sometimes figured in presidential campaigns which were not shaped during the lifetime of the congress which had closed its labors before those presidential candidates were named. The chances are that if John Adams had been properly supported by his party in his second congress he would have made the anti-British issue paramount in 1800, and have been re-elected. Though personally never popular, Adams' spirited conduct in dealing with England and France when they were attacking American commerce had made him some warm friends, and strengthened his party. He had more votes in his second house than he had in the one which was elected with him, which is a decidedly rare circumstance. In many towns his birthday anniversary in 1799 was celebrated with some semblance of enthusiasm. But Hamilton picked off Adams' Most of the members of Adams' cabinet professed allegiance to Hamilton rather than to their official chief. Many of the Federalist party leaders in congress were either lukewarm toward Adams or hostile, the clique of Federalists which Hancock stigmatized as the Essex junto, because most of them resided in Essex county, Massachusetts, and which Adams called, the "British faction," were against him. This was particularly true of Benjamin Pickering and Fisher Ames, who were among its most prominent members. Adams wanted to make hostility to France and England in that crisis the paramount issue in the campaign of 1800, but he was hampered in his efforts, and was secretly assailed by Hamilton and others belonging to his party. Moreover, with Jefferson the candidate of the Republican (Democratic) party, Adams had to fight the most consummate political leader of the age. The fact that he was beaten by only eight electoral votes by Jefferson, and not by England and the anti-Adams feeling in Adams' party, is one of the surprises of the country's early politics.

It was not until a few months before the time arrived for president in 1832 that the lines were laid down on which that year's contest was to be fought. The second congress of Jackson's first term passed the bill to grant a new charter to the United States bank, and that question was then forced to the front, and the country divided on it, in the election the next year when Jackson was chosen for a second term. Soon after he entered office the first time, in 1829, Jackson began his attacks on the bank. They were made cautiously at first, but they became bolder as the term drew toward its end. But the bank did not get into politics in any formal way until near the time when candidates for president for the next term were to be chosen. In his message of December, 1830, at the second congress Jackson first term had been elected, Jackson intimated that he would appeal to the people on the bank issue, the time of the appeal evidently being 1832, when he was to seek a second term. This naturally alarmed Nicholas Biddle, the president of the bank, and it seems to have been he who suggested to Jackson's opponents that they should follow Clay's example and early in 1832 Dallas of Pennsylvania introduced in the senate a bill to grant a new twenty years' lease of life to the bank.

This was the second congress of Jackson's term, and was only three-quarters of a year before the voting for president would be finished. A majority of congress, and probably a majority of the people, favored the extension of the bank's existence. It had done a good service for the country, had done a good business, and was little hatched into politics, except as it was assailed by Jackson's attacks. political prejudice by Jackson's attacks, and seemed to have a fair chance of a renewal of its privileges. Dallas' bill passed both branches of congress, going to the house on July 3, 1832. This through the house on July 3, 1832. This was in two weeks after Jackson had been renominated. It was six months after Clay, his opponent, had been put up by the National Republicans.

The passage of the bank bill in the height of the presidential campaign was a challenge to Jackson. He promptly accepted the challenge, vetoed the bill, and committed a serious blunder in stating the bank's existence on the result of the presidential election. It could better have waited two or three years longer before applying for a renewal of its charter. In applying for it in the middle of a presidential canvass the bank people gave color to Jackson's charges that the institution was a political machine for the corruption of congress and the country. In the campaign Jackson had a chance to pose as the champion of the people against a corporation which, on the scale of that day, seemed to be as powerful and as autocratic as the Standard Oil company is in our time. There was no room for doubt as to the result in a fight on those lines. Jackson was easily and overwhelmingly victorious. Clay in 1832 got only a little over half as many votes as Adams received in 1828, in Jackson's first election. Jackson's victory in 1832 was as sweeping as Roosevelt's was in 1904. Clay, Biddle and the rest of the bank's champions were overthrown, the scheme for a new charter was defeated under conditions which made defeat peculiarly disastrous, and the bank passed out of existence as a national institution in 1836.

Events which took place after the election of the second congress of Pierce's term were dominant in the canvass which chose his successor. The repeal of the Missouri compromise, which was accomplished by the act that Pierce signed on May 30, 1854, was the largest measure which was enacted during that president's term, and it was passed during the term's first half. It forced all the anti-slavery elements into a league, which became the Republican party, and that party displaced the Whig organization, which quickly dropped into extinction. On the issue generated by the repeal of the Missouri compromise the Republicans elected a large plurality of the house which was chosen in the fall of 1854. But nobody at that time supposed this league of the enemies of slavery from the old parties would last long. The first state convention which adopted the Republican name for the new party, that which met 'under the oaks' in Jackson, Mich., on July 6, 1854, recited that it represented men who, belonging to all the old parties, would in that exigency "co-operate and be known as Republicans, until the contest be terminated." It was supposed then that the contest would be short, that the slavery extensionists would be beaten in the election of 1856 or 1860, and that nothing more would be heard of the slavery issue.

It was after Pierce's first congress expired that the events shaped themselves which were to have a decisive influence on the politics of the next few years. March 5, 1855, after the congress stepped down which had repealed the Missouri compromise, the free state government of Kansas met in Topeka, Charles Robinson was inaugurated as governor, and Andrew H. Reeder and James H. Lane were chosen United States senators. The Topeka state government was never recognized at Washington, the territorial status for Kansas continued until Jan. 29, 1861, and in the meantime several constitutions for statehood, anti-slavery and pro-slavery, were brought before the people of the territory. The contest between the rival elements—those which wanted to ally Kansas with the North and those which aimed to throw it into a league with the South—precipitated something like civil war, which was waged several years, which convulsed the country and which dwarfed all other issues before the people. Raids of pro-slavery men from Missouri for the purpose of controlling elections in Kansas, and murder and arson on both sides were among the features of the statehood contest. The fights John Brown emerged from obscurity and started out on the career which led to the tragedy at Harper's Ferry. Governor after governor appointed by Pierce and Buchanan as Democrats were over to the free state men and became Republicans, Shannon being almost the only one who remained faithful to the Democratic party.

Sumner of Massachusetts made an impassioned speech in the senate on May 20, 1856, on "The Crime against Kansas," which created more of a sensation throughout the country than has been excited by anything said by anybody in either branch of congress in the past quarter of a century. On May 21 the proslavery sacked Lawrence, Kan., and the Emigrant Aid society's hotel, a headquarters for the free state men, the Herald of Freedom newspaper office and other buildings being destroyed. On May 22 Sumner, while sitting at his desk in the senate, was beaten down by Preston S. Brooks, one of South Carolina's representatives in the house, and suffered injuries which incapacitated him for work for four or five years. A committee of the Republican house recommended Brooks' expulsion, but the Republicans lacked the necessary two-thirds, and the expulsion resolution failed. Brooks resigned, received a tumultuously enthusiastic reception at his home, and was re-elected by a practically unanimous vote.

While these convulsive things were taking place the delegates to the big conventions were beginning to assemble. The Democrats met at Cincinnati on June 2, and nominated Buchanan. On June 17 the Republicans met in Philadelphia and put up Fremont. In both conventions Kansas troubles were discussed. Kansas held the leading place in the things inserted in the Republican platform. The Democrats won, though by a narrow margin, and regained control of the house, as well as elected the president The disturbances in Kansas dominated the politics of Buchanan's whole administration, as they did the second half of that of his predecessor. In the latter half of Buchanan's term took place John Brown's Harper's Ferry raid, which added to the strain between the sections, and hastened the secession for which Lincoln's election furnished a convenient pretext.

The greatest measure of Grant's second term, the resumption of specie payments, was enacted after the second congress of that term was chosen.

Oddly enough, a tariff act was passed in the short session of the congress of 1881-83 which figured to some extent in the presidential campaign in 1884. The tariff commission appointed by President Arthur under an act of congress of May, 1882, reported in favor of reductions in duties ranging from 5 to 50 per cent. As they were in line with recommendations made by Arthur in his messages, they received favor from many of Arthur's party in that Republican congress. It was in the short session of the congress, however, after that which would serve through the second half of Arthur's term was chosen, that work on the tariff bill took concrete shape. On the basis of the commissioner's report, the ways and means committee brought a bill before the house on Jan. 16, 1883, two and a half months after that congress's successor months after that congress's successor had been elected. Meantime, the senate had been elected. Meantime, the senate had not acted. A house bill previously passed which reduced internal revenue taxation, and to this bill it added amendments in accordance with the tariff commission's suggestions covering the whole of the tariff. This bill passed the senate on Feb. 19. Though the house was disposed to resent this action of the senate in framing a tariff bill of its own, the bill was accepted, and in the conference committee a compromise was agreed upon which was substantially on the line of the senate's measure. This was signed by Arthur on the last days of the session of the congress of 1881-83.

It was long after the congressional elections of 1884, in the middle of Cleveland's second term, that the lines were laid on which the parties divided in the presidential canvass of 1888. Richard P. Bland of Missouri, who was defeated in the congressional canvass of 1894, pushed the silver issue in its peremptory phase to the front in 1895, and some of the legislation in congress in the earlier months of 1896 rendered a square alignment on it on both sides certain. Some of the Republican leaders wanted to make the tariff paramount, in order to head off the division in their party which the adoption of a gold plank in the platform of that year would cause. Events forced the gold plank through the Republican convention in St. Louis in June of that year, however, and the Democrats in Chicago in July, in the convention which Bryan-nominated Bryan, accepted the Republican challenge and declared for silver coinage without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation. There is a possibility, as these precedents show, that the issue is still to be developed on which the presidential battle of 1908 will be fought.

LOVESICK WOMAN'S BULLET HITS WATCH.

Denver, Colo., June 29.—The love of Mrs. Tudor Kearns of Chicago came near causing her to become a murderess Tuesday when she fired a shot at William H. Eader who had repeatedly spurned her. The shot imbedded itself in a watch in Eader's pocket.

Mrs. Kearns came here a month ago and at once wrote a letter to Eader, telling him that she had fallen in love with him through reading his stories contributed to a Chicago magazine, of which her husband is one of the editors. Eader ignored the note.

He has a wife and two children and repeatedly declined to enter her automobile and receive her attentions. To his request to "pass him up" the woman would reply, "Never; you know my love, and I will never give you up."

Yesterday he again spurned her, when in an insane rage she whipped out a revolver and fired the shot. He fell, and supposing she had killed him, she fled. The police have not found her.

Seven Propositions Laid Down in the Divorce Decision.

St. Louis, June 29.—Through the courtesy of G. S. Tourville, law book agent, St. Louis, the Globe-Democrat is enabled to furnish the official syllabus of the recent remarkable decision of the supreme court of the United States on the divorce question, as follows:

Haddock vs. Haddock.—201 U. S., 562, 50 L. ed.

Where a divorce is decreed by a state to a person bona fide domiciled therein and no service has been made on the libellee, who is not a resident in such state, otherwise than by publication, and the parties have never lived together in such state, the state of the libellee is not bound by the constitution of the United States to give full faith and credit to such divorce, but may grant a divorce to the libelle notwithstanding.

What Happened to Fred on the Glorious Fourth

AN AMUSING STORY OF THE FOURTH OF JULY BY WILLIAM WALLACE JR.

There was to be a great celebration on the glorious Fourth in the beautiful grove of elms and oaks that grew in a most propitious spot near a cool, sparkling stream one mile from Beerville.

And all Beerville was up and doing at the first peep of day; even the very young and small Beervillers found themselves wide awake at the first sound of the roaring anvil which was fired at the town smithy as early as 5 o'clock.

One of the happiest little Beervillers, who had lived for a week prior to the Fourth on happy anticipation, was Fred Harper, aged 10. On the morning in question Fred's mother came into his room and said: "To-day's the glorious Fourth, Freddie."

On other mornings Fred's mother had to call him many times before she could prevail upon him to open his eyes, but on this morning the few words she spoke worked like magic in waking him instantly. With eyes wide open and a heart full of eagerness Fred leaped from bed and bathed and combed and dressed himself in his Sunday best in much less time than it usually took him to get his eyes really open.

You see, Fred was a true patriot, to whom the occasion meant a great deal.

After breakfast Fred was restless to start for the celebration grounds, and could hardly wait till his mother had their luncheon baskets packed and his father was at the gate with a two-seated spring wagon to carry them to the grove.

But after arriving at the picnic grounds the time passed very rapidly, indeed, for there was music by the band and singing by the town's best vocal talent. And, besides these features of entertainment, there was a drum-corps parade, in which Fred proudly marched at the head carrying the flag.

Then came the reading of the Declaration of Independence by a deep-voiced young lawyer who was duly impressed by the honor conferred upon him by the celebration committee. Although the great words and sentences that fell from the young reader's tongue found place in the ears and minds of the Beeville fathers and mothers, the younger listeners grew a bit restless and found it hard to keep their seats beside the enthused parents.

More than once Fred's mother was obliged to shake him to keep him awake, and once, losing all patience with him, she whispered in his ear: "Now, son, you sit up and keep your eyes on the young man who is reading, and listen to everything he says; and mind, if you don't keep awake I'll not let you have the skyrockets I have in mind to buy for you this evening."

Fred at once sat up, batted his blue eyes and pinched his legs to keep himself awake. Then he riveted his eyes on the reader of the Declaration of Independence, his poor ears catching an occasional and, to him, meaningless word.

But as he sat there the young lawyer's face began to change and his voice to sound dim and far away. Then sound ceased altogether and the reader gradually took on the form of a huge skyrocket, his florid face looking for all the world like the gaily red-painted "business end" of the rocket.

This amused Fred so much that he snickered, whereupon his mother took hold of him and pushed him away from the bench where he had been sitting beside her, whispering crossly to him to run on away into the woods and amuse himself, since he was too stupid and too sleepy-headed to listen to the reading of that "grandest thing ever written—the Declaration of Independence."

So Fred, shaking out his sleepy feet and stretching his arms that ached to be doing something, walked willingly away toward the dense timber that bordered the brook. He had not gone far when he heard a rustling noise in the grass behind him, and, turning round, he saw the young lawyer, who was still in the form or a giant skyrocket, coming at full tilt after him.

Fred stopped and waited till the strange being came up, also kept silent, giving his new companion opportunity to speak first.

"Well, Freddie," said the human skyrocket, in a strange metallic voice, "I don't blame you for getting tired of all that lingo I was reading, for it made me tired, too. So I thought I'd just change shape and have a little real Fourth of July fun. Truth is, people—nor kids neither—don't know what real sport is on the Fourth. If a fellow'd have a good time he's got to turn himself into a skyrocket or giant firecracker and shoot himself into the clouds. Then he can see everything and make all the noise he wants to."

"That's great!" exclaimed Fred, admiring greatly the young lawyer who possessed the magic charm that could turn himself into the form of a skyrocket the size of a telegraph pole. "Wish I could be even a firecracker."

"Enough said," remarked the lawyer. "You shall go with me in the shape of a giant firecracker. Come, what say you to that?"

But before Fred could reply he felt his two legs turn into one; his hands slipped into his pockets, and became attached to his sides, and lo! he looked at his own reflection in the grass—a most peculiar phenomenon and saw that he was the thing he had wished to become—a giant firecracker!

"Oh, bo!" he cried merrily. "I'm almost as big as you. Bet I can outshoot you!"

"I take the wager," responded the skyrocket. "Do you happen to have a match about you?"

"I've matches, but no hands to get to them with." replied Fred. "That is, I left home with lots of matches in my pockets and I guess they're still there."

"Oh, I see," said the skyrocket. "Well, I find myself in the same handless predicament. But there comes Billy Grimes, your school chum. I'll ask him to give us a light."

At that instant Billy Grimes did appear, and the skyrocket—otherwise the lawyer—bent over toward him and said: "My esteemed friend, will you kindly touch a lighted match to me, and also one to my smaller companion here, and see us go toward the clouds?"

"Well, my goodness gracious! Who ever saw such a huge skyrocket and giant firecracker before?" cried Billy, looking up at the two queer things that looked down upon him. "Indeed, I shall touch matches to you and see you both go off ker-plunk! Gee, you fellers are g-r-e-a-t!"

Then getting some matches from his pocket Billy scratched them against the sole of his shoe and protected them in the hollow of his left hand till they flamed good and strong; then he applied the blazes to the skyrocket and giant firecracker, running off a safe distance immediately upon seeing the fuses ignite.

A strange feeling took possession of Fred as the fuse burned within him. Then, just as he was on the point of shooting into the air, a terrible noise sounded near him and he saw the skyrocket dash through the air like a cannonball. But he had not an instant to spend enjoying his friend's sudden exit from earth, for immediately his own body shot upward with a terrible explosive sound and he followed in the wake of the rocket that was carrying a trail of fire into the clouds.

Then he burst!—went into a hundred pieces—when about 10 feet above the ground. And how the sparks of fire burnt him and tingled through his body—the part of it that was left to tingle, which, indeed, was but a bit of charred piece of wood. And how he fell with a dull thud to earth, still burning like a blister.

Then something strange happened. All of a sudden he felt a dash of something cold on his—face!—yes, face, for his cheeks and nose and chin felt it as plainly as could be. Another dash! Then Fred opened his eyes—yes, eyes!—for he still had those precious orbs. And in another instant he realized just where he was and what he was. He was plain Fred Harper, aged 10, and was lying on the ground under a tree, but not in the shade, for the sun had crept round toward the West and was shining full in his face. Over him stood Billy Grimes with a home-made squirt-gun from which the mischievous rascal sent a spray of cold water over Fred's face which was almost burned to a blister by the hot sun.

"Hi, what you sleepin' fer on th' Glorious Fourth?" asked Billy, giving Fred some more water from the apparently inexhaustible squirt-gun. "Don't you know they're spreadin' the dinner? An' they've got dead loads of goodies."

"How did I come here?" Fred asked, rising slowly and making a wry face, for his arms and legs were asleep and tingled like a hurt crazybone when he tried to get up.

"W'y, you went to sleep while that lawyer man was a-readin' the Declaration of in'ependence, an' yer ma she tooked you up an' carried you out here an' laid you in the shade. But fer quite awhile the sun's bin cookin' yer phiz. It's been lots of fun to see you wriggle an' make crooked faces. Then yer ma she called to me an' told me to wake you up, as dinner's 'bout ready to eat. I'm invited by yer ma to eat with you, an' she says I'm to go home with you an' help to shoot off the fireworks 'at she's got laid up in the closet to s'prise you with."

Fred at last got up, shook himself fully awake, and then, taking Billy to one side, asked in a low, confidential whisper: "Say, Bill, have you seen the lawyer man what was reading the Declaration of Dependence?"

"Sure; yonder he is buyin' lemonade for his best gurl," answered Billy, pointing with an unwashed finger toward the honored man of the day, who in very truth was standing close beside a pretty young lady in pink, both drinking with apparent relish some picnic lemonade.

"Gee whiz," exclaimed Fred, "it hasn't been half an hour since I saw him shoot into the clouds, explodid' as he went as loud as a cannon. W'y, he was the biggest skyrocket I ever saw in all my life. He was"——

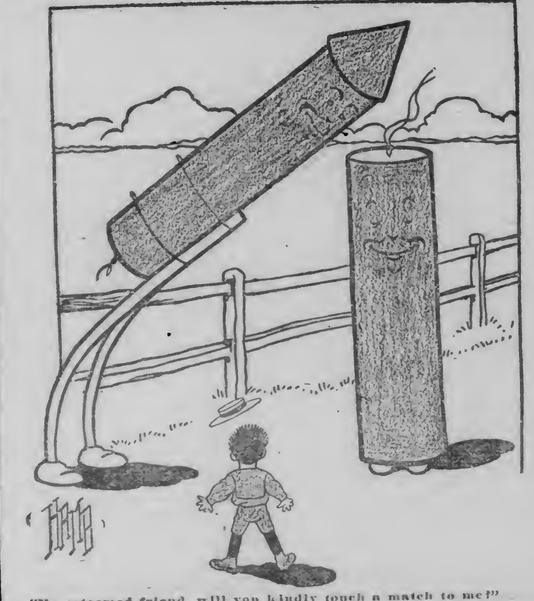

"Come off," cried Billy, giving him the last drop of water from the squirt gun. "What you talkin' 'bout, anyway?"

"Guess I was dreamin'," answered Fred. "But it was the most amusin' dream I ever had. Wish you could have seen the lawyer man shoot into the sky about a second after you touched a match to him."

"A'n't I touched a match to him?" cried Billy. Then, taking Fred by the arm, he continued: "Guess you're either sunstruck or the glorious Fourth has gone to yer head. Come—after you've et some of that 'friend chicken I seen yer ma takin out of a basket you'll come to."

"Hope so," grinned Fred. "But, honest, it was funny to see that lawyer man go into the air, though. And when I bursted"——

But Billy, dragging him toward the picnic spread, broke in with: "Now, that's 'nough for this time. Save the rest fer 'next Fourth o' Julie."

"My esteemed friend, will you kindly touch a match to me?"

Sammy's Soliloquy.

When I'm growed up to be a man,
And own a little boy,
I'll never stamp my foot and storm
And say he does annoy
Me out of all my very wits;
Nor will I scowl and frown,
And call him just the very worst
Of all mean kids in town.

I'll simply take 'im on my knee,
An' lis'en to the jokes
What he is goin' fer to play
On all old cranky folks
That are forgittin' every day
They was ever young an' good,
Or 'at they e'er enjoyed life
Like happy youngsters should.

For 't 'pears to me 'at people most Grows sourer with each year,
An' only live to frown an' scold,
An' spank their children, dear,
For doin' of the very things
That once they did with glee
When they were young an' very good—
The same as you an' me.

An' when I have a little boy,
He may eat an' eat an' eat,
Till he is full to busting
From mouth down to his feet.
For this is how I look at it—
Men live both long and old;
But boys don't live to be past 12;
At least, so I've been told.

The Fox and Hounds.

A Lively Athletic Game for Boys and Girls.

"Hounds" chasing the "Fox."

Cast lots to see who shall be the fox, for all the boys and girls save one must play at being hounds. When the decision has been made give the fox five minutes' start. It is best to play in the country, where there are hills and woods, for it is more interesting when the fox gets lost from sight.

The fox must carry a bag filled with bits of white paper, which he throws out along the track as he runs. This is the "scent" that the hounds follow. But the fox must use caution in throwing the paper out in too great quantities, for the hounds must be obliged to hunt the scent at times, otherwise the fox might be too easily overtaken and the game prove entirely too tame.

But during the chase the hounds must not under any circumstances leave the scent, and often much fun is had by the fox turning round and passing back close to the path it took in going out, thus running so close to the hounds that they could easily catch it dared they leave the scent. But the fox must never cross its own path on the return trip, for by so doing the scent would be lost.

The game is a test of swiftness versus endurance, some children proving much swifter runners than others but without the endurance to keep up in the chase. If the fox is one of endurance he can wear out his pursuers by taking them over uneaven and steep hillsides, following a zig-zag route that keeps the hounds in a constant state of anxiety regarding the scent.

The starting place is the goal, and if the fox escapes being caught and returns to it in safety he has won the game over the hounds, the last hound returning to goal being elected to play the fox in the next game, for he is the worst defeated hound and must, therefore, pay the penalty by being the fox.

But if, on the other hand, the fox is caught the hounds are the winners of the game, and the boy who is to play the fox in the next game must be picked by the casting of lots, all—including the defeated fox—taking equal chances.

Sometimes the chase will lead over four or five miles, and as the boys and girls become adepts in the art of long-distance running they will enlarge their territory after being able to travel six or seven miles on a stretch.

IRISH WIT.

Pat—Pshure an' the doctor performed an operation on me brother Tim.

O'Leary—Phat did he operate on him for?

Pat—Why, man, for $100, to be sure!

Nora—Mike, is that Patrick Ryan an honest man?

Mike—I don't like to accuse a man without substantial proofs, Nora, but I'm afraid he's the kind that needs watchin'.

Nora—Why, Mike?

A PICNIC ON THE DESERT.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

Annie, Paul and Nell had gone to the foothills of the mountains to spend a day picnicking on the desert. At home, in the East, when they went out to enjoy the day there were so many lovely shady places to choose from that it was often a question of which spot should be selected for the day's outing. But away out here in New Mexico it was quite different, for there were no groves nor streams clear and cool, with shady, grassy banks. Dull-colored sand—which afforded life to no vegetation save the gray sage brush and cacti—stretched everywhere and served as a reflector for the sun, whose burning rays beat relentlessly down, baking everything they touched.

The children carried with them baskets of luncheon, or rather their pack burro carried them, for the distance to the foothills was too great to allow of their walking, and each child made the way across the trackless waste of sand on the back of a lazy burro, the pack animal following with his eyes shut, possibly dreaming of the things that had happened in his uneventful life of toil.

About 10 o'clock found them at the place of destination, a place which at a distance had appeared much more inviting than it really was. From where they were living for the summer this particular spot at the base of the foothills looked purple, shady and cool. But distance had lent its enchantment, as Annie Paul and Nell discovered on close approach, and the deep, shady canyon they had hoped to find slowly faded away, and in its place yawned a smooth hollow that was sunken between two hills, a hollow bare of anything save shifting, colorless sands.

"Well, there's no use feeling disappointed," declared Paul. "We were told down at camp by those who knew that we'd better stay there and eat our picnic dinner in the shade of the 'dobe hotel, or go out to tent town and visit with the campers. But for one, I'm not sorry, for it's been sport coming across the sand on these solemn donkeys. It put me in mind of the camels that carry people across the Sahara. They say they are the most solemn and intelligent of beasts."

"Well, in the matter of intelligence these burros are surely quite unlike the camel," said Nell, dismounting and turning her burro loose to wander where it wished. "You see the thing is too stupid to budge from its tracks. Here it would stand till doomsday unless someone should guide it away."

"That is all the better for us," declared Annie, also springing from her burro's back to the soft sand. "We can let them stand here while we go up the mountain to see what is to be seen."

"Suppose we rest here till eating time," said Paul, lifting the luncheon baskets from the pack burro. "It's no use to hunt for a shady spot, for we wouldn't find it this side the Missouri River Valley. And as our time is a bit limited we'll not be able to go there to-day."

"Oh, I think a picnic on the desert is just the thing!" exclaimed Nell. "It will be so unusual, and we'll tell the folks all about it when we return East."

"Sure, half the pleasure comes in telling of it to others," assented Annie. "Where would be the fun in anything unless you could talk about it to your friends?"

Then the three children, whose parents had indulgently allowed them to come off by themselves for a day's outing, decided to "just fool round till after dinner." There would be time enough in the afternoon to go up the mountain, against whose base lay the brown ugly hills that had been their choice for a picnic ground. To pass the time away they tried building a castle of sand, but found it was more unsatisfactory than building air castles, so they decided to lie on their backs in the sand and erect a few of the latter.

Thus the time passed and noon arrived. Then the three opened the baskets and spread the picnic cloth on the sand. But just as they were about to seat themselves to enjoy the feast—for they were ravenously hungry—Paul noticed that the four burros were acting strangely. They would put their noses to the earth, then raise their heads and shake them uneasily. As the children were watching them the four animals turned as one toward the camp, starting at a brisker walk than was their usual gait. Annie, Paul and Nell were obliged to run in pursuit of them and turn them back. But as the burros seemed stubborn, and bent on going off towards camp, Paul decided to hobble them with their bridle reins. This done the three children sat down to the spread, but just as Paul was unwrapping a tissue papered sandwich there came across the plain a bit of a whirlwind—called in that part of the world a "sand devil." It was nothing more nor less than a miniature cyclone, whirling and leaping and gathering sand and alkali dust as it came.

The children quickly spread a cloth over their food, holding it down at the four corners till the "sand devil" passed. Then, wiping the dust from their eyes they began their luncheon. But they had scarcely done so when the whirlwind came across the level expanse of sand with sudden fury. And with it came sand and alkali dust, making it impossible for the children to eat.

Hurriedly they sprang to their feet, and while Nell put the food away in the baskets Annie and Paul ran to fetch the burros that were again starting homeward.

"Guess we've got a regular desert sand storm!" called out Paul above the noise of the rising wind. "There's but one thing to do, and that is to pull for camp as lively as these burros will travel."

"We'll never be able to see our way!" cried Annie, her fears almost mastering her. She had heard of people being lost on these plains in sand storms and perishing for water. Already her throat felt parched, and she ran to the baskets and procured a bottle of water which she intended to hold to in case of emergency.

"Well, we must get on the burros and trust to their sagacity," declared Paul, his eyes so full of dust and sand that he could scarcely hold them open. "Come, I'll help you girls to mount, then I'll get on my burro. But we must manage to keep together, for if we should get separated we'd not be liable to find each other soon, for look! we can't see a dozen yards beyond the spot where we stand."

Nell and Annie obeyed Paul's instructions and soon all were mounted, and the pack burro left to follow without the baskets, for there was no time to pick up the baskets, luncheon and napery.

"We are going in a circle!" cried Nell, her heart beating violently with the fear she felt. "We'll never, never get to camp if we don't go right."

"How are we to know the directions?" demanded Annie. "We can't see even the hills."

"The wind is from the south. We'll go full against it!" cried Paul. "But try as I may I can't turn this brute's head in that direction."

"The wind is not from the south," declared Annie. "It followed in the path of the sand devil, and that came from the west."

But all argument was stopped by the terrible dust and sand that filled eyes, ears, nostrils and throats, and the children kicked and pounded the burros with all their feeble strength to urge them on.

"I don't know as it's any use to try to guide 'em!" at last called out Paul. "Give 'em the reins! They may take the right course."

Both Annie and Nell now felt that all hope might as well be abandoned. They were doomed to be lost on this desert, where they would perish for water. Even the bottleful that Annie carried would quench their thirst but once. Then all would be over.

Thus giving up to despair, the little girls gave the reins to the "poor, stupid burros," as they said mentally. But Paul, believing in the instinct of the little animals to take them aright, sat up in the saddle hopefully.

After sometime—which seemed much longer than it really was—the children heard voices calling, "Hellloa! hellloa!" They answered back with beating hearts, "Hellloa! hellloa!" And in a few minutes there blew into the circle of their vision rescuers from the camp. And then the happy trio learned that they were within a quarter of a mile from camp, the trusty little burros having carried them safely in the right direction, much against the children's wish, for they—the girls especially—had declared that "the stupid little beasts" were traveling in a circle.

After Annie, Paul and Nell had rested and partaken of some dinner they sat in the midst of their parents and friends and found much pleasure in describing their "picnic on the desert." "Well, we've had an experience worth telling about!" said Paul, drolly. "It will sound great to our Eastern cousins when we tell them that we were lost in a sand storm——"

"And that we didn't even have donkey sense," interrupted Nell, now alive to the humorous side of the situation. "For hadn't we trusted ourselves to those poor, stupid little burros we might have still been blowing about among the sands."

"There came across the plain a bit of a 'Whirlwind.'"

A UNIQUE PICNIC HAT FOR GIRLS.

No. 2 shows top of hat.

Few girls like to wear anything to a picnic which will not bear rough usage, and especially do they feel particular in regard to their millinery. Even the inexpensive little "ready-to-wear" hats are too dainty to withstand the wear and tear of a day in the woods, and many girls will say: "I don't mind soiling my muslin frock, for it will bear the tub, but if my hat gets crushed or its shape spoiled by the dew there is no remedy save to replace it by a new one."

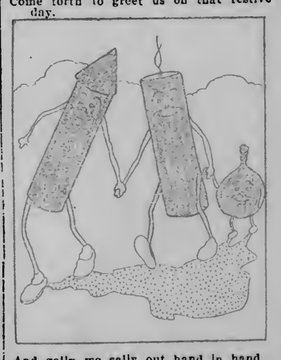

Now here is a suggestion which I am sure many girls will be glad to follow, a suggestion for a "picnic hat." Get a very large, strong palm-leaf fan—a nice one can be bought for a few cents—and cut off the handle close against the edge of the fan. Bind the edge of the fan with some pretty colored ribbon and sew firmly in the center—on the curved side—a bandeau to fit the head. One may buy a bandeau at the milliner's for a trifle, or become one's own milliner by shaping a bandeau of a bit of milliner's canvas and wire. This should be covered on the exposed side with ribbon the same as is used for binding the edge of the hat.

Near the outer edge, on top of the fan, place at either side full bows of the ribbon with long streamers to tie beneath the chin when the wind blows too fiercely. When the ties are not needed they may be caught up in loops with a trimming pin or carelessly knotted behind over the hair.

The "fan picnic hat" is useful, unique and very becoming to fresh young faces.

SONG OF THE FIREWORKS.

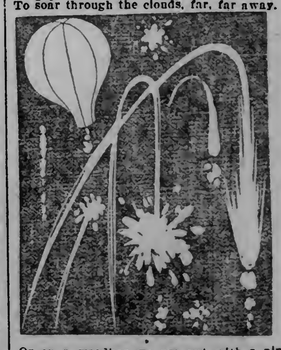

On the Glorious Fourth we're welcomed by all.
The young and the old, the short and the tall,
The lean and the fat, the sour and the gay,
Come forth to greet us on that festive day.

And gaily we sally out hand in hand,
Loving to follow the loud-playing band;
And filling the streets with our own lusty noise
That drowns the sound of band and of boys!

In the pockets of youth we're carried around,
And thrown out to burst on the grassy ground
Near the feet of some picnicker, all unaware
That a boy with a cracker is near anywhere.

Or mayhap we're shot like a ball toward the sky;
And we carry a flame and a roar on high.
Or in form of balloons we are sent up so gay
To soar through the clouds, far, far away.

Or on a woodbar we are put with a pin
And touched with a match to make us spin, pin.
Then we splutter and whirl and burst with our glee,
As the crowds clap and yell, "Hurray-ah! hur-ree!"
Oh, the Fourth is the day for chaps of our kind;
And more popular folks than us you'll not find!
But when the Fourth's over we shed a sad tear,
For we're laid on the shelf for another whole year.

ATTORNEYS ARE HARD AT WORK GETTING EVIDENCE FOR THE TRIAL OF THAW

Mrs. Thaw Reveals Her Entire Life to Husband's Lawyers.

State's Attorneys Are as Busy as Those for Thaw.

New York, June 30.—Both the district attorney's office and the counsel for the defense today are devoting themselves to the serious work of preparing the evidence in the case of Harry K. Thaw. The preliminaries have been completed. Since the killing of Stanford White, Monday night, Thaw has been arraigned, has been before the coroner's jury, formally charged with murder, indicted and yesterday added the final page to the first chapter of the court proceedings by appearing in the court of general sessions and personally pleading "not guilty."

Today finds Mrs. Thaw not only a willing witness for her husband but an active assistant for his attorneys. Yesterday she was under a gruelling examination by his lawyers for four hours and related every incident of her life that may bear on the case. When she had finished stenographers had nearly 100 closely written pages of the story. The examination may be continued later. Mrs. Thaw's activities did not end here, for she assumed the roles of informant and inquisitor, securing the evidence of many young women who knew Stanford White and aiding her attorneys in questioning others.

The state's lawyers were in the meantime as busy as Thaw's and this morning they delved deeper and deeper into the case, striking for the direct motive for the killing. Truxton Beale, who was with White at the dinner which preceded the shooting, has not appeared as yet, and is believed to be in Washington. His evidence is wanted to follow that of Thomas McCaleb, Thaw's California friend, who dined with the Thaws Monday night, and who appeared before the acting district attorney yesterday. McCaleb was at the roof garden with the Thaws at the time of the shooting. From what could be learned McCaleb's story is interesting in showing that Mrs. Thaw and he started to leave the roof garden before the shooting and were on their way out when they heard the shots. McCaleb is said to have sworn that when the shots were heard Mrs. Thaw snatched him by the arm and made this remark: "My God! he's shot him."

Just what reason McCaleb gave for their starting to leave before the shooting could not be learned. He said that he had gone to dinner with them at the Cafe Martin, described how they sat at the table, and where White sat. The seat that White took was one facing Mrs. Thaw. McCaleb said that White's name, however, was not mentioned at the dinner, and that he did not see any note passed between Thaw and his wife during the dinner. When they got to the roof garden, he sat down with Mrs. Thaw. Thaw, after a while, got out of his seat and left them. His statement covered many important points, it is said, but every effort is being made to keek all the evidence quiet until the trial.

A somewhat startling statement was made today to the effect that the July grand jury, which comes in today, will take up the Thaw case. It was the June jury that indicted Thaw.

No intimation has yet been given about what features of the case will be the subject of examination before the secret inquisitorial body, but it is assumed the district attorney seeks to implicate another person in the crime. There can be no reason for another indictment against Thaw, as the one actually in existence has not yet been attacked. As Thaw is known to have fired the three shots that killed Mr. White, the announcement of further proceedings caused general surprise.

Thaw passed an uncomfortable night in his cell on account of the oppressive heat. The prison is close and stuffy, even under ordinary conditions of weather, and last night it was almost unbearable. Toward morning the temperature dropped slightly, and the prisoner succeeded in getting to sleep. Scarcely more than an hour later, however, the sun came pouring through the barred window of his cell, and his rest was ended.

Mrs. Thaw was the earliest visitor at the prison today. She arrived at the beginning of the four-hour period, during which visitors are permitted to enter the Tombs. In contrast with her previous visits to her husband, the streets around the prison were deserted when she arrived today.

SENATOR CLAPP TO HELP REVISE FEDERAL LAWS.

Washington, June 30.—Senator Clapp was appointed a member of a joint commission of senators and representatives to revise the laws of the United States. This commission will review the work of a commission of lawyers appointed under an act passed in 1897. It will have before it about 8,000 acts, divided into seventy-nine titles, covering every division and sub-division of the federal statutes. The full congressional commission will not meet until next fall. In the meantime, however, the individual members will be furnished with copies of the report of the lay commission with a view to familiarizing themselves with the various branches of the work and to be prepared to suggest any changes that may be deemed neccessary before congress adopts the codification or revision. Each member of the commission will submit his views, and the full commission will then report to congress a bill or bills coverin gthe revision and codification.

SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Czar's Advisers Strongly Urge the Dissolution of Parliament.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The uppermost question now is how long the present deadlock between parliament and the government can continue. Premier Goremykin is no longer a factor in the situation, but some of his colleagues, headed by Minister of Agriculture Stichinsky, realizing that unless the government fights the cabinet must fall are earnestly advising the emperor to take the bull by the horns and dissolve parliament. They have submitted a memorandum to the emperor advising him to take this course on the ground that parliament has ceased to be a legislative body and is simply the center of revolutionary agitation and urging that immediate action is necessary. They contend that the army as a whole can be still relied on. Finance Minister Kokovsoff and Minister of Justice Chichegiovitoff, on the other hand, consider that an attempt to forcibly dissolve parliament would be fatal. The former, who is ambitious to become premier, seems to be championing the formation of a mixed, responsible ministry in the hope that the emperor will charge him to undertake its formation. In the meantime it is announced that the cruise which the emperor and his family will take in Finnish waters will be made next week. The imperial yacht will be escorted by two warships.

The Constitutional Democrats in parliament appear confident that victory in their fight for a responsible ministry is not far off and with the prospects of acceding to power are becoming brighter. The Radicals, as shown during yesterday's debate, have thrown off the mask and desire to make parliament practically the central revolutionary committee of the country and have it assist in the convocation of a constituent assembly, while the Constitutional Democrats would be satisfied with a constitutional monarchy, which they believe to be assured if they get the reins in their hands.

The members of the deputation from the group of toil sent into the country districts to test the temper of the peasants have returned here and report that the latter are everywhere anxious for the signal to rise. The delegates counselled patience until August. The estate of Orel province of Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, the former minister of the interior, was burned by peasants last night. Cossacks have been dispatched to the scene.

MM. Amiken and Alladin, the peasant leaders in parliament, have received a warning from the "League for the Salvation of Russia" of Odessa, that they have been sentenced to death.

A sergeant belonging to the Onega regiment, which has just returned from the Baltic provinces, where it participated in the suppression of the revolutionary disorders, was killed yesterday in front of his company at Krasnoe-Selo camp. The company was presumed to fire a round of blank cartridges, but the sergeant fell dead, with a bullet through his body. There is no doubt that he was killed by design.

FIVE INJURED AT LAUNCHING

Props Holding the Battleship New Hamshire Give Way.

Camden, N. J., June 30.—The battleship New Hampshire was launched at the yard of the New York Shipbuilding company here today. Miss Hazel E. McLane, daughter of Governor McLane of New Hampshire, christened the battleship. Miss Marion Shortwell of Cambridge, N. H., and Miss Margaret Thayer of Concord were maids of honor. Governor McLane and his staff and other distinguished persons witnessed the launching. The New Hampshire is a sister ship to the battleship Kansas, which was recently launched.

Five workmen were injured while at work clearing away the props which held the big vessel. The timbers gave way without warning and the men were hurled some distance by being hit by the props. James Campbell of Gloucester, and Joseph Kappakinski were taken to a hospital severely bruised about the head and body. The condition of Campbell is said to be serious. The other workmen are only slightly injured.

WRECK ON IRON RANGE.

Fourteen Loaded Ore Cars Derailed, But No One Injured.

Ely, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—A wreck occured at Murray, a few miles below Ely, on the Duluth & Iron Range road yesterday afternoon, fourteen loaded ore cars being derailed, but no one injured.

The noon passenger was delayed two hours and a half, transferring its passengers to a train made up of cabooses, and a similar transfer was made in the evening. The night passenger arrived in Ely this morning at 7 o'clock the track having been cleared.

The damage will amount to about $2,500.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS IMPATIENT OVER DELAY IN NAMING COMMITTEE

PENKNIFE IN HAND

Congressman Bartlett Threatens to Cut Southwick of N. Y.

Personal Encounter Narrowly Averted in the House.

Wahington, June 30.—What promised to be a serious personal encounter between Representative George N. Southwick of New York, and Charles Bartlett of Georgia, was prevented early this morning in the house by the intercession of friends. Mr. Bartlett, holding a knife, told Mr. Southwick the latter dare not say he "lied" or he (Bartlett) would cut him.

Mr. Southwick sought to pass a resolution increasing the pay of the tally clerks. Mr. Bartlett, a member of the committee on accounts, asked if the resolution had been passed upon by a committee of the house. The speaker informed him that it had not. Mr. Bartlett objected. Southwick pleaded with Bartlett to let the resolution go through, but the Georgian was determined that it should not pass. Backing away from Southwick he took a position on the Republican side. Then Southwick made a remark that there had been a good deal of lying on the committee on the resolution and made a movement toward Bartlett. Thinking, he says, that a personal assault was intended, Mr. Bartlett, who had a sliver penknife in his hand, remarked that Southwick dare not say he had lied, or he would cut him. Friends interfered.

LUMBERJACK IS MURDERED

At Bemidji and Eight Men Are Placed Under Arrest.

Bemidji, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Martin Branley, a lumberjack was found lying on the sidewalk this forenoon with his face cut from calk shoes and his head badly battered. He died an hour afterwards. Two men found near him claim to know nothing as to how Branley was injured. Chief of Police Bailey and County Attorney McDonald arrested eight men and are putting them through the sweat box. An autopsy will be performed this afternoon and the inquest held tomorrow. Nothing so far has been found as to the identity of the parties who injured Branley.

Due to Cole's Attempt to Placate the Various Interests.

Senator Nelson Reported to Have Asked for Further Delay.

Talk of the House Organization for Next Winter Heard.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. L. Cole's delay in naming the state central committee, it is intimated, is more and more each day confirming the story that Senator Nelson has ordered a halt in proceedings until he can leave his official duties at Washington and direct the naming of the committee. There seems to be evidence already of soreness because of the delay. So many interests want to dictate who shall be on the committee, and Cole's attmept to placate them all is resulting, it is said, in a sorry state of affairs, which will make the campaign of the Walker man not move off any too smoothly.

It is intimated that Block was offered the chairmanship, but declined to act. Dr. Cole of Fergus Falls was suggested, but his boom also fell through and now it is said that Cole himself is all up in the air over whom to name. It is understood that the other candidates have persons they want to name to represent their interests, and they are ready with them as soon as Cole leaves off vacilating and gets down to business and names a chairman.

There is also some opposition to the attempt on the part of Senator Nelson to interfere in the appointment of the committee. It is generally thought that he should be satisfied now that the convention has endorsed him, and that there is no need for him to fear for his laurels since his endorsement was made by acclamation, and in view of the fact that there was only one county which did not join in that vote. "Where are

THE POPE PRACTICALLY GRANTS POLES' REQUEST.

Ripon, Wis., June 30.—The Rev. Father Kruszka of this city has received word that Archbishop Weber of Poland has been transferred to America where he will have supervision of the entire Polish Catholic church in America. This, Father Kruszka says, is a practical concession to the requests of the Polish church, and will, no doubt, lead to further appointments, as one bishop cannot possibly supervise the entire country. Archbishop Weber is expected to arrive in this country about Christmas and will reside in Chicago.

SUFFERING FROM HEAT

Thousands Spend the Night Out Doors in New York.

Four Deaths Reported Before Noon and Many Prostrations.

New York, June 30.—Four deaths in Manhattan island from the heat was reported before noon today. All the victims were infants.

The early morning promised to be the hottest day of the year thus far. The mercury was mounting steadily, and there was intense suffering, particularly in the more crowded section of the city.

The mercury in the government thermometer at the weather bureau was creeping upward at the rate of 3 deg. an hour, and the officials prophesied that the 90-degree mark would be passed during the afternoon. Reports of prostrations, due to the extreme weather condition begun to reach the police and the ambulance was kept busy responding to appeals for aid. Among the sufferers were four persons whose minds had given way as a result of the intense heat. One of them attempted to end his life by shooting, but he was restrained and taken to a hospital.

Seeking temporary relief from the oppressive heat, thousands of persons stormed the public bath houses. As early as 5 o'clock the crowds were so dense at several East side bath houses that large details of police were called out. Thousands, unable to sleep in their homes, spent last night in the parks and on the sand at nearby resorts. The police estimate that nearly 8,000 spent the night out of doors and at Coney Island alone.

Philadelphia, June 30.—The hot wave continues in this city. The official government thermometer at 8 o'clock this morning registered 84 degrees, 6 degrees higher than that recorded at the same hour yesterday.

THIEVES ROB PESTHOUSE; EPIDEMIC IS FEARED.

Casper, Wyo., June 30.—Thieves entered the pesthouse and carried off a quantity of bedding. It is feared an outbreak of smallpox will follow, similar to that which occurred last winter in Uintah county, when ranchmen stole boards from the pesthouse and used them in constructing corrals.

SENATE GETS THE DETAILS

Of Work Done by the Department of Justice

Towards Enforcing Anti Trust and the Elkins Laws.

Washington, June 30.—Attorney General Moody yesterday sent to the senate a statement of all suits that have been instituted by the department of justice under the Sherman anti-trust law, the interstate commerce and the Elkins law, when brought, the character and final disposition. The statement is divided into periods by presidential administration, but attention is drawn to the fact that neither the Sherman anti-trust law nort the Elkins law was enacted until after the close of the first Cleveland administration and the act regulating interstate commerce was in effect less than two years of that administration. The Elkins law was enacted during the administration of President Roosevelt.

Attached to the detailed statement which will be printed as a public document, is a summary which shows cases brought out under the act to regulate commerce. Under Cleveland, 1885-1889, one indictment, which was nol-prossed.

Under Harrison, 1889-1892, thirty-five indictments, five convictions, four acquittals, eight were nol prossed, three quashed.

Under McKinley, 1897 to Sept. 14, 1901, twenty-two indictments, five convictions, one acquittal, four were nol-prossed and twelve not prosecuted.

Under Roosevelt, Sept. 14, 1901, to June, 1906, six indictments, five nol-prossed, one dismissed.

The cases brought under the Elkins act, under Roosevelt's administration, were as follows: Eleven indictments for receiving rebates; nineteen for granting rebates, six for conspring to grant rebates, a total of thirty-six, of which nine were convicted, two acquitted, three nol-prossed and twenty-two are pending.

These figures do not include petitions to enjoin departure from published rates, actions to restrain railroads from giving preferences, and minor infractions of the laws to regulate railroad rates.

Of the $500,000 appropriated to enforce these laws, $359,710 has been expended, $45,000 transferred to the interstate commerce commission, and $295,290 remains available.

The resolution under which this information was obtained was introduced by Senator Long, but was amended by Senator Foraker in order to procure a statement of the prosecutions under the Elkins act separately. He contended that it would be shown that under this act every instance of the granting or receiving of rebates could be reached if the law was enforced, and that the railroad rate bill passed by the present session is superfluous law.

EVERY SALOON CLOSED TIGHT

Attorney General's Work Proves Effective at Kansas City, Kas.

Kansas City, June 30.—Every saloon in Kansas City, Kansas, was closed tightly today and at the club houses of the Elks and Eagles no liquor was sold. Assistant Attorney General Trickette's threat to destroy the buildings used as joints had proven effective. During the night the bar fixtures and stocks of liquors were removed from many places to the Missouri side. A dozen saloons in the suburbs of Armourdals, Argentine and Rosedale still remained open, but they may eventually be closed. These latter were operated by a Missouri brewing company now in the hands of a receiver and Attorney General Trickett wished to feel his ground before proceeding against them. The fixture from one saloon owned by this company had been destroyed by the cheriff, however, notwithstanding threats of the owner to secure a restraining order from the federal court.

DAMAGE BY STORM

In and Around Bemidji Was Severe--- No One Injured.

Bemidji, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The storm of Thursday night did considerable damage in and about Bemidji. Several fine oak trees, in the Boulevard park, were blown down and a number of chimneys were thrown from houses. The wind attained great velocity, and the lightning flashed in a terrifying manner. On the Schoolcraft river and Lakes Marquette and Plantagnet, south of Bemidji, the storm did even worse damage. At the outlet of Lake Plantagnet, the Jester dam, which spans the Schoolcraft as it leaves the lake, was almost totally destroyed. The water was blown over the dam, which could not withstand the strain, and two wings of the structure were carried down stream. On Marquette lake an anchor was torn from a large boom of logs, belonging to T. A. Hatcher, the boom was broken and the logs scattered about the lake. A large amount of standing timber was blown down in that vicinity. Lightning struck at several points in the woods, but so far as known no residence was hit, and no one was injured.

The Appropriations Will Aggregate Nearly $900,000,000.

Amount for Duluth's Postoffice is Restored to $125,000.

Conferees in Session All Night on Disputed Amendments.

Washington, June 30.—Both the senate and house have taken a recess until 5 o'clock. The adjournment will be postponed until this evening.

Washington, June 30.—Conferees on the omnibus public building bill today reported a complete agreement. The disputed amendments settled by an all-night conference make appropriations as follows: Duluth, Minn., $125,000; Des Moines, Iowa, $500,000; Minneapolis, Minn., $350,000.

Washington, June 30.—The first session of the Fifty-ninth congress goes into history today. It has been a strenuous session from start to finish. The measure which caused the greatest debate is the railroad bill. Begun with the session, its consideration continued throughout.

The pure food enactment and the meat inspection bill are also important changes in the federal attitude towards both the producer and consumer of the country. A uniform and more strict method of naturalizing aliens was enacted.

The immunity of witnesses from prosecution, who give testimony before government tribunals, was made the subject of an enactment which clearly states when such immunity obtains and when otherwise.

A bill removing the internal revenue tax on denatured alcohol also was passed.

The type of the Panama canal was fixed, thus settling a question which has perplexed both the professional and lay mind. The president is to build a lock level canal, and was given a total of $39,000,000 for the year for that purpose. It was required that material for the canal should be of American manufacture, unless the president shall find the price excessive, in which case he is given authority to buy abroad. The consular service was given a complete new legal status, which will permit of an entire reorganization.

When the appropriations for the session are totalled it will be found that their aggregate has reached nearly nine hundred million dollars. This is a greater sum than has been made available since the war congress of 1898. Of this amount $25,000,000 will go into new public buildings in various sections of the country. The legislation on appropriation bills has the characteristic throughout of being restrictive upon the government department heads in the matter of making their expenditures and in submitting their estimates to congress. It has been the desire of congress to put an end, as far as possible to deficiency appropriations. The naval increases which has been going on annually, received somewhat of a setback. "The largest battleship afloat" was authorized, but congress required that before bids for its construction could be submitted, the plans must be sent to congress at its next session.

The annual appropriation for the state militia was doubled, and hereafter $2,000,000 will be spent from the federal treasury for the purpose of keeping the state militia organizations in touch with the regular army.

The tariff to be collected by the Philippine government on goods entering the island trade, was revised.

A measure of importance to railroad and other employes engaged in hazardous employments, known as the Employers liability bill, became a law.

The government will participate in the Jamestown ter-centennial exposition and $1,325,000 was authorized expended out of the federal treasury for that event.

Speedy appropriations for the San Francisco sufferers resulted from requests by the president. Two and a half million was donated directly and supplies from the stores of the government nearly equalled that amount.

Private pension legislation for the benefit of the old soldier who is unable to receive a pension under the statute laws, kept up its usual heavy pace.

BLUNDER IN BILL.

Sundry Civil Bill Contained Big Appropriation by Error.

Washington, June 30.—One of the peculiar features connected with the last day of congress was the signing of the sundry civil bill. As it was passed it contained an item appropriating $3,000,000 for the condemnation of a site for a building for the departments of state, justice and commerce and labor in Washington. This item was dropped out in conference, however, after it had been transferred to the omnibus public building bill, and later it was dropped out of that bill also.

The enrollment clerks failed to notice that the appropriation had been eliminated from the sundry civil bill and included it in the copy of the bill laid before the president for his signature. Just as the president had concluded signing his name Senator Scott discovered the error. Senator Hale and Chairman Tawney of the house appropriation committee prepared a resolution repealing that feature of the bill making the $3,000,000 appropriation and this was passed by both bodies.

ROARD HAS ADJOURNED

A Few Protests Against Assessments Still Under Consideration.

Citizen Protests and Has Mother-in-Law's Tax Raised.

The board of review completed its work this morning and adjourned.

There are still some protests which are under consideration, but a meeting will be held at some future date, within the next week or ten days, to settle them. They are chiefly kicks on real estate assessments.

Property owners on Third street are objecting strenuously to a raise in the valuation in that district. They claim that the valuation of their property has been raised from 20 to 50 per cent, although the members of the board stated this morning that it was not so much as that.

They protested to the board, and the matter is now under consideration.

The raise affects four or five blocks of residence property through the central part of the city. It is said to have been caused by the new Y. M. C. A. building and the court house. The owners claim, however, that they are unable to rent their houses for any more, because of the plans for these new buildings, and get no additional revenue from them. They claim that they are being discriminated against, and that if they are raised all other property in the city should be raised, as their property has not increased any more in value proportionately than any other. The board has the matter under consideration.

A laughable incident occurred this morning when a citizen appeared to protest against his personal property assessment.

He vigorously asserted that he had only the bare necessities of life. "Look at my mother-in-law, just a few doors away," he said. "She has a big ten-room house, and five times as much furniture as I have, and yet I am paying more taxes than she is."

The members of the board consulted together, and looked up the records in the man's case.

"What is your mother-in-law's name?" asked the city comptroller.

"Mrs. ——," responded the man.

The woman's assessment was looked up, and it was found to be less than her son-in-law's, as he had stated. It was also found to be lower than it should have been.

"What shall we do?" asked the city comptroller.

"Raise the mother-in-law," replied the mayor, and this was promptly done, $300 being added to her assessment.

"Here's where you get square," said the city comptroller, and the man left the room speechless.

VIRGINIA

Virginia, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Last Saturday evening at the Fay opera house, Miss Signe Erickson and Emil Johnson were united in marriage, in the presence of a large number of friends.

The opera stage was beautifully decorated for the ocasion. The groom was dressed in black; the bride in silk, with all over lace. The flower girl preceded the bride and her maids, strewing flowers as they proceeded from the entrance to the stage. Then followed the groom with his attendants. Wilson's orchestra played the wedding march. Rev. Henry E. Neff officiated using the beautiful ring ceremony. The orchestra played softly during the ceremony. A sumptuous dinner was then served at the Svea hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are at home in their own new house in the South side addition. Those present from abroad were: Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, parents of the groom, from Cloquet; Michael Marwick of St. Paul mine, Hibbing; Oscar Johnson, brother of groom from Hibbing; Thomas Johnson, Hibbing; John Carlson, John Anderson, Fredolph Anderson, Daniel Lang, Aurora; Nels Anderson, Eveleth.

E. M. Tredway left Sunday on a visit to New York and other Eastern cities.

Mrs. Annie McGuirk and Owen McGuirk, who have been conducting the Virginia cigar factory, have dissolved partnership. Owen McGuirk will continue the business.

Thomas Flannigan, cashier at the Lincoln mine, left Saturday for a short visit at his home in Ishpeming, returning yesterday.

C. M. Dorway, mining engineer for the Pitt Iron Mining company, has gone to Wisconsin. He expects to return to Virginia in about a week with a bride.

E. D. Parmalee came up from Iron Mountain Saturday and expects to remain here for a few days. Mr. Parmalee reports that the explorations in which he is interested in the Wisconsin lead belt are proving most satisfactory.

Gust Johnson and two daughters left Saturday for Westboro, Wis., for a short visit.

Orrie Infelt, agent at the Duluth & Iron Range railway, left Monday for Des Moines, Iowa, where he expects to spend two or three weeks. Charles G. Mead of Two Harbors has charge at the depot during Mr. Infelt's absence.

Landlord B. F. Smith looked after business matters in Duluth the first of the week.

Mrs. Walter Heagle and child were Duluth visitors during the week.

Miss Eva Metcalfe and neice, Bernice, were visitors in Duluth over Sunday.

George Fuller of Bemidji is in the city looking after Henry Hughes & Co's interests here.

City Attorney W. H. Shea, Jr., arrived home Thursday from a trip to the coast. He reports a very pleasant journey.

Alderman Matt Prijanovich and family spent Wednesday in Aurora.

Rev. J. I. Fadum spent Wednesday and Thursday in Tower.

Frank Gilmore, manager for the Northern Lumber company, left the first part of the week for British Columbia on a business trip.

Martin Taesck left on Sunday for a visit to his native home in Austria. He expects to be absent several months.

S. Maki returned Monday from Finland, where he has been visiting for several months.

Miss Grace O'Hare, who taught in the public school here during the years 1904-5, passed through the city Tuesday en route to her mother's homestead near Ashawa, where she expects to spend her vacation. Miss O'Hare is now teaching in Iowa.

Mrs. C. V. Malmgren received last Saturday in honor of her guest, Mrs. Dunton. Mrs. Malmgren was assisted by Mesdames Smith, James, Crowe and Misses Minnie Eaton, Susie Pratt, Anna Crawshaw, Mabel Grigg and Bertha Smith. A number of ladies called during the afternoon and the affair was a social success.

Mrs. C. V. Malmgren and Mrs. B. F. Smith entertained a party of Eveleth ladies at card Monday afternoon at the home of Mr. Malmgren.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Cuppernull returned Tuesda yfrom a trip to the Twin Cities.

A. L. Preston of Minneapolis came up to spend Sunday with his wife, who is being treated at the Lenont hopital.

Dr. and Mr. A. W. Shaw of Buhl were in town Wednesday.

Misses Minnie Eaton and Susan Pratt spent Sunday in Hibbing, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Lerch.

Mrs. J. H. Crowe entertained a party of twenty ladies at whist Thursday afternoon. Mrs. A. H. Stevens won first prize, and Mrs. Dunton received the visiting guests prize.

C. H. Munger, general manager of the Pickands-Mather mining interets in the Lake Superior district, spent the week visiting his companies mines in this section.

Thomas Walters, general manager of the Inter-State Iron company's mines, was a Virginia visitor during the week. With Thomas Pellow, range superintendent, they vilted the Meadow, the company's latest acquisition, on Wednesday.

C. E. Hendrick, superintendent of the Consumers' Ore company, Buhl, was in the City Wednesday. Mr. Hendricks says that the continuous wet weather has seriously retarded the open pit work at the Yates and other steam shovel mines in that vicinity, as well as elsewhere on the range. Notwithstanding the action of the elements, a good record will be made at the Yates this year.

About 200 people took part in the excursion and picnic of the Methodist church society at Sand Lake on Tuesday. Although the weather was threatening, Jupiter Pluvius decided not to make Baptists of them and so they enjoyed the day thoroughly. Some of them brought back fine strings of fish captured in the lake.

Dr. Paul Ashley, who has been connected with the Adams hospital at Hibbing for two years, has been added to the corps of physicians employed by Dr. C. V. Malmgren. Dr. Ashley is quite well known in Virginia having resided a few years ago at Mount Iron.

A. T. Conolly, who was at one time connected with the Adams Express company here and later was agent for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern company at Mount Iron, is now located at Minneapolis, where he holds a responsible position with the Wisconsin Central.

O. E. Mallau, the photographer, departed Tuesday for a week's vacation in the Twin Cities.

Contractors have begun work on the new home A. C. Osborne is having built.

The foundation for the house for J. Cudly, being built by the Cole & McDonald Exploration company, is now well under way.

Mrs. James Cudlip departed today for a visit of six weeks duration with relatives at her old home in Iron Mountain, Mich.

LYCEUM—All next week, Tom Marks' company.

TOM MARKS' COMPANY.

Tom Marks and his company will play a week's engagement, next week, at the Lyceum theater, the opening play being "The Irish Boarder." This organization has been meeting with much success this season. Following is what the Soo News said about it:

"Tom Marks and company played to a crowded house at the Soo opera house last night. The standing room only sign was out early in the evening, and the company received even more applause than on former occasions when it has visited the city.

"The company presented 'The Irish Boarder,' a pleasing comedy drama which appealed to the audience. Marks was given an ovation when he appeared and the warmth of the applause continued through the evening. The piece is a happy combination of comedy and elements of heart interest, with plenty of action in every scene. The specialties were of a most satisfactory nature, several new features being introduced."

"MESSAGE FROM MARS."

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the poetess of passion, after seeing, for the first time, "A Message From Mars," which will be seen here at the Lyceum, July 10 and 11, wrote in the New York Journal concerning the play as follows: "I wish every man and woman in the United States might be permited the privilege of seeing the comedy, 'A Message From Mars.'"

INCREASE VERY HEAVY

Building Inspector's Figures Show Big Total for the Month.

Total for Six Months Greater Than All Last Year.

Building operations for the month of June totaled $409,855, according to the figures of the building inspector's office.

This is an increase of about 200 per cent over the total for June of last year, when the total for the month was but $137,505.

The increase is due to the permit of $275,000 for the new fire-proof elevator on Rice's Point, which will be erected by the Peavey Elevator company. Aside from this permit, the total for the month is just about on an equality with that of last year.

The building operations in the city, however, have been delayed on account of bad weather, and several large permits which would have been taken out this month, if the weather had been good, have been put over until July.

The total for the first six months of the year now exceeds the total for all of last year. Last year the building operations in the city amounted to about $1,600,000, but the total for the first six months of the present year is $1,867,732. The following table shows the amounts by months:

January	$65,830
February	32,570
March	980,131
April	313,807
May	355,539
June	409,855
Total	$1,867,732

Several large contracts are also in sight for the next two or three months, including the new Y. M. C. A. building, the addition to the Lenox hotel and some flat and store buildings. The records, therefore, are not likely to show any great falling off until fall at least, and it is expected that the total for the year will easily pass the $3,000,000 mark.

MAYNARD AND PARR MATCHED

Two Clever Wrestlers Will Come Together at Temple Rink.

Arrangements have been made for another meeting between Jim Parr, the English wrestler, and Billy Maynard.

The match will take place next Monday evening at the Temple roller rink. It will be for two falls out of three, catch as catch can with the strangle hold barred.

Parr and Maynard met at the Metropolitan, and Parr won two falls, Maynard getting the second one. The match was one of the fastest ever seen in Duluth, and the meeting Monday night will be of special interest.

Parr is probably the best man in the country, of his weight, and he will meet Frank Gotch on July 4, at Gotch's home town in Iowa.

Tom Madden will act as referee.

CATCH BASINS ARE CLOGGED

Flooding of Basements Due to Rubbish From New Pavement.

In response to some complaints from the West end that the catch basins are not adequate to carry off the water, City Engineer McGilvray this morning pointed out the fact that there are now seventeen more catch basins than there were last year.

Some basements have been flooded after rain storms, but this is said to be caused by the fact that the gutters and catch basins are clogged up with the rubbish from the new pavement. The contractor has just completed his work and the board of public works has not yet had an opportunity to clean out the basins. Men were to be put at work on them today, however, and when they have been cleaned it is not believed that there will be any more complaints of this nature.

MINING STUDENTS.

Party From Lafayette College of Mines Will Visit Duluth.

A party of fourteen or fifteen students and professors from the Lafayette College of Mines of Pennsylvania is expected to arrive in the city this evening. Among them will be Mark Smith, son of J. M. Smith, receiver at the Duluth land office. The party arrived at Two Harbors this morning on one of the steel corporation boats, and was expected to reach Duluth on the Iron Range noon train, but failed to make connections. The visitors will probably arrive this evening. After a tour of inspection of the Minnesota iron ranges they will visit the Michigan copper country.

SHIPMENTS TO BE LARGE

The Ore Figures for the Month Should be Heavy.

Showing Will Probably be a Good One for June.

The sunshine of the past two days and the absence of rain during the nights as well has filled the hearts of the officials of the range roads with gladness.

This is the last day of the month and the two days of decent weather has permitted rush work at the docks and the result will unquestionably be felt on the total shipments for June, which will be announced Monday.

The past week has been a miserable one. The heavy rains greatly delayed work at the docks and at the mines as well. And it was the last week of the month and it was the desire of every one interested to get a big total for the week in order to have the total shipments for the month show up the way they should.

June is a cantankerous month, but the ore shippers always want to make as good showing as they can. With the good weather which came during the week of the Republican convention and the pleasant finish, the showing for the month should be very good, considering that it is June.

It is expected that the month's figures from the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, Duluth & Iron Range and Great Northern will eclipse those of the same month last year, by satisfactory margins. Last June was not the most pleasant one of the year to Dulutnians.

A lack of materials, due to car shortages in the West, continue to delay operations of the Missabe's new dock in the West end and the same may be said of the improvements the Great Northern has undertaken on its dock No. 3 at Allouez.

BIWABIK

Biwabik, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The citizens of Biwabik have decided to celebrate the Fourth, and have appointed a committee, consisting of F. S. Dane, J. E. Riley and H. H. Salmon, to make arrangements. A big time is in prospect.

A financial statement of the State Bank of Biwabik, issued this week, shows total deposits of $88,497.34, with loans and discounts of $79,283.98.

Postmaster Gilpatrick was very handsomely remembered by the young people of Biwabik just previous to his recent marriage, the young men furnishing his dining room and the young ladies presenting him with a handsome dinner set.

Harry Price has returned from Panama for a visit. He is engaged by the government as yardmaster on the Panama railroad. He says that he likes the place and will return as soon as his furlough is ended. He presented Marshal William O'Hara with a handsome black palm cane made from a railroad tie.

Mrs. Marianen, a recent arrival from Ironwood, was taken seriously ill Tuesday while going to the depot. She was taken into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grae and later removed to the hospital. She is suffering from consumption.

M. B. Shank & Co. have purchased the livery barn and business of Charles Christian, Sr. They are having the barn repaired and will add a number of new horses and rigs to the outfit.

Little Mattie O'Hara, son of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Hara, was very ill the first part of the week, but is now improved. He contracted measles, and other complications set in which left him in serious condition for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. James Simonds have moved to Two Harbors, where they have purchased a home.

Mr. and Mrs. Beattie, parents of Mrs. C. F. Adams, have returned to their home in Lake City.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zimmerly are receiving a visit from their daughter, Mrs. Cousins of Minneapolis.

J. S. Hopkins has gone to Minneapolis, where he will attend the wedding of his sister next Wednesday.

Mrs. F. B. Myers and the Misses Grout, Dane, Davidson and Morisette made a trip to Port Arthur last week.

Mrs. Peter Foss is quite ill.

A. J. Stowell is away on a visit to his mother in Lower Michigan.

Mrs. Smith is visiting her daughter at Soudan.

Mrs. Charles Christian has been ill during the week.

Mrs. James Collins is receiving a visit from her niece.

Mrs. John Beatty made a trip to Virginia the first of the week.

The Card club was entertained Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Ed Kinney.

Mrs. Crane, mother of Mrs. F. B. Myers, has returned to her home at Lake City, and will also visit in Minneapolis.

M. W. Norton is building a handsome new residence near the Congregational church.

WILTON MAN IN JAIL.

Chased Girl With a Knife After Using Threatening Language.

Bemidji, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Dolliver, a young man who has resided at Wilton for several months past, is in the county jail, and will, on July 6, answer to the charge of attempted assault with a murderous looking knife on the person of Miss Sadie Watkins, also a resident of Wilton. Dolliver came to Bemidji and after accumulating a large sized load of whiskey went to Wilton, which is seven miles west of Bemidji. There he proceeded to draw from his pocket a knife variously estimated as being a foot and a half long, and chased several of the male inhabitants of the place to the tall timber. He then visited the home of Miss Sadie Watkins, according to her story given that day, and after using bad and threatening language chased her about the house with his trusty blade. Miss Watkins escaped through a rear door and told a merchant of Wilton, who telephoned to Bemidji. Deputy Sheriffs Thomas Bailey, Jr., and John Bailey hastened to Wilton and arrested their man, bringing him to Bemidji. Now, Miss Watkins, who was engaged to be married to Dolliver, says that the latter did not attempt to assault her with the knife. However, the knife was found on Dolliver's person and the others whom he attempted to carve can testify as to his intentions.

THE YACHT BLUB HAS A NEW RACE

Obstacle Contest Will be Held on Fourth of July.

An obstacle race, in which all the boats of the club fleet will participate, will be pulled off under the auspices of the Duluth Yacht club on the afternoon of the Fourth of July. This is something entirely new in aquatic sports, and is said to offer an interesting and exciting exhibition.

The start will be made at 3 o'clock from the club float. The idea is to present various obstacles to be contended with in handling a racing craft from the time the crew leaves the club house until the boat is under way. All boats will be left at their moorings in the anchorage up to the time of the calling of the race, and will be reached by row boats. This will constitute the start. The first boat to cross the line after having sailed once around the course will be the winner.

The club has issued invitations to non-resident members for the afternoon and evening, and visitors will be extended all the privileges of the club. The cafe will be open to visitors, and special provision will be made to handle a large crowd. The club house will be illuminated with Japanese lanterns in the evening, and special parties will be made up of friends of the members for a moonlight sail or launch ride on the bay.

CHILD BADLY BURNED.

Fergus Falls, Minn., June 30.—The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Nelson, who resides three miles east of the city, was terribly burned by battery fluid Thursday. The fluid was used in connection with a gasoline engine, and the child got hold of a large can and upset it over her face and chest. Being composed of a combination of acids, it burned into the flesh, causing intense agony. A physician was summoned from this city as quickly as possible but the child's recovery is doubtful.

AMONG THE PLANTS

We have been asked many questions by 'phone and otherwise about various things relating to the garden and plants, and as they are of interest to many we will answer though The Herald. First and most important was an inquiry for the best treatment of a hard clay soil that has been pounded into putty by the heavy rains. First it will be necessary to stir the surface and kill off the weeds. This must be done before the soil dries out completely, for it will be as hard as a stone when the dry weather comes, and if about two inches of the surface is stirred twice a week it will act as a mulch and the moisture will be held near the surface where the growing plants can reach it. This is our treatment entirely; nothing on our place is ever watered. If you like to take the trouble and have the material at hand spread a good thick mulch of thoroughly rotted stable manure among the plants, covering the whole surface, or the lawn clippings will do. Try this on the pansy beds; you will see them jump. You can hardly make the pansy bed too rich if you want large flowers. True, you can't find any very large flowers in the average florists' garden. He is not trying to grow flowers, but is aiming to keep a lot of plants in movable sizes, for they will not transplant well if they are too large. But if you want to see what good culture can do, compare you own, or ours, with the bed in Lester park where some of the flowers are nearly four inches across. If your pansies are being eaten by slugs, put a teaspoonful of hellebore in a bucket of water and sprinkle the plants overnight.

Asters can be planted yet, provided you have plants that are not too large. It makes me tired to hear some folks squeal for great overgrown plants, when one knows they will not do well, and when you have been trying your best to have them in movable sizes.

It is just right now to plant late cabbage, celery, and cauliflower plants; also you can sow spinach, radish, beets, turnips and cucumbers for pickles, but for all these things it is important to have freshly dug soil. They will not do anything in soil that has been undisturbed since spring. Make the soil rich; you cannot get large vegetables or fine flowers in poor soil. This is a late, cold season and everything wants the best of care now to make a success of it. All we have been able to do lately is to swim around the garden and look at it, and promise it good care when the dry land appears again.

NEW ULM ELEVATOR BURNS.

Loss of Bingham Brothers' Building Traced to Lightniug Bolt.

New Ulm, Minn., June 30.—Lightning struck the Terminal elevator belonging to Bingham Brothers in this city early yesterday morning and burned it. The elevator contained 7,000 bushels of grain, which was covered by $5,000 insurance. The building had only $5,000 insurance upon it. The loss above insurance will be $7,000. The elevator will be rebuilt.

Mrs. W. G. Dolan entertained the ladies' auxiliary of the Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon.

Five Austrians were arrested by Patrolman Nelson and Buscha Monday evening for breaking into an office at Rush Lake, and carrying away a quantity of buckskin mitts and underwear. Subsequent to the arrest it was discovered that three of the prisoners answered to the description of the men wanted for the murder of six Macedonians at Minneapolis, on March 28th. Chief of Police John McSweeney wired the police department of Minneapolis. A return message was received telling him to hold parties until they could send officers to identify them. Detectives O. C. Lawrence of Minneapolis and Sergeant C. Cristan came up Monday evening, but they were unable to identify the prisoners and returned without them. As the owners of the stolen goods did not appear against them, they were released from custody Tuesday morning.

James Diesen was in Duluth the first of the week.

Rev. Father Giroux spent part of Sunday in Duluth and participated in the services at the cathedral Sunday evening.

A very pleasant time was had by a number of young people at a party given by Ethel McConby Wednesday evening.

RAILROADS

EMPLOYING MANY MEN

Omaha Making Extensive Improvements on Lake Superior Division.

Very Low G. A. R. Rate to Minneapolis is Announced.

Owing to the scarcity of labor, the Omaha road was this week compelled to raise the wages of all the men in its Northern Wisconsin extra gangs to $2.00 a day. This is practically the lowest figure being paid by any of the railroads in the Northwest.

The Omaha is employing a good many more men on its Lake Superior division this summer than for some time past. A total of 800 men are working in the extra gangs along the line, repairing, retallasting and track laying.

The National Employment company yesterday received an order for 100 men for rock work near Great Falls, Mont., and another for rock work men in the Canadian Northwest, showing that the scarcity of labor extends all over the Northwest.

RATE TO MINNEAPOLIS.

Round-Trip Less Than One Fare During G. A. R. Encampment.

What is said to be the lowest round-trip rate ever offered between Duluth and the Twin Cities will be in effect during the national encampment of the G. A. R. at Minneapolis, Aug. 13 to 18. The fare for the round trip will be $3.50, according to notice received this morning by the local offices of the Great Northern. The same rate will apply on all the St. Paul-Duluth roads.

Tickets will be on sale Aug. 11 to 14, inclusive, and will be good returning until Aug. 31. Because of the central location of Minneapolis as regards the remainder of the United States, it is expected that the attendance at the convention will be unusually large. Local members of the Grand Army will attend almost in a body, and scores of others will take advantage of the low rates, to be present during the event.

HAS ELLIOTT RESIGNED?

Reported That Resignation as President of Northern Pacific Has Been Accepted.

St. Paul, Minn., June 30.—The Pioneer Press today says: It is reported that President Howard Elliott, of the Northern Pacific railway, has tendered his resignation and that it has been accepted. The report apparently is well authenticated, but owing to the absence of Mr. Elliott from the city it could not be either confirmed or denied.

Railroad Notes.

MANY PROSTRATED BY INTENSE HEAT.

Washington, June 30.—Yesterday was the hottest day of the summer. At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the thermometer at the weather bureau registered 94 degrees, where the mercury remained for over two hours.

South Bend, Ind., June 30.—With the temperature at 99 degrees yesterday E. T. Smith died of heat prostration and several other persons were overcome by heat.

New York, June 30.—New York got its first real taste of summer heat yesterday. The thermometer at the hottest part of the day registered 90 degrees. It was the hottest June 29, since 1891, when the thermometer registered 92 degrees. Half a dozen cases of heat prostrations were reported.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 30.—Three persons were overcome by the intense heat of yesterday, but none is in a serious condition. The temperature in the streets stood at 90 degrees. A heavy downpour of rain in the afternoon cooled the atmosphere.

Philadelphia, June 30.—The temperature yesterday was within three degrees of the June record, which was established June 20, 1903, when the thermometer reached 98. The highest temperature yesterday was 95 degrees at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the day was the hottest of the season. Numerous cases of prostration were reported.

PROSECUTE GRAIN MEN

Government Will Proceed Against Violators of Rebate Law.

A. B. Stickney Seeks Inquiry Into the Conditions in Omaha.

Chicago, June 30.—A Washington special to the Herald says: Not only will the government investigate the alleged grain elevator trust, as required by the La Follette resolution adopted by the senate the other day, but it will prosecute any of those found guilty of violating the law, and will proceed against the combine itself if the facts warrant such action.

It was disclosed yesterday that the administration intends to pursue the same policy toward the grain elevator interests that it has followed in the coal and oil investigations, which are being made by the interestate commerce commission. That is to say, it proposes to have the interstate commerce commission furnish agents of the department of justice with a copy of all testimony, which will be examined with a view to legal proceedings.

Evidence is pouring in to the interstate commerce commission from various sources. A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago Great Western company, was in Washington a few days ago and conferred with the commission with a view to securing an investigation of the grain elevator service given by the Peavey company at Omaha, Kansas City and Council Bluffs, and by the Trans-Mississippi Grain company at Council Bluffs and other points.

Stickney charged that these corporations collected toll from the railroads for the elevator, transfer, loading or unloading of grain transported by railroads, and declared that the Union Pacific had entered into a secret contract with the Peavey company and the Trans-Mississippi company to make them only between Omaha and Council Bluffs.

Stickney further declared that the contract is unlawful and licenses robbery of the many for the benefit of the few. In other words, the transfer charge the elevator companies receive, he asserts, is a rebate and warrants the attention of the government.

In order to meet the rates by the Union Pacific, the Chicago & Northwestern, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Missouri Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, whose lines parallel those of the Union Pacific, made secret agreements with large shippers of grain on their respective lines which amounted to 1¼ cents a hundredweight.

The railroads thought to pay this concession out of the rate between the grain fields and Omaha and Kansas City—in order to prevent the grain from stopping at those points—but paid it out of the through rates from the grain fields to Chicago, St. Louis and the gulf ports. Stickney suggested that the result of this arrangement was to handicap all grain stopping at Omaha and Kansas City to the extent of 1¼ cents a hundredweight.

"Under these conditions," he said, in a speech delivered at Omaha, a copy of which he left with the commission, "in order to protect the grain markets of Omaha and Kansas City and to secure a fair share of the transportation of grain from Missouri river points to Chicago, Minneapolis and other points, the Chicago Great Western company, which has no lines west of the Missouri river, felt, compelled, both in the interest of justice to the grain dealers and the markets of Omaha and Kansas City and in its own interest, to make a similar allowance to shipment between these points and more Eastern markets reached by its lines on all grain which had not received such allowances like the Peavey grain between the grain fields and Omaha and Kansas City."

Mr. Stickney estimates that one concern last year shipped 12,000 carloads of grain into Omaha, which cost it $90,000 more than a like quantity of grain would have cost the Peavey interests and the Trans-Mississippi company.

These two elevator companies are entitled to have grain arriving at Omaha switched for nothing on six railroad lines to their elevators in Council Bluffs and switched for nothing from their elevators to any outgoing line. The other nine elevators in Omaha and Council Bluffs are compelled to pay from $2 o $6 a car in order to get grain to their tracks, and the same amounts for getting grain switched to outgoing lines, a discrimination of from $4 to $12 a car.

The interstate commerce commission had determined to investigate the relations to the Peavey company and the Trans-Mississippi company with the Union Pacific and other lines before the La Follette resolution was passed. It will not make a special inquiry into Stickney's charge in this respect, but will examine the situation in Omaha, Kansas City and Council Bluffs in conjunction with a general investigation which will include the conduct of elevators at Chicago, Minneapolis, Duluth, Buffalo and other points.

The commission finds itself embarrassed in the prosecution of this grain investigation because it has its hands full with the inquiry into the coal and oil question. Chairman Knapp and former Senator Cockrell are continuing the inquiry into the coal situation. Commissioners Prouty and Clemens are in Louisiana and Texas, examining independent refiners and producers regarding the operations of the Standard Oil.

It is the purpose of the commission to urge President Roosevelt to enlarge its membership without delay—that the president give recess appointments to the men he has selected for the three positions which will exist on the commission as a result of the increase in the membership of that body to seven.

LUMBER STOCK SOLD.

William O'Brien Sells 4,000,000 Feet Ahead of the Saws.

Kelsey & Freeman of Toledo, have purchased 4,000,000 feet of No. 3 and better lumber from William O'Brien and his associates, the price paid being in the neighborhood of $100,000. The lumber sold has not yet been sawed, but will be manufactured and delivered this season.

E. C. Taber, of Keokuk, Ia., of the Taber Lumber company is in the city looking after business interests. The company is now getting its timber from along the line of the Minnesota & International road and from above Deer river. It will manufacture about 25,000,000 feet of lumber this season.

JULY IS RAINY BUT WARM MONTH

Averages Given by Weather Forecaster for Thirty-Five Years.

Weather Forecaster Richardson has prepared a statement of what the month of July has been during thirty-five years. In all, the month has been very decent, although pretty liberal in the way of rainfall. The mean or normal temperature of the month is 66. The warmest month was on 1881, when the average temperature was 72, and the coldest was in 1891, when the average was 61. The highest temperature of any July day was 99, on the 1st, 1883, and the lowest was on the 2nd, 1895, when the thermometer got down as far as 45.

The average rainfall for the month is 3.75 inches, and 12 is the average number of days during the month on which a fraction of rain, at least, falls. The greatest monthly precipitation was in 1879, when 10.42 inches of rain fell, and the least was in 1875, when only 47-100ths of an inch fell.

The greatest rainfall during any twenty-four consecutive hours was the memorable night of July 2-3, 1897, when 4.20 inches fell. This is the record for a single day in Duluth. On that occasion a great deal of damage was done by the rain, whole blocks of paving being washed to the bottom of the hill, outhouses being washed from their foundations and other damage done.

During July on the average there are 10 clear days, 15 partly cloudy and 6 cloudy days. The prevailing wind is from the northeast, and the average hourly velocity thereof is 7.1 miles per hour. The highest velocity which the wind has reached during July in thirty-five years was from the northwest, on the 2nd, 1897, the same date on which the famous rainfall stated. That night it blew forty-eight miles an hour.

MANUAL TRAINING FOR VACATION

Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. Will Open Summer Class.

The manual training class will open its first summer course in the boys' department, Y. M. C. A., Monday morning, at 9 a. m.

The course is aimed to give boys an opportunity to make up any work they may have gotten behind in, during the school term, or for those who, because of illness or absence from the city, have not been able to keep up with the work. It will also appeal to parents as giving boys an opportunity of taking up a little educational work during the vacation period.

The classes will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, from 9 to 11 o'clock, under the direction of George M. Brace, instructor of manual training at the Duluth high school. The manual training room of the boys' department is fully equipped with benches and tools, and all the work will be individual, so that boys who have taken the work before will be able to advance, while those who are beginning will be able to get a thorough knowledge of the work. Each student will be able to make whatever he pleases. The list of articles that can be made, range from small useful articles for the house, to beautiful mission furniture for the home, or boats or canoes, for summer sports. No one will be encouraged to attempt what he cannot do well, but his energies will be directed along lines of his own choosing.

Already a large number of boys have enrolled in the class, and it is expected that Monday morning, when the class starts, that the limit will be reached?

SAYS McALPINE RAN BUSINESS

John Millen Claims Partner Canceled Smith Logging Contract.

In the way of strengthening his evidence that John McAlpine superintended the logging operations of the McAlpine Lumber company, John Millen called Dr. C. L. Codding as a witness in his behalf yesterday. Dr. Codding testified that a tthe time the logging contract between the McAlpine Lumber company and A. Smith was canceled, Mr. Millen was on the Pacific coast for his health, being accompanied by the physician. The purpose of this evidence was to show that Mr. McAlpine discharged the Smith contract. Mr. Millen has asserted right along that there was a partnership in the deal to buy and log the Richardson & Avery tract. Mr. McAlpine claims that there was a contract between them but alleges that Mr. Millen conducted all of the operations and that he, McAlpine, had little to do with the business, doing only what Mr. Millen requested him to do.

Some time was spent yesterday with the books and records of the McAlpine Lumber company, testimony regarding which was given by Robert Nelson, an expert accountant. J. W. Bayley, secretary and treasurer of the McAlpine company, and Elmer Whyte, former bookkeeper for the firm.

The trial will be resumed next Monday morning. There are several witnesses to be called for the defense.

FERN LEAVES AUG. 2.

Gunboat and Naval Reserves to Take Part in Naval Maneuvers.

The gunboat Fern will leave here with the naval reserves on Aug. 2, at noon, to take part in the naval manouvers at South Manitou. It is expected that the gunboat will be away ten or twelve days, and in the meantime the responsibility of protecting Duluth will fall upon the shoulders of the two companies of the National Guard stationed here, together with the small army of recruiting officers for the various branches of Uncle Sam's fighting departments.

The Fern is expected to join the rest of the lake squadron on Aug. 5, and the maneuvering will take place around Harbor Springs. Before the event finishes a dance and banquet will take place. On the return the trip will take the form of a pleasure excursion, and the various points of interest will be stopped at so that the men may observe them.

WATCHMAN FALLS IN HOLD.

Edward Reilly Likely to Die From Injuries on Steamer.

Yesterday afternoon Edward Reilly fell into the hold of the steamer R. W. England, while she was unloading at the Pittsburg coal dock, and dropped twenty-eight feet onto the steel deck below. He was watchman on the vessel. He struck on his back, just over the liver, and also the under part of his chin struck, breaking several teeth. It is feared that he will die, as he was quite severly injured. He was in such pain last night that the attending physicians were unable to examine him very closely to find out if his internal injuries are very severe or not. By order of Dr. A. J. Braden, who was called, the man was taken at once to St. Luke's hospital, where he is at this time.

Reilly is 24 years of age, unmarried, and it is believed that he lives in Superior, although that could not be learned, owing to the condition of the man. He was in terrible pain; at times almost unmanageable from it, and had to be quite heavily morphined in order to get him into anything like ease.

FIRE STARTS IN MATCHES.

Big General Store at Pennock Suffers a Heavy Loss.

Willmar, Minn., June 30.—The merchandise establishment of Erickson & Finstrom at Pennock was partially destroyed by a fire which originated in a stock of matches in a warehouse in the rear of the building yesterday. The grocery department was destroyed and the drygoods damaged by smoke. The fire was confined to the interior of the building. The Willmar fire department was called upon for assistance. The loss is covered by insurance of $6,000. The building was owned by A. Benson, who formerly occupied it.

BACKACHE?

Pains in the back come from a weak spinal column, which is the direct result of unhealthy kidneys. And if this important organ of the body is diseased, you should "be up and doing."

We imagine we have dyspepsia, heart disease, nervous prostration and a hundred and one ills, but nine times out of ten the real trouble is that the kidneys are so weak and diseased that they are utterly unable to carry the waste matters out of the body, and the uric acid accumulates in the system, and slowly but surely paves the way for Bright's disease, diabetes, blood poisoning and a horrible death in convulsions. Ask your doctor if this is not good, solid, common sense.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE CURES KIDNEY DISEASE.

When the kidneys are diseased the uric acid is not carried off, and this causes Gout, Lumbago, Rheumatism of the Joints, Rheumatism of the Muscles, Rheumatism of the Heart, Rheumatism everywhere.

In Bright's disease the bowels are often constipated and the liver torpid. Warner's Safe Pills quickly relieve this condition, and no ill after effect is experienced.

There is only one remedy that can be used with absolute safety and confidence—Warner's Safe Cure, put up for years at Rochester, N. Y., by the Warner's Safe Cure Company, and sold at all drug stores, 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

Warner's Safe Cure is used by leading physicians, and in hospitals, as the one certain cure for all diseases of kidneys, liver, bladder and blood—the remedy that cures when all else fails, and leaves no bad after effects. Get a bottle today; it will save you years of suffering.

GET READY FOR THE FOURTH!

After having had such an abundance of bad weather, wouldn't it be fun if we were to have a Fourth of July once, perfect in sunshine and warmth, and fit for a Straw Hat. Get ready for the event—it will take place on or before some of these days anyhow. Then we will have such hot and beautiful weather that the sound of the fog-horn is heard no more, that yellow belts and yellow shoes and openwork waists won't look chilly, and that even the worst crank in town will turn hilarious. We are optimists, and prove it by the tremendous summer stocks we carry. If there is anything that man or boy wants on the hottest day that can't be found here swear at us as you would at the iceman. Nor need we be put in jail before we reduce prices. We are doing it right now on Men's and Boys' Suits—$10, $5, $2.98 and $1.98; and on others we are about as low as the law allows.

REJECTED BY CUMMINS

Is Plan of Perkins to Settle All the Disputes.

Cummins Men Say That They Have Nothing to Arbitrate.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 30.—George D. Perkins of Sioux City has suggested a way around the shoals which have threatened to wreck the Republican party organization in this state. In a letter delivered to Gov. A. B. Cummins Thursday evening Mr. Perkins proposes that all the contests which have arisen in the gubernatorial campaign be submitted to three members of the national Republican committee, to be selected by the chairman of that committee, and that all parties to the controversy agree to abide by the decision made by this tribunal regarding the matters at issue.

Copies of the letter were also forwarded to the other candidates for the Republican nomination, namely, Capt. S. W. Rathbun and Lieut. Gov. John Herriott.

Few happenings in the sensational state campaign have excited wider interest than Mr. Perkins' letter. It removes much of the suspicion from the Perkins camp of an intention to railroad a program through the state convention without regard to equities. His letter follows:

Des Moines, Iowa, June 28.—Gov. Albert B. Cummins, City.—My Dear Governor: I am reluctant to take the initiative in suggesting any plan looking to a peaceful solution of the perplexing situation now confronting the Republican party of this state. I assume that you, equally with myself, desire that the convention shall be orderly and above suspicion of intentional wrong. We are mutually desirous, I am free to say, to shield the party name from dishonor and to bring about the nomination of a ticket that the sincere membership of the party can loyally and unitedly support. The time for calm action is now.

The pre-convention campaign has been heated. The struggle for delegates has never been equaled in our state. The contest has come down to the closing days without a clear settlement as to the choice of the party for the gubernatorial nomination. The balance of power is with delegations that are contested, and these contests, to my mind, should be impartially and intelligently determined, to the end that confidence may be established in the integrity of the convention's determinations. Neither you nor I want a nomination involving a doubtful title, or the suspicion of one.

Now, what can be done to provide a fair adjustment?

It has occurred to me that we might ask for the intervention of the Republican national committee.

Would you be willing to join in a request to the chairman of the national committee that he appoint from the membership of the committee a commission of three, the choice to be made from states sufficiently separated from our state to secure impartiality and freedom from pre-determination to hear and determine the issues that have arisen? My thought is that such a commission should be empowered to hear all contests and upon their finding make up a temporary roll to be binding upon all parties, and, further, that such commission be authorized to prescribe the parliamentary rules by which the convention should be governed in all its preliminary work.

If a plan of this kind were to be agreed to, it would be necessary, of course, that we should personally obligate ourselves to abide by the action of the commission, to use our full influence to have their conclusions accepted by the convention and to exert al lour power to have the plan and conclusions thus framed carried out in good faith.

If this suggestion, prompted only by my desire to place the common welfare of the party above personal concern, does not meet your specific approval, I trust I am not mistaken in assuming that the object in view has your cordial endorsement. Therefore I am not without confidence that some plan can be mutually agreed to that will secure a creditable adjustment and save the convention from hasty and imprudent action, harmful to the party and mortifying to those against whom responsibility might be lodged.

I am not personally disposed in this matter to ignore the authority of our state committee, and my suggestion would be, if you should agree with me on the general proposition, to petition our own committee to take up the matter with the chairman of the national committee.

I should consider it an honor to be favored with your early reply. Respectfully yours,

GEORGE D. PERKINS.

It is needless to say that all Cummins men who have given expression to their opinion are decidedly opposed to this proposition. They take the view unanimously that Cummins has won and has nothing to arbitrate. They say Mr. Perkins' letter means that he cannot win; that it is a confession that he cannot find a precedent in Iowa conventions for giving power to the state central committee instead of to the state convention to pass upon contests. They deny that there is doubt as to who is winner, and ask why it is that Mr. Perkins made his proposition before all the counties had acted. They point out that Perkins concedes Cummins 782 delegates, and 62 are yet to be chosen. All these 62 are from counties that went for Cummins before.

Does not Mr. Perkins' assumption, they ask, that the issue will depend upon the outcome of contests, mean that he confesses to a plan in advance to contests these counties, whatever their decision? Furthermore, they point to the fact that the national committee would likely be controlled by interests related to those opposing Cummins in Iowa.

The Republican state convention of 1890, held at Sioux City, made the state central committee a permanent body and passed rules that preclude it from making up a temporary roll call and seating delegates from contested counties. This would make any attempt on the part of Mr. Perkins to take the right of passing on contests from the convention irregular.

KILLED IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT

Helena, Mont., June 30.—Mrs. James Tanner, wife of the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, died yesterday afternoon as the result of an automobile accident. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner arrived here yesterday morning, the former being on a visit of inspection to the Montana department of the Grand Army. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. J. K. Toole, wife of the governor, and Gen. Lester Wilson of Bozeman, made up an automobile party to visit points in the vicinity of the city. On the way to Fort Harrison the chauffeur turned out to make room for a wagon. The road runs along an embankment, and the road was so narrow that the automobile ran off the edge, turned over and threw the occupants out. Mrs. Tanner struck the ground first, and Mrs. Toole and Gen. Wilson fell on her. Mrs. Tanner was unconscious, and was taken immediately to a hospital, dying just as she reached there. The other members of the party were not seriously hurt.

CITY WINS IMPORTANT VICTORY IN THE COURTS

Supreme Court Decision Will Save City $25,000 in Cash.

A legal victory which will save the city of Duluth $25,000 in cold cash was won by City Attorney Fesler in his argument of the suit against the Northern Pacific railroad company, the decision in which was announced by the supreme court yesterday.

The suit was in connection with the viaduct over the railroad tracks on Lake avenue south. The viaduct was damaged by the smoke from the locomotives, and it was found that it would cost approximately $25,000 to repair it.

The question as to whether the city or the company was liable for the cost of the repairs, came up in connection with another case already pending in the district court. An agreement was entered into between the city attorney and the attorneys for the railroad company, that whichever party lost the suit, would stand the cost of the repairs. The railroad company was to go ahead with the work, and if it won the suit, the city would reimburse it.

The case was argued before Judge Cant in the district court last fall, and the city won. The railroad company appealed to the supreme court, and by the decision handed down yesterday, the district court is affirmed.

The decision is of far reaching importance, aside from the mere fact that it saves the city $25,000 in cash, and it is, in fact, one of the most important legal victories ever won by the city. The Lake avenue viaduct is not the only one in need of repairs, and the decision means that railroad companies can be compelled to construct and maintain safe crossings at streets, even when the streets are built after the railroads are.

Practically the same points came up in the case of the City of Minneapolis against the Great Northern railway company, and both cases were decided at the same time.

Following is the syllabus in the Duluth case:

State ex rel. City of Minneapolis vs. St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway company et al., filed herewith, and State ex rel. vs. Railway company, 80 Minn. 108, to the effect (1) that the obligation to construct and maintain in suitable repair for public use safe crossings at streets and highways laid out over a railroad right-of-way after the construction of the road, rests on the railroad company, and (2) that contracts with municipalities, by which the company is relieved from that obligation and the municipality deprived of the right of enforcing it as a police regulation, are ultra vires and void, followed and applied.

Judgment affirmed. —Brown, J.

Following is the syllabus in the Minneapolis case:

First—The state may, in the exercise of its police power, impose upon railroad companies, whose lines intersect public highways laid out after the construction of the railroad, the uncompensated duty of constructing and maintaining at such crossings all such safety devices as are reasonably necessary for the protection of the traveling public.

Second—Such a requirement, being referable to the police power, is not a taking of private property for public use in violation of the constitution.

Third—A bridge over the railroad tracks, when necessary to make the crossing safe for public use, is a "safety device" within the meaning of that expression.

Fourth—Statutes granting franchises to corporations, involving rights of the public, are to be construed liberally in favor of the public and strictly against the corporation.

Fifth—The charter of the Minnesota & Pacific Railway company, of which defendants are successors in interest and subject to all its liabilities, contained the following provision:

"The said company shall have the right and authority to construct their said railroad and branches upon and along, across, under or over, any public or private highway, road, street, plank road or railroad, if the same shall be necessary; but the said company shall put such highway, road, street, plank road or railroad in such condition and state of repair as not to impair or interfere with its free and proper use."

Held, that this provision applies to streets and highways laid out over the railroad after its construction.

Sixth—A railroad company receives its charter and franchise subject to the implied right of the state to establish and open such streets and highways over and across its right-of-way as public convenience and necessity may from time to time require. That right on the part of the state attaches by implication of law, to the franchise of the railroad company, and imposes upon it an obligation to construct and maintain, at its own expense, suitable crossings at new streets and highways to the same extent as required by the rules of the common law at streets and highways in existence when the railroad was constructed.

Seventh—A con tract by a city by which the police power is attempted to be forever abdicated is ultra vires and void.

Eighth—Neither the state nor a municipal subdivision thereof, to which that power is delegated, can by affirmative action, or by inaction, permanently divest itself of the authority and power to exercise it.

Judgment reversed and a new trial granted. Brown, J.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Sheldon Man Drinks Wood Alcohol by Mistake and Dies.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Sheldon—Mistaking a bottle of wood alcohol for grain alcohol, Charles Knatz imbibed of it freely and as a result is dead.

Devils Lake—Julius Martin and George Dickey are under arrest here on suspicion of cracking the postoffice safe at Bisbee, N. D., and securing $500 in cash and stamps.

Grand Forks—Sufficient pledges have been secured to insure the construction of a sixty-room modern hospital in this city by the Sisters of St. Joseph. Through Bishop John Shanley the sisterhood agreed to construct and maintain a modern hospital of that size in Grand Forks, providing $15,000 and a suitable site was donated. This has been done, and two of the sisterhood will come to Grand Forks next week to select the site.

In the district court a jury awarded Alex Turney a judgment of $500 against E. P. Cook & Company, merchants of Jamestown. Turney sued for $5,000 for malicious prosecution, asserting that the firm attached property belonging to him for a debt owed by his father.

Valley City—An unusual amount of building is going on all over Western and central North Dakota, and Valley City is sharing in the general prosperity. At least 100 residences are being built here. It is impossible for persons who are coming to the city to secure houses in which to live. Scores of families are boarding because they cannot get homes and even the residences built this summer will not supply the demand. Valley City is growing rapidly and has already passed the 5,000 mark.

One of the factors which is making for this rapid growth is the good crops. The outlook this year is also most encouraging. Barnes county has never had a better prospect. The wheat crop is further advanced than usual and the heavy rainfall is not doing it any damage. The plant is rugged and well rooted. The cold weather had retarded the growth of the blade while the root has gone down and secured a growth which insures a crop even if there should be no more rain. The acreage of wheat is very large in the county.

The city is to have a new newspaper next Monday. The Times-Record is to issue a daily, the first in the Valley City.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Having twice been refused a marriage license because of the written opposition of his children, Gullick Risty, a pioneer resident of Minnehaha county, traveled to Luverne, Minn., where he secured the desired license and was united in marriage to a Mrs. Carlson.

The bridegroom is 74 years of age, while his bride is 49.

When the sons and daughters of the old man learned that their father was planning to go to Minnesota for the license, and that he had been angered by their opposition to his marriage, they repented and telephoned to his attorney that they would withdraw their objections.

Risty is one of the wealthiest farmers in this part of the state. He has a fine home near the village of Brandon, and there he and the now Mrs. Risty have settled down to spend the remainder of their lives. Only a short time ago Risty made his will, and in addition to setting aside a good portion of his large estate for each of his children after his death, he gave each of them $1,000 in cash for immediate use.

Risty is a hardy Norseman, and is exceptionally well preserved for a man of his age. He is six feet four inches in height, is well proportioned, and looks like a Viking of the olden time.

Deadwood—After an inquest over the body of George Knowles, who was killed by a fall from his wagon, near Blacktail, the verdict of the coroner's jury was: "Accidental death, caused by drink."

Sturgis—Charles C. Moody, editor of the Sturgis Register, has for four days been unconcious and unable to take nourishment of any kind. He is gradually sinking.

Elk Point—An alderman who had been knocking the Elk Point Fourth of July celebration and booming that of a neighboring town was hanged in effigy on Wednesday night. The mayor cut the dummy down at an early hour, and the great American eagle, with unruffled plumage, will emit its screams in Elk Point next Wednesday.

Miller—Judge Briggs has announced himself as a candidate for the state senate before the Republican convention in September. He says he will accept no passes from railroads or any favors from corporations, and is for the primary system.

HEAVY TRACK FOR RACES OF FIREMEN.

Warren, Minn., June 30.—The third day of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association meeting opened with bad weather. Rain in the night interfered with the races, making the track very heavy. Everything was pulled off as scheduled, however, with the following result:

Association hook and ladder race, Red Lake Falls first, time 26 seconds; Blackduck second, time 26 4-5 seconds; Crookston third, time 27 4-5 seconds.

In the ladder climbing contest, Red Lake Falls and Blackduck tied in the fast time of 8 seconds flat. Blackduck won in the run off, Red Lake taking second and third places.

The combination hook and ladder hose race was run by Red Lake Falls in 24 3-5 seconds, by Blackduck in 25 seconds and by Warren in 26 1-5 seconds. The race is not yet finished, Bemidji being put over until tomorrow.

In the horserace Mixer won, with Lockstep second. The best time was 2:03¼.

The ball game between Warren and Argyle resulted in a victory for Argyle by a score of 5 to 2. Five errors by Warren in one inning netted Argyle five scores and the game. Leazle and Cameron for Argyle and Lipps and Anderson for Warren were the batteries.

WILD TIME AT INDIAN SCHOOL

Pipestone, Minn., June 30.—A sensational shooting occurred at the government Indian school in this city yesterday morning.

Alexander Hart, a discharged employe, entered the dining hall, which was full of officers, teachers and students of the school, and commenced firing at those in the room. He aimed at Superintendent Campbell, Clerk T. C. Smith, Disciplinarian Felix, C. K. Peck and others. The only shot taking serious effect was that fired at Peck, which passed through his hand. One bullet grazed Superintendent Campbell and two shots narrowly missed Clerk Smith.

Consternation prevailed among those in the hall and two women leaped from the windows to the ground, being somewhat injured.

After Hart had fired all his cartridges he was overpowered by Mr. Felix and placed under arrest and given a preliminary examination as to his sanity. He will later be examined before Probate Judge Ring, and it is believed insanity will be established.

Hart has been at the school two years, but was discharged last February for knocking down an Indian boy. He has been brooding over this trouble. His wife is a ninstructor in the school.

LUTHER LEAGUE ADJOURNS.

Delegates and Alternates Elected to the National Convention.

Albert Lea, Minn., June 30.—The annual meeting of the Luther League of Minnesota is completed and the delegates have returned to their homes. Delegates were selected to the national convention to be held in Canton, Ohio, as follows: J. N. Kidahl, Northfield; M. Morrison, St. Paul; N. Jensen, St. Paul; Rev. F. E. Jensen, Winnipeg; Messrs. Verner, Otto Johnson and S. H. Holstad, Minneapolis; Dr. Haupt, St. Paul; Miss Idella Monson, Albert Lea; Rev. C. N. Valentine, Lindstorm. Alternates were also chosen.

Resolutions were adopted thanking the local league, the United church, its pastor and others for courtesies. The place for holding the next convention was not decided upon.

MISS M'KINLEY TO WED.

Engagement of Late President's Niece to Captain Heidt Announced.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 30.—Capt. J. F. McKinley of the Eleventh United States calvary, stationed at Fort Des Moines, yesterday announced the engagement of his sister, Miss Grace McKinley, to Grayson Villard Heidt. Miss McKinley is a neice of the late President William McKinley, and has spent most of her life in Canton and Cleveland.

Her fiance is a captain in the Fifteenth United States cavalry and is the quartermaster of the transport Dix, which plys between San Francisco and the Phillippines. Owing to the fact that he has just been transferred to the Dix, the marriage, which was not to have taken place until late in the fall, has been advanced to July 18. The wedding will be at Fort Des Moines.

TO EXTERMINATE MUSTARD.

Experiment Station Finds Method of Killing Farm Pest.

Madison, Wis., June 30.—The success of experiments for the eradication of mustard from farm lands which are being made for the Wisconsin experiment station by Prof. R. A. Moore, professor of agronomy at the college of agriculture, university of Wisconsin, will mean much to the agricultural interests of the state. Wild mustard has become a source of much annoyance and loss to farmers, and many methods for its extermination have been tried and abandoncl because they were inefficent, injured grain crops, poisoned stock, or were too expensive. Sulphate of iron, which is used in solution by Prof. Moore in his experiments, is cheap, costing but $7 or $8 per ton, which amount will cover twenty acres effectively. Though it kills the mustard, if applied before the plant comes to full bloom, it has no ill effect upon grain crops, nor are stock coming in contact with it poisoned, as by many other solutions similarly used.

"Hundreds of square miles of farming land in the state, which otherwise would be the finest agricultural land in Wisconsin, are covered with mustard," said Prof. Moore, discussing the experiments. "A sprayer of German make has recently been shipped to the college for use in this investigation, and I believe it will mean the redemption of much land now infested with noxious weeds. Canada thistles, I believe, can eventually be killed off too, but as they are perennials, sending up new heads from the root, they must be treated several times during successive seasons. Experiments along this line are now being carried on by the station, but definite results cannot be obtained until another year shows whether the thistle roots are killed, as we hope, by the frequent blighting of the tops."

The new spray is twenty-two feet wide, and can be used as fast as a horse can travel through the grain field, so that twenty or twenty-five acres can be covered in a day. A 20 per cent solution of 100 pounds of iron sulphite crystals in a 52-gallon barrel, stirred well, was used with excellent results in demonstration tests in Dane, Waukesha and Kenosha counties recently. Similar tests will be made next year in portions of the state not visted this year.

ON PUBLIC MATTERS

Commercial Club Acts on Number of Important Questions.

Endorses Local Purchase of Bonds—Insurance Special Order.

The West Duluth Commercial club held an important meeting last evening and the attendance was large. A number of subjects of public interest were acted upon and another was made a special order for next Friday night. The matter of the request of the council for citizens, banks and other financial institutions to purchase the bond issue for water extension, was brought up and the members of the club endorsed this action in a resolution introduced by A. H. Merriman. It was the sense of the meeting that the citizens, banks and others should take hold of the matter and the members were gratified to learn that the Western State bank of West Duluth would probably bid on a block of the bonds.

The matter of excessive insurance rates in West Duluth was brought up. It was the sense of the meeting that the merchants affected should take a hand in this and let the club know whether they wished action to be taken. Therefore on motion of C. T. Fancett the matter was made a special order for next Friday night and if the merchants affected wish the club to act they may appear at that time and state their case before the club and advocate what they want done.

A committee was appointed to confer with the Royal League of West Duluth concerning its seeming desire to sublease the club rooms for a meeting place and club rooms.

The matter of the route of the new extension of a street car line from Grand avenue up the hill was brought up but the club refused to take action for the reason that there has been a hard enough time securing the extension without risking it now by getting into a fight with the street railway company over the route. It is understood and so expressed at the meeting that a petition is out against the proposed route, which is from Grand up Central to Cody, down two blocks on Cody to Fifty-seventh and up that avenue to the Missabe tracks. The protest is based on the claim that Central is a bad avenue to start on as there is a watering tank for horses at the corner of Central and Grand and at the corner of Central and Cody the fire hall is stationed.

However this matter was left to the citizens to fight out, the club refusing to take a hand.

WAS WELL ATTENDED.

Recent Baptist Convention Success in Every Way---Just Closed.

The delegates to the Baptist convention, which ended last night at the West Duluth Baptist church, feel gratified at the attention given them by residents here. Every session was well attended, and those of yesterday afternoon and last evening had packed houses. The afternoon was devoted to the women, who held a missionary session. In the evening the Baptist Young People's union had the meeting, and listened to an address by Ernest Fagenstrom, state Sunday school missionary, on "Modern Ideals in Sunday School Work," and by Dr. Crandall of Minneapolis, on the "Story of Sampson Slaying the Philistines."

The B. Y. P. U. of the district elected the following officers: President, Miss Florence Brown of West Duluth, who was also elected a delegate from the district to the national convention, to be held at Omaha next month; vice president, J. B. Vetre of Superior; secretary, Miss Emma Geer of Duluth; treasurer, M. De Witt of Duluth, and Christian culture leader, Miss Stewart of Superior.

Barn Struck by Lightning.

During the heavy storm of Thursday, S. Stabenfeldt, a farmer, living up on the cemetery road, had an experience with lightning which he does not care to repeat. A bolt of lightning struck his barn, knocked in a door in the loft onto a litter of puppies lying close to it, but did not hurt the pups, then went through a lining of sawdust which he has between the outer and inner walls of the barn, tearing a hole through this for about the length of the barn, and then passed out, not setting fire to the place or doing any injury beyond tearing it up some. Mr. Stabenfeldt was in the barn at the time, and figures that he had a close call.

THEODORE WEILAND WEDS.

Former West Duluthian Married to Wisconsin Young Woman.

A wedding took place Thursday at Weyanwega, Wis., which will be of much interest to Duluthians, and particularly to West Duluthians. Theodore Weiland, formerly of this city, took unto himself a wife. Mrs. Weiland was Minnie Etta Polk of Weyanwega, Wis., and the wedding took place at the home of her parents, last Thursday.

Mr. Weiland is now of Bayfield, Wis., where he runs a bank. Formerly he was of the firm of Weiland & Wade, hardware merchants of West Duluth, to which F. H. Wade has succeeded.

Mr. and Mrs. Weiland will be at home at Bayfield after Sept. 6. In the meantime they are enjoying a trip down the lakes, and will go to different points of interest in the East on their honeymoon. Miss Polk is said to be an attractive and popular young woman at her home in Weyanwega, and is also well known in Bayfield, where she will reside in future.

THE TIME IS EXTENDED

Consolidated Bisbee Stocks Will be Received Until Aug. 15.

To Accommodate Stock Held in Europe—Four-Fifths In.

The Houghton Mining Gazette of yesterday has some interesting news with reference to the Superior & Pittsburg Copper company, the consolidated Bisbee company. The date for sending in stock certificates has been extended to August 15 owing to the fact that it has been found that much of the stock is in Europe. The Gazette says:

"At the Calumet & Arizona office it was stated yesterday that the surrender of stock in the four old companies of the Calumet & Arizona sisterhood which are being consolidated into the Superior & Pittsburg is coming in most satisfactorily, showing an almost universal response to the consolidation plan. The time originally specified before which the stock had to be surrendered in order to take advantage of the privilege of subscribing to the unissued treasury stock at par, was June 20, but owing to the fact that a very large portion of the stock still unsurrendered is in the hands of people in Europe and other distant places who have not had sufficient time to respond, it was decided at the meeting of the board of directors this week to extend the limit of this privilege to August 15.

"On account of the labor involved in handling the surrendered stock and entering it on the books, it will be a wek or ten days before the officials will have the stock received up to June 20, the original date of limitation, properly tabulated and the statements sent to the stockholders. But there have been tabulated to the present date approximately 200,000 shares in each company, out of the 250,000 outstanding. A large portion of the remaining 50,000 shares in each company is already in the hands of the office, but the work is so heavy that it has not yet been tabulated and therefore its exact amount cannot be known. That which is still outstanding, as already stated, has to come mostly from a distance.

"Those who turn in their certificates in the old companies, to be exchanged for certificates of the Superior & Pittsburg, will be duly notified of the amount of unused treasury stock to which they are entitled to usbscribe. The payment of the subscription price, $10 per share, which is also the par value, will have to be paid by the subscribers by Aug. 15. Notices of the allotment and the amount due will be mailed to each stockholder."

The copper stock market was depressed again today, but the market steadied somewhat at the close. The Boston coppers did not tumble pell mell after the New York stocks, but they were not strong by any means.

North Butte opened at $84.75, advanced to $85.25, declined to $84.75 and closed at $85 bid and $85.50 asked. Amalgamated opened at $96.50, advanced to $97, fell off to $97.62½ and closed at $96.50 bid and $96.62½ asked.

Anaconda opened at $234, advanced to $236.50, fell off to $234.50 and closed at $235 bid. Butte Coalition opened at $29.50, fell off to $29.25, rallied to $29.50 and closed at $29.25 bid and $29.62½ asked. Calumet & Arizona was inactive and closed at $109 bid and $110 asked.

The unlisted shares had a weaker tone. Superior & Pittsburg sold at $17 and $16.75 and closed at $16.75 bid. Denn-Arizona sold at $16.50 and closed at $16.50 asked; Warren at $13.12½ and closed at $13 bid; Keweenaw at $9.50 and closed at $9.50 bid; Globe Consolidated at $6 and closed at $6 bid, and Copper Queen of Idaho closed at $2 asked. Black Mountain sold at $8.25, advanced to $8.50 and closed at $8 bid and $8.50 asked.

SINGERS WHILE AWAY THE TIME

While House Waits for Agreements to Conference Reports.

Washington, June 30.—The animosities and political differences of the present session of congress were totally forgotten or laid aside in the house today and the sweet singers among the members joined in the songs that are sung about every hearthstone in the land where the English language is spoken.

Gathered about Mr. Watson of Indiana, who has a fine baritone voice, Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, who has a high tenor, Mr. Campbell of Kansas, Mr. Webb of North Carolina and Mr. Olmsted of Pennsylvania and others whose musical qualities are well known with the house and the galleries to join in the choruses, the historic chamber rang with melody during the long and tiresome waits today, occasioned by the delay in agreeing to conference reports.

A new element in the musical life of the closing days of the house was developed by Mr. Fulkerson of Missouri, who showed himself a whistler of no mean ability. Julia Ward Howes "Battle Hymn of the Republic," was sung as solo and chorus. "My Old Kentucky Home," "My Maryland," "Dixie," "My Country, Tis of Thee," were all given with spirit.

"Give us a song, Mr. Speaker," called a dozen voices during a lapse in the singing. "Uncle Joe" blushed like a baby. He suggested as substitutes Mr. Williams of Mississippi, Mr. Clarke of Missouri and Mr. Watson.

Then Mr. Henry of Texas, "by unanimous consent," moved that ten minutes be permitted for debate, five to John Wesley Gaines of Tennessee, who shall discuss the "Crime of '73," and five to Charles B. Landis of Indiana, who shall discuss the question "All kinds of work for all kinds of men."

This caused the greatest of merriment. As a time-destroyer the house listened to a post-mortem on the passage of the Jamestown exposition appropriation participated in by Mr. Payne of New York, the floor leader of the majority, and Messrs. Maynard and Jones of Virginia.

"Everybody works but Fairbanks" was relegated to the list of songs and "Everybody works but Cannon" was sung in the house today by some of the sweet singers from the South land, the chorus running:

"Everybody works but Cannon,
"He sits around all day,
"Talking in his office
"In his fascinating way;
"He's supposed to be our speaker,
"But Hinds really makes things go;
"Everybody works in congress,
"But good old 'Uncle Joe'."

ACCUSED SEEK THEIR RELEASE

Young and Chubb Begin Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

W. A. Young, who was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of assaulting John Murphy at Proctor a few days ago, and Frederick A. Chubb, who has been held as an accomplice in the assault, have begun habeas corpus proceedings in the district court to secure their release from the county jail. The writs were returnable today, but the hearing was postponed until Monday.

Both men base their application on the claims that they are illegally restrained, that their demand for a preliminary hearing was denied and that they were bound over to the grand jury without examination or the opportunity to produce any witnesses in their own behalf. They are represented by Charles E. Adams.

Both Young and Chubb are conductors on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road and are said to have had good records.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Indianapolis, Ind., June 30.—Capt. Christopher Tyler Arms, an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, while the latter was a young lawyer in Springfield, Ill., died here last night aged 93 years. He was a descendant of one of the oldest New England families, and a pioneer in American reconstruction.

Boston, June 30.—Rev. Dr. Judson Smith, one of the most prominent figures in the Congregational church of this country, died last night at his home in Roxbury, after a long illness.

Seattle, Wash., June 30.—Fiskey Barnett, a theatrical manager of this city, died here yesterday after a short illness. During the past year he was totally blind. Barnett had managed concert halls and vaudeville houses in this city and Nome and San Francisco, and was widely known in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Lead, S. D., June 30.—Charles C. Moody, editor of the Sturgis Record, and a pioneer newspaper man of the Black Hills, died at his home yesterday after a lingering illness, aged 53 years. He was a son of the late Former United States Senator Moody. He leaves a widow and three daughters.

St. Louis, June 30.—John Quincy Adams Newson, 70 years old, former secretary of state of Indiana, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Chapman, Thursday night. The body was taken to Columbus, Ind., for burial.

Judge Martin Files Bunch of Cases From Virginia.

Three divorce cases instituted by parties residing in Virginia were filed in the district court this morning by John Martin, the attorney. E. F. Thomas seeks a divorce from Nellie Thomas, on the ground of habitual dreunkenness and desertion. They were married at Hudson, Wis., March 13, 1899.

Marie Phillips desires a legal separation from David Phillips, on the ground of desertion. They were married at Bemidji, June 30, 1903.

Christina Salo asks a decree of divorce from John Salo, on the alleged ground of desertion. They were married at Calumet, Mich., in 1894.

RESPITE FOR BARRINGTON

Bogus Lord's Case Will Be Taken to Supreme Court.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 30.—F. S. Seymour(Lord) Barrington's case is to be heard by the United States supreme court. Chief Justice Brace today signed writ of error and appeal will at once be made to the supreme court of the United States. This stops all proceedings and Barrington will not hang July 28.

St. Louis, June 30.—Frederick Seymour Barrington appeared in St. Louis about four years ago and was apparently a man of leisure, wealth and aristocratic lineage. He told of his English estates and the ownership of Melrose castle and said he was an English lord. His manners captivated Miss Grace Cochrane of Kansas City, and they were married. The falsity of his tales were soon after discovered, a divorce being later granted Mrs. Barrington. "Lord" Barrington became acquainted with James P. McCann, a well known horseman of St. Louis, and was convicted of having murdered him June 18, 1903.

The Fourth of July.

On next Wednesday we celebrate the 130th anniversity of the Declaration of Independence. Few realize the many changes that have taken place during that time or the remarkable growth and expansion of the original thirteen colonies. It was during that time that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters was first presented to the public, and for the past 53 years have given complete satisfaction in thousands of homes where it reigns supreme. These people were led to realize its wonderful power by being persuaded to try it when their stomachs were weak and their systems run down, and a similar experience awaits you as soon as you resolve to try it. Do so today and you make the first step toward good health. It cures headache, bloating, heartburn, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, cramps, diarrhoea or female ills.

ENORMOUS INCREASE

Washington, June 30.—Senator Culberson today found opportunity to make an address in the senate on the finances of the country under President Roosevelt. The statement showed that exclusive of the Panama appropriation the increase of expenditures in 1904 over 1905 was $35,496,995 in 1905 over 1904 $40,336,233; in 1906 over 1905 $17,903,836.

"This," said Mr. Culberson, "shows an aggregate increase of expenditures, excluding all expenses in Panama of $93,767,064 in three years. As usual with this administration expenditures for the military and naval establishments increased for this period and of the preceding amount the increase for the naval establishment alone exceeded $24,000,000 for the three years.

The total expenditures for the years 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906 was $2,933,004,409 and deducting Panama expenses it was $3,866,421,083. The total expenditures of the years 1898, 1899, 1900 and 1901, the four full years of McKinley was $2,430,316,399. It thus apepars that exclusive of all expenses in Panama the expenditures for the four years of Roosevelt exceeded those of the four years of McKinley, although he conducted the Spanish war, by the extraordinary sum of $434,104,699."

FIXING THE INCLINE.

Two New Street Cars on Bay View Heights Route.

The incline road at West Duluth running up to the Bay View Heights, is being fixed up in various ways and in a few days from now will be in many respects a new affair. Two new 16-foot cars have been purchased and will be attached to the cables at once, replacing the old bobtail cars which have been on there for years. The new cars are of regulation street car pattern with vestibules at either end.

Besides this the road is being newly ballasted, new ties are being put in and the track straightened. The cars will be in service by tomorrow night and the fixing of the track will be completed in about a week.

LA FOLLETTE'S BILL

Limiting Hours of Train Service Goes Over to Jan. 10.

Washington, June 30.—The discussion of the La Follette bill limiting the hours of train service on railways was revived in the senate today by a request by the Wisconsin senator for unanimous consent to vote on the bill at 3 o'clock on Dec. 18 next. He spoke of the opposition to the bill as manifested last night as "filibuster."

Senator Gallinger took occasion to say that Mr. La Follette had misrepresented his position last night. He wished, he said, to repudiate any intimation that he had ever taken an adverse position toward labor. Senator Foraker expressed the opinion that owing to the numerous amendments, he could not see his way clear to vote for the bill last night. Senator Carter spoke in much the same tone. All three of these senators objected to the word "filibuster" as used by Mr. La Follette, but neither made objection to the request to fix a day for a vote.

Later in the day the question was revived by Senator Beveridge, and ultimately an agreement was reported to vote on the La Follette bill on Jan. 10 at 3 o'clock.

SUNDAY STREET CARS

Have Been Indorsed by the People of Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., June 30.—By an overwhelming majority the ratepayers of Winnipeg Thursday indorsed four by-laws submitted to them for decision —for municipal power, a board of control, Sunday street cars and a new issue of school debentures. In the case of three of the by-laws the opposition was decidedly tame, and in the case of the remaining one, the Sunday car measure, its opponents failed to carry a poll, being defeated by a vote of almost two to one.

The power by-law overcame the onerous conditions attaching to all money by-laws with flying colors, having, besides a majority of over six to one, over 1,000 votes to spare above the required favorable vote of twotenths of the resident voters. This achievement has no parallel in Winnipeg's history, money by-laws almost invariably being defeated by a failure to poll the required vote. On the whole, the election was a remarkable one.

Ratification of the Sunday car by-law makes necessary the final step by the council, the third reading of the measure, before it goes into effect. The third reading will come at the next meeting of the council, on July 9, and cars will be run on the following Sunday. Following is the vote:

Byiaw—	For.	Against.	Majority.
Power	2,380	352	1,198
Board of control	3,516	851	2,665
Sunday cars	2,885	1,647	1,238
School	2,386	323	2,063

NO MORE IMMUNITY.

One very good thing that congress has accomplished at this session has been legislation that will prevent a repetition of the judicial fiasco that resulted from Judge Humphrey's "immunity bath" decision in Illinois.

While the interpretation this judge placed upon the immunity provisions of the law has been bitterly criticised by the president, the attorney general and many lawyers, and dissented from by other federal judges, it was essential that the law should be so changed that it couldn't very well happen again, and this congress has done.

In the first place, it has given the government the right of appeal from such decisions, which it did not have before, and hereafter when a judge decides that because some officers of a trust have given testimony to the government relating to the trust's violation of law all of the officers of that trust are immune to punishment, the government will be able to carry the decision up for review.

Furthermore, congress has undertaken to define and narrow the immunity provisions of the law. Under Judge Humphrey's decision, immunity extended to all persons who contributed under any sort of invitation, solicitation or pressure to help the government make a case. The senate passed a bill making a distinction between persons and corporations in this respect, excluding corporate bodies as such from all immunity privileges. The house bill preserves this distinction, and goes a little further by limiting the immunity privilege to the witnesses on behalf of the government who testify under oath, and the witnesses who, in obedience to a subpoena, produce relevant testimony. These differences, which it was necessary to adjust in conference, are rather in favor of the house. It is distinctly ridiculous to hold exempt from punishment every individual who answers a question, formal or informal, regarding the business of a corporation.

Both houses agree that it is still more ridiculous to hold a corporation exempt because some of its servants have given testimony about it.

The common sense of justice is a good enough test for all such questions as this. The attitude of Judge Humphrey will not stand such a test. The distinctions made in the house bill are approved by the test of common sense.

One way to prevent corporation crimes is by punishing not only the offending corporations but the officers responsible. This cannot be done effectively with courts ready to stretch a point in their favor. If it is necessary to make the laws so rigid that they cannot be stretched in order to prevent such judicial interference with justice, it must be done.

SOME BUSINESS RULES.

David R. Forgan, vice president of the First National bank of Chicago and one of the best known business men of the West, recently wrote a letter to a member of a New York banking firm describing his ideal of the business man, and the letter is being circulated among men of all classes of business in that city, and is attracting great attention. Unless reports have sadly maligned them, they needed just the advice that Mr. Forgan has given. Here are his rules for the business man who may hope to devote his life to making money without becoming sordid and mean:

Be honest, making money honestly or not at all.

Be fair, refusing to injure a competitor.

Be kind, regarding employes as something more than an investment.

Be charitable, giving liberally for the uplifting of humanity.

Be healthy, exercising as a duty.

Be sociable, having a side to friends not known to all.

Be sympathetic, fearing littleness of soul more than littleness of fortune.

Be broad, accumulating resources higher than material.

Above all, be true to self, condoning nothing in self which is to be condemned in others.

It reads more like something that many business men who have attained great success have tried to avoid, rather than something they have been trying to attain.

Too many business men have cared little whether it was done honestly or not, so long as they made money. Fairness, in many business circles, has been unknown. So far from refusing to injure a competitor, they have risen by striking down their competitors, so that the rule has come to be, "do others or they will do you." Kindness to employes has too often consisted in regarding them only for what they could produce, considering them merely as money-making machines without a thought of their personalities, their hopes, their ambitions or their comfort. Charity has been neglected, kept too much at home or made an ostentatious means of advertising. Health has been neglected in the mad pursuit of dollars. Sociability has been a means of making more money only, without a thought of the refining and ennobling influences of friendly association with good people. Sympathy, by the very processes of business, has been crushed out, and littleness of soul has been too often a natural result of money-getting. "Breadth and the accumulation of resources higher than material" has in many cases been the last thing to be considered, so greatly has the sordid hunger for money encroached on the better impulses.

These are splendid rules, and if business were conducted according to them it would be much nobler and cleaner and happier. Less thought of self, and more thought of others, are needed to bring about a closer observance of these rules.

There would be almost if not quite as much money, and infinitely more real happiness, in business conducted on these lines than in business conducted by selfish, sordid and corroding methods.

THE PENALTY OF RICHES.

A Duluth man, holding a high position in the business world though working on a salary, was led the other day to make some reflections that should interest those who are straining every nerve and stretching every moral precept to become wealthy. Said he:

> I have been working on a salary all my life, and all my life I have been in contact with millionaires. I have known many of them, intimately, and this is the result of my knowledge of their lives: If somebody were to come to me today and offer me a check for $10,000,000, I should refuse it. Rich men are miserable and unhappy.

And he meant what he said, undoubtedly. It takes but a little acquaintance with the excessively rich to realize that happiness is not purchasable with vast wealth. Some of the wealthiest men in the world have testified with great earnestness to this fact, though it is doubtful if their evidence was accepted at its real value by the public. Indeed, it is a question whether great riches do not bring almost as much actual wretchedness as the direst poverty.

To those of small means who realize what comforts a little extra money will bring this seems paradoxical, and probably some of them will refuse to believe it, but the weight of evidence strongly supports it. While it is true that money may be made the means of bringing comforts and wholesome pleasures, there is a limit to its usefulness, and that limit is very much smaller than the sum most seekers for wealth fix as the amount they want.

There is more real happiness, however, in an honestly earned income just large enough to make the home comfortable and to permit a few pleasure trips and luxuries than there is in an income too big to be spent.

The difference could hardly be better illustrated than by the experience of a small boy with a sweet tooth who goes to work in a candy store. Before that candy was a thing to be admired and coveted, and he had envied those who worked in candy stores above all others. After he has had his fill, and has become accustomed to having unlimited sweets at his disposal, he quickly loses his interest in them, and is more likely to have an appetite for pickles than he is to have one for candy.

Perhaps the bitterest result of riches is the havoc they work among the children of those who accumulate them. The most recent example is young Thaw, who, after a harum scarum experience of playing ducks and drakes with his family fortune, is in a prison cell awaiting trial for murder. The daughters marry shopworn earls and the sons marry chorus girls, and many of them fly headlong to ruin on golden wings.

THE CROQUET REVIVAL.

It is like an echo of other days to hear that croquet, most gentle and ladylike of sports, is being revived. Though very popular at one time, so popular that there was hardly a lawn without its outfit of hoops and stakes, it has fallen into disuse of late, and though here and there a croquet set will be found, more strenuous sports, or pure laziness, have taken its place.

And yet there are very nice points about croquet. It is conspicuously a sport for the dignified. One may pursue it assiduously without departing in the slightest degree from the most perpendicular dignity. The only exertion it requires is a stately walk about the lawn, interrupted by courtly stoops ever and anon as you lean over to aply the mallet to the ball.

It is particularly adapted to family use. Grandfather can play it with little Mary, as well as little Mary's elder sister can play it with the young man that drops in to see her occasionally. It is good for both sexes, for young and for old, and it makes a slightly diluted pleasure out of a highly diluted exercise.

There never was an institution with less guile or violence about it than croquet. If we played croquet generally, instead of football and baseball, there never would be any horror over broken ribs, broken backs and broken necks. The utmost evil that can come from a game of croquet is a light tap on the shins.

And it is so distinctly a moral game, too. Nobody ever heard of a player becoming fighting or swearing mad over a game of croquet. Again, it is inexpensive. An outfit does not cost much money, and players do not have to equip themselves with a formidable armory of utensils, as golf players do. And speaking of golf brings up another advantage. You don't have to learn a vocabulary of outlandish terms when you play croquet. You can play it in plain English, unadorned with picturesque profanity or Gaelic tongue-twisters.

Unlike most of our more sturdy or more vicious amusements, croquet does not strain the nerves. You can play a game of it in comfortable serenity, without the slightest agitation or perturbation. You will not even get your hair mussed, much less your nerves ruffled. It is mild, amiable, commonplace, yet satisfying, elevating and soothing.

There is hope for the country yet, if croquet can have a new vogue and become a leading national sport.

MENDING AND MATRIMONY.

A news note says that small pocket sewing machines are now being made, and that young men are buying them in great numbers. "With these," says the item, "the enterprising and economical bachelor can do much mending and sewing which he never would attempt singlehanded."

This is an interesting industrial item, and another tribute to the inventive ingenuity of the American people. But its greatest interest is in its sociological aspect. What does it mean to the matrimonial industry? Will it make young men independent of matrimony, and inclined to accept single blessedness when it is accompanied by a device that makes unnecessary the presence of a mender of clothes in the family?

One drawback to bachelorhood is the unhappy faculty that clothing has of losing its buttons, parting at the seams, and wearing into frazzles in places exposed to friction. While possibly no young man ever married solely on this account, no doubt it has had its influence in impelling the youth of the land to stick its head into the entrancing noose of matrimony. Various inventions have helped to ameliorate this condition, but as a rule their influence was but trifling. For instance, there are so-called "bachelor's buttons," which need no needle and thread, but attach themselves by main force and cling more persistently than those fastened with thread. In the rural districts, it is related, single men sometimes make shingle nails serve the same purpose, perhaps not so elegantly but quite as usefully. While there is nothing graceful or esthetic about a rusty shingle nail fastened to the upper reaches of a pair of trousers, still it serves the purpose nobly.

But will the pocket sewing machines promote celibacy, and tend to make matrimony unnecessary? The question is important. There are enough discouragements to matrimony now, without some fiendish inventor getting out a new one. On the whole, it seems unlikely, in view of the doubt whether wives nowadays bother much about mending anyway, that it will have much influence. If the shingle nail and the bachelor's button could not do away with matrimony, it hardly seems probable that the pocket sewing machine will accomplish that undesirable end.

But let us hope that we shall not presently hear that it has become quite the thing for wives to make presents of this ingenious invention to their husbands on birthdays and Christmas, with the kindly suggestion that they do their own mending.

WOMEN AND POLITICS.

Pope Piux X. is credited with a remark, said to have been made in the course of a private conversation, that "women ought not in any case to mix themselves in public affairs."

Why not?

If public affairs are looked upon in their proper light, that of the conduct of public business, surely women have as great an interest in them, and in politics as the attempt to treat them governmentally, as men.

Politics just now seems to concern itself principally with the doctrine of "the square deal" between the large interests and the people. For instance, congress has passed a bill giving the government the right to regulate railroad rates. Now women travel, women are interested directly and indirectly in industries patronizing railroads, and they are as much concerned if the railroads fail to give the people fair treatment as the men are. Men travel and ship goods, and so do women.

The pure food bill is another piece of public business that politics concerns itself with. Women eat, just as men do, and have the same right to demand that the government shall see that they are not deceived, defrauded and poisoned by dishonest business methods.

The oppression of the trusts under the protection of the tariff if a matter of great public interest, with which politics is closely concerned. Women suffer from trust exactions as much as the men do. They eat and wear trust made goods, necessarily, and even those who are not in business for themselves are family financiers charged with the duty of making both ends meet on the family income. Trust prices make it increasingly difficult for them to do this. Why shouldn't they be interested in the curbing of the trusts?

And if they are interested in these things—and of this there can be no question—why shouldn't they do what they can to help the men correct conditions? Why shouldn't they write and talk about such things, if they wish to? They are allowed to freely "mix" in municipal matters, such as cleaning the cities and making them wholesome and healthful, and this is public business and often politics, as much as pure food, tariff and trusts. They are people, just the same as the men; they suffer from unwholesome economical conditions, as much as the men if not more. Why, then, shouldn't they be allowed to talk about it and act if the opportunity presents itself?

Furthermore, if they wish to "mix in public affairs," even to the extent of inducing the men to give them a vote, who is going to stop them?

HOTEL GOSSIP.

C. C. Metzler of New York, representing the Frank B. Gilbreth engineering interests, was in Duluth this week, registered at the Spalding, on his way to St. Paul, where he will spend several days superintending the movement of a heavy shipment of structural steel which is westbound from the Carnegie mills at Pittsburg, and is to be used in completing the immense power plant of the Seattle Electric company, which has harnessed the Duwamish river at Georgetown, Wash., and will develop a tremendous power supply for the operation of electric car service between Seattle and Tacoma. The work was undertaken late in April, and is to be finished in record time, by Sept. 1. The expenditure involved is $350,000.

The company which Mr. Gilbreth heads specializes on speed work, and has under way at the present time a $1,000,000 hardware building contract in Sioux City, two immense contracts resulting from the rebuilding of San Francisco, and heavy contracts in Alaska and other points. Because of the necessity of completing the Seattle engineering project in exceptionally brief time, Mr. Metzler is in the Northwest supervising the movement of steel and hastening the delivery of material, which, as fast as it is delivered, is being worked into the new structure at the Georgetown power plant.

"The San Francisco earthquake," said Mr. Metzler, "caused our people to completely change their plans after the big power plant was under way. It was to be a skeleton steel structure, but has been changed to solid reinforced concrete, with a view of standing any earthquake which may possibly come in the future. This has developed great difficulties in breaking the record for speed of construction, but by watching every car of material and following it across country, we hope to have the plant running on the first of September. The tremendous amount of building in progress and consequent volume of traffic moving over the railways makes it very difficult at the present time to secure delivery without exceptional efforts.

"Our people received two immense contracts in San Francisco due to the rebuilding of the city, which were taken on the novel plan of ...ming a fixed price for the work and a fixed profit in addition. A very large staff of trained engineers, foremen, superintendents, mechanics, maintained under a highly developed field system has been rushed forward to take charge of this work, and it is now in progress. This system, which makes it possible for us to handle great engineering works faster than anywhere else in the world, results in record-breaking time on such contracts. The company I represent is specializing on "speed work." These contracts and others which include a pulp plant in Maine, a canal in Louisiana, and a pulp mill and complete plant in North Carolina, are all being handled on the "cost-plus-a-fixed-sum" contract basis, and are being handled under contracts for completed work within very brief periods. The Maine contract involves the building of a pulp plant, dam, power plant and a complete town.

"American engineers lead the world in this class of work. San Francisco will be quickly rebuilt because our engineers have the men at hand, trained, reliable and able, to take these tremendous tasks and complete them on time in spite of any obstacles which may arise. Our system is a little out of the ordinary because we follow Mr. Gilbreth's idea of telling the owner exactly what the cost and the profit will be and letting him see the books at any time. It was a decided innovation in its incention, but has been remarkably successful."

Mr. Metzler is following each days' progress of each loaded car which contains material for the Western project, and is in constant communication with the railways over which the shipments are being made. A determined effort is being made by the New York firm to break previous records for speed of construction. The work at Georgetown involves the construction of a nine-foot penstock, which takes the water from the Duwamish river, and an immense plant fitted with turbine wheels and necessary machinery for the conversion of the power into electricity. The plant will be one of the largest in the entire West.

"The cut-over and partly-timbered lands of Northern Minnesota are now attracting the attention of investors in farm lands," said John G. Allen of Minneapolis, at the Lenox. "The prairie lands have had their boom, and it is the other kind that is coming in for attention now. The farmers have discovered that it is on the cut-over lands that they are assured of the best results and the best markets.

"The territory between Duluth and Minneapolis is settling up fast. Our foreign representative has just brought thirty-two families into the territory six miles east of Hinckley, where what is known as Allen's colony is being established. The turpentine plant at Hinckley has been materially increased in size. In fact, its capacity has been doubled, and it will mean much to the settlers in that territory, especially during the first few years of their residence. They can obtain employment there when they have time to spare from their farm duties."

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Duluth's superb street railway system is the admiration of all citizens and visitors. Every seven minutes during the day a car passes each corner going in either direction the full length of the line. From Rice's Point to Lake Avenue traffic is large, but beyond that point going east the travel hardly justifies the company in the expense of running so many cars. It is probable that a turntable will be put in at Fourth avenue east and only each alternate car will be run eastward beyond that point.

Samuel L. Clemens reached here yesterday on the India from Buffalo, accompanied by his family, and left for Keokuk, Iowa. A reporter found that his was the real Mark Twain, but the renowned humorist was not in an amusing mood. Mark never was very handsome and he still retains his good looks. He would say nothing about his next book or that he was even writing one. He said that the sale of Gen. Grant's book, of which he was the publisher had netted a handsome thing to all interested.

Eph Morris of Boston, arrived in the city today, having traveled all the way from Boston to arrange an athletic contest with some of the Western sports. He is not only a leading lightweight pugilist, but also is a champion club swinger and heavy weight lifter.

Arrangements are now completed for a glorious time at the ball park on the afternoon of July 5, for the benefit of Cody, the disabled right fielder of the Duluth ball club. The leading feature of the day will be the cricket game in which D. A. and R. W. Petre, R. H. Lee, C. Tower, Jr., and others will take part. A host of other attractions, such as foot races, sack races, three-legged races and similar events will make up the program.

W. S. Woodbridge to J. E. Woodbridge, lots 119 and 121, block 13, Third division, $3,551.

J. Hinkley to J. J. Costello, west half lot 10, block 3, Central division, $5,000.

R. J. Wemyss of Kansas City is the gentleman who has taken the position of manager of the West Superior Land & Improvement company. Gen. Hammond is interesting himself in railroad building.

J. M. McKinley and wife and Miss Sykes of Canton, N. Y., are domiciled at the residence of T. H. Presswell.

The St. Paul Dispatch says Capt. DeWitt of Company K swore at his men. The captain heard it and asked Col. Bobleter if it wasn't his duty to reprimand the officer. The colonel evaded a knotty question by replying: "It isn't in the tactics."

THE WEATHER

Now will you be good? Just when there seemed to be no end to the bad weather, when all nature was drenched and gloomy and grouchy, the clouds cleared away, the fog dried up, and the sun burst out merrily. Today was ideal. The wind was from the west and fresh enough to keep it cool; there was scarcely a cloud in the sky, and conditions were balmy and wholly delightful. There was an odd condition last evening. People sitting on their porches suddenly became aware of a current of soft, warm air that was sweeping over them. A few moments later it was replaced by another current, this time as cool as the breath of a refrigerator. This soon passed away, and warmth returned.

Yesterday the thermometer got as high as 80 degrees, and last night's lowest was 56 degrees. The weather man expects some cloudy weather tonight and tomorrow, without much change in temperature, and variable winds.

A year ago today it was summery, with a southwest breeze and warm, but inclined to be showery.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Fine weather prevails this morning over the greater portion of the districts in the West and Northwest, but showers fell during Friday or last night over the lake region, Upper Mississippi valley, Western Canada and North Pacific districts as a product of the slow moving disturbance in Saskatchewan. This low pressure area in its relation to the stationary high pressure over gulf states is still causing abnormally warm weather in southern states and from the Mississippi valley eastward to the Atlantic. The barometer is also high in the far West and low over New Mexico. Conditions favor mostly clear skies in this locality tonight and Sunday."

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 30.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Sunday: Wisconsin: Fair tonight and Sunday. Cooler in extreme east portion tonight.

Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota: Fair tonight and Sunday. Not much change in temperature.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Baltimore American: "Why do you suppose people look on blondes generally as frivolous?"

"I don't know, unless it is because they are naturally light-headed."

Philadelphia Press: "It makes me red hot!" murmured the horseshoe angrily.

"What does?" sang the anvil.

"Oh, the air that bellows puts on," sighed the shoe.

Then the hammer struck him a savage blow and he didn't try to be funny any more.

Lippincott's Magazine: "Are you going to take your son into business with you?"

"Not now. I'm going to wait until he has forgotten all he's been taught."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Is he so very rich?"

"Is he! Just count the number of newspaper correspondents who are trailing him!"

Chicago Tribune: "Is there any available substitute for rubber?" asked the instructor of the class.

"Yes, sir," answered Miss De Muir, one of the fair coeds. "I think 'stare' or 'gape' is just as good."

Cleveland Leader: Mr. McSosh (reading)—Great Scott! A camel can work for a week without drinking!

Mrs. McSosh—Huh! And you can drink for a week without working.

And silence fell.

Chicago Tribune: "Yes," said the professor, "the doctor is a self-educated man, and he fairly worships his teacher."

Baltimore American: "What do you suppose all the doctors and lawyers are going to do that the colleges are turning out?"

"That's easy; take the public in."

New York Sun: Knicker—What makes that summer hotel so popular?

Bocker—The acoustic properties of the veranda.

Saturday Night Talk

Smokeless and Noiseless Patriotism.

Fizz, sputter, bang—the blast of the horn down the street, accompanied by the pattering of a number of little feet, and so we move along toward the glorious Fourth and its various, many-colored, loud-sounding, spectacular features. Why not? Isn't that just what Johnny has been saving his money for these last three months in order that he might have just as many firecrackers as Jimmy, and perhaps a few more? And aren't all these demonstrations and this getting up in the morning at an outlandish early hour altogether proper ways of givign vent to our enthusiasm over this "land of the free and the home of the brave?"

Certainly they are. Nobody ought to object to such ebullitions of honest and patriotic fervor, provided those who take part in them do not become utterly oblivious of the fact that invalids have their rights as well as healthy people, and that rowdyism and vandalism of any sort always stain the fair face of our national birthday, which deserves better treatment at the hands of those who call themselves American citizens. On with the celebrations, then, but before they begin, and while they are going on, and when they are over, let us now and then let our thoughts rest a moment upon that which underlies all the noise and excitement of Fourth of July, apart from which they would be as ludicrous and inconsequential as the beating of a Chinese tom-tom.

Science is doing its best today to overcome, or mitigate the smoke and the noise which accompany modern industry. There are coming to be other tests of genuineness and efficiency besides those which appeal powerfully to the eye and ear alone. Is it otherwise in the realm of moral values? What would all the Fourth of July demonstrations amount to if back of them were not the quiet, constant, even flow of patriotic feeling throughout the country from one year's end to the other? We err when we think that wars and battles are the chief tests of the true citizen's regard for his country. Bunker Hill, Bennington, San Juan, the mention of such contests thrills the blood, but did they exhaust patriotic zeal? The patriots who stay at home and carry on, before and during and after a great war, the industries on whose maintenance depends the stability of the land, are as truly patriots as the soldiers who go to the front.

Think what we owe to the men who framed our Constitution, organized our judicial systems, who from decade to decade have helped to secure and to enforce good laws, think of the patriotism represented by our chain of colleges and universities, reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific; think of the men who have planted churches all over this land, undergoing cheerfully the hardships of a pioneer, faring forth into the wilderness, pouring out their very life blood in behalf of the people. I call all such service as this service of the Nation; and all men who had a share in it saviors of the Nation, no less than those who fought the now historic wars.

And the glory of our modern days is that, while we are not likely soon to be called to enlist and strap on the knapsack and seize our guns and sally forth to deeds of heroism on the glory field, we are called upon to put into effective operation, every day, that quiet kind of patriotism which helps to keep the Nation strong and sweet.

Do we want issues great enough to fire the imagination and nerve the will? Look about and see the wrongs to be righted, the corruption to be exposed and pierced to the heart, the oppressed to be set free, and the sad, sorrowing life of humanity to be relieved and brightened? Shall we gaze admiringly at the fireworks and the parade, and burn a little powder ourselves, forgetting, meanwhile, the fact that the institutions of freedom cost blood and labor and sweat and the inmost treasures of men's hearts. It cost all that to found them and to keep them when in peril. It will cost fully as much to preserve them and pass them on intact and untarnished to those who come after us.

Jesse James, Attorney.

Kansas City Star: Jesse James, son of Jesse James, the outlaw, was enrolled today in the circuit court as an attorney at law. He passed the examination June 9 before the state board of examiners in Jefferson City and made the highest grade in a class of thirty-seven. His average was 91. He said today:

"In two weeks I will quit the pawnbroking business and will devote the balance of my life to the practice of the law."

"Do you keep stamps here?"

The speaker was a fair, timid girl, wearing a badge on her cloak, which indicated that she had just come to the city on an excursion from Wadena, or some other town in the state. She was pretty, too, and the man behind the counter smiled at her as he reached in the drawer for some of Uncle Sam's little lithographs.

"How many do you want?" he asked.

"Let me see," and the girl looked over a bunch of souvenir postal cards she held in her hands; "I guess six ones and a two will be enough."

The only other customer in the store stepped forward then, and when the clerk found that he did not have enough 1-cent stamps, offered the girl two, from a little case he carried. The girl blushed and offered him 2 cents in payment for the stamps, but he declined them, murmuring something like "don't mention it."

The girl licked her stamps and planted them on the cards.

"In which direction is the postoffice?" she asked, and the customer, including himself in the glance, told her. "And Superior street is a block down that way, isn't it?" and her shapely arm pointed toward the lake. She was told that such was the case.

She seemed to be so unfamiliar with the city that the customer asked if he could not escort her to the postoffice, and place her safely on a Superior street car, she having indicated that it was her intention to board one after she had mailed her cards. But her chin went high in the air, and she thanked him very kindly, but guessed she would get along all right alone.

"You will get too fresh, will you?"

"Her chin went high in the air."

said the clerk, grinning at his customer. But he latter did not say anything, he was looking at the retreating form of the girl. He decided that he was very well pleased with her appearance, and wished that he lived in Wadena, or wherever it was, part of the time anyway. He finally said:

"I think I will keep my eye on that girl when she goes down the hill again. Some 'drunk,' or a cheap sport, might speak to her."

"Yes, and she'll think your are following her and you'll get in more trouble," said the youth behind the counter. "I advise you to leave them kind of girls alone. Them ain't the kind you can make a date with the first night you meet them."

The customer gazed at the clerk, pityingly, and answered: "I don't think so either." Then he lighted his cigar and left the store.

It was just beginning to get dark and the sky seemed to have cleared up some after the rain. When he reached Superior street, he paused to listen to the loud, catarrh-befogged arguments of a religious exhorter and kept an eye out in the direction from which he expected the fair stranger from the realm of the one night stands, to come. Finnally, he espied her and turned his head away. He did not want her to think that he was standing on the curb to eyre her. He could not see the expression on her face when she passed him, he did not dare look around.

When she reached Superior street, she hesitated. The religious enthusiasts had drawn a crowd of rough persons to the corner and the Bowery saloons every now and then vomited more of the uncouth ones, some of whom very palpably had stood too long against the bar. After viewing the scene, the girl evidently decided to wait on the opposite corner until the car put in an appearance but even on the opposite side of the street from the exhorters, she was not immune from the leers of some of the more or less intoxicated pedestrians.

She drew back against the building to get as far as possible from the people on the sidewalk. A young man wearing an imitation panama hat eyed her. She turned her head in the direction of the customer and he was forced to look away. When he looked again, another young man was taking off his hat and evidently trying to engage in conversation with girl. Now was his chance. He was across the sidewalk in a bound. Bumping into the fellow with the lifted hat, he said: "I beg your pardon, but is this young man annoying you?"

She gave him a reassuring smile that made him feel terribly sick and replied: "Not any more than usual, he happens to be my brother."

The brother gave him a stony glare and the would-be protector of lone women fled, straightway. "It isn't very often that brothers tip their hats when they meet their sisters," he soliloquized as he trudged back to the news store again, to get a fresh cigar.

Just as they were rowing to shore.

doing just that thing almost won a box of cigars for a well known Duluthian last week.

With a companion, he sought the fish in a lake near here which is popularly supposed to contain as many as any other sheet of water its size in this part of the country. Indeed, other fishermen have gone there and returned with goodly strings of fish and no end of tales about the big ones which got away.

The pair fished diligently and all day long they were not awarded with a single nibble. In vain did they try different methods and locations but the fish did not give them any encouragement whatever.

They trolled with sinkers on their lines, to get in deep water and they took the weights off to keep the hook near the surface. They fished in the weeds and out of them and2 they did not see a single fish at any time. Both returned fishermen declare that it was the worst day they ever put in.

Just as they were rowing to shore, to the end of quitting the place, the man in charge of the line felt a tug thereon. He felt sure that industry was to be rewarded at last but his countenance betrayed nothing.

"I'll bet you a box of cigars that we get a fish before we get to shore, anyway," he said to his companion, carefully concealing his assurance.

The other fellow looked up suspiciously, but remembering the bad luck that had been theirs all day, he said he was dead willing to take the bet.

Then the first fisherman gleefully pulled in the line and at its end found a water-logged piece of wood. It is said that the air in the vicinity of the boat was blue for a time and the picturesque profanity that flowed from the mouth of the disappointed man ought to have attracted fish for miles around, to the spot.

FORTY IN A COMBINE TO COURT INJURIES.

Paris, June 29.—The existence of a "Voluntary Accident society" has been revealed in an action to recover damages for physical injury. A cyclist was knocked down and run over by a wagon, and claimed damages and insurance. The insurance companies were struck with the familiarity of the names of the witnesses, and the whole story has come out.

A band of about forty young men were insured in different companies. Then, turn about, they voluntarily were injured. Others of the band were always conveniently on the spot, and acted as witnesses. It has been established that during the year and a half that the society has been in operation they have had fifty accidents, have won fifteen cases, twenty-five are down for a hearing, and profits up to date net $20,000.

Unknown Friends.

There are many people who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with splendid results, but who are unknown because they have hesitated about giving a testimonial of their experience for publication. These people, however, are none the less friends of this remedy. They have done much toward making it a household word by their personal recommendations to friends and neighbors. It is a good medicine to have in the home, and is widely known for its cures of diarrhoea and all forms of bowel trouble. For sale by all leading druggists.

IN POLITICS.

Duluth politicians, Republicans and Democrats alike, are just now indulging in speculation regarding the state ticket the latter will be likely to put in the field this year. This is about the only thing politically in which any special interest is being displayed at present. There is a notable lack of interest in both state and county affairs, and it looks as if this condition would exist for some little time yet, unless unforeseen circumstances arise to attract attention.

It is thought highly probable that a Duluth man will be given a place on the ticket by the Democrats. In this connection the position of treasurer is mentioned most prominently. This section of the state was overlooked entirely by the Republicans in making up their ticket, and it is believed the Democrats would strengthen their position materially by selecting a strong man from Northeastern Minnesota.

Some of the leading Republican candidates are petty well bunched in Southern Minnesota. The would-be secretary of state is from Redwood county, and the man who aspires for the treasurership recognizes Murray county as his home, which adjoins Redwood. The lieutenant governor is from Blue Earth, another southern county, and Iverson, candidate for state auditor, is from Fillimore county. All of these are practically in the same territory. This leaves several big gaps without any representation on the ticket. It is expected that the Democrats will take advantage of the situation, and see that their candidates are more scattered.

Senator Lord of Kasson was in the city yesterday, looking none the worse for his defeat in his attempt to land the governorship nomination. As far as his friends were able to ascertain, there were no sore spots anywhere about him. He seemed to be confident that Mr. Cole would win out over Governor Johnson at the fall election, and said the defeated candidates would turn in and do all they could to assist in rolling up a big Republican majority.

Senator Lord has been mentioned prominently for the place of chairman of the Republican state central committee. He said yesterday that he would not consent to become chairman, even if the chance offered itself, giving as a reason for his stand the fact that the chairmanship would take so much of his time from his private business. Senator Lord is a prominent lawyer in his home town, and if he became chairman it would virtually mean that he would have to let his law business go entirely until after election. As long as he apparently has no personal interest in the campaign this, it must be admitted, would be a poor policy to adopt. The senator says he will do all he can to help along Cole's cause, however, without assuming the duties attendant upon this position of importance. As to Mr. Cole's chances, he says:

"I firmly believe, in spite of the talk that Governor Johnson will succeed himself, that Mr. Cole will be elected by a handsome majority. Of course it may seem to be only following a custom for defeated candidates to say such things about the men who beat them as a matter of political courtesy. However, I do not say so from any such motive—I believe what I say. The party wounds are being healed, and the factions drawn together. Here and there, of course, one will find a person who is dissatisfied, but it would be asking too much not to have this. Were an angel nominated, somebody would kick about it, I guess. Mr. Cole is in the happy position of a candidate who has made a good record as a legislator and as a business man, and who has nothing which can be charged against him. I see no reason why he should not get the nominal Republican majority in Minnesota this year."

Asked as to whether or not he would run for the state senate again from Dodge county he said that he would not, but would try the experiment of attending to his own business for a while. He has given it out to those who are anxious to succeed him in the senate and who have been anxious as to what he intended to do, that they will have the field themselves as he does not want the honor again.

"I believe Bryan will be the presidential nominee of the Democratic party at the next election," he said in speaking of national affairs. "Bryan is stronger today than he ever was. Roosevelt has said that he will not be a candidate for another term, and I believe that he will live up to his word in this respect, although strong pressure will doubtless be brought to bear to prevail upon him to enter the race again."

P. E. Dowling doesn't take very well to the idea of W. E. Culkin of Duluth becoming a Republican candidate for congress from the Eighth district, and says so very plainly in his paper, the Eveleth Star. Mr. Dowling says several things in this connection that are not at all complimentary to the former register of the land office. Friends of Mr. Culkin are asserting that this is because of a personal grudge held against the Duluth man. They say that while the ex-state senator was register of the Duluth land office, an intimate friend of Mr. Dowling filed on a Minnesota homestead. This friend was an office holder in Eveleth, and the fact that the homestead was out of the district interferred with his holding office. A government inspector happened to be in the Minnesota field at the time, and he discovered, so the story goes, that the homesteader had sold timber in a considerable amount from this claim without having first proved up on it. This led to difficulties from which the man had trouble in extricating himself. It became necessary for him to put up a bond of several hundred dollars, and Mr. Dowling, it is claimed, went good for the amount.

The long and short of it was that the bond was forfeited. Mr. Culkin is said to have really had no more to do with the case than the register of the California land office, other than the fact that the land happened to be located in his district. The whole matter was pushed through by the special government agent, it is said, and the local land office officials were not mixed up in it in any way, except as a direct result of this special agents efforts to punish the homesteader for breaking the laws of the United States. Friends of Mr. Culkin assert that Mr. Dowling lays the blame for the whole affair on the former's shoulders, and think it is hardly right, in view of the circumstances.

Not much of interest is doing in county politiecs. Charles E. Adams already has entered into an aggressive campaign to land the Republican nomination for county attorney, while John H. Norton is to all appearances sitting back, an interested spectator, evidently of the belief that it is too early to get into the game with a very great display of energy.

"There is plenty of time yet," he remarked yesterday afternoon. "You will hear from me later on. If I shouldn't begin really working for the place until August there would still be sufficient time left for me to spend all the money I can spare to get the nomination. I might say, however, that I am not worrying at all over the outlook."

Mr. Norton has been invited to deliver the address of the day at the Eveleth Fourth of July celebration, and has accepted the invitation.

One of the arguments being used against Mr. Culkin becoming a candidate for congress is the fact that he failed to win a victory as manager of Odin Halden in the race for the state auditorship nomination. To use the expression of the Minneapolis Journal, it was not in the cards that Halden should win, and, under the conditions, no man failed to win a victory as manager for the St. Louis county man's campaign would have been able to change the final result. Local Republicans, including warm friends of Congressman Bede, agree that Halden's failure to win out should not be chalked up against Mr. Culkin.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS IMPATIENT OVER DELAY

we at?" "What is Cole thinking of?" "What interests are dominating him?" These and a thousand other questions are being asked every day, but there is no answer, and there is little doubt but that some of the leaders are rather warm under the collar at the seeming neglect of the nominee for governor at not giving satisfaction as to who is to head the next state central committee. At the last moment, when everyone thought that the candidates would get down to business, a meeting of the candidates, scheduled to come off at the Ryan hotel, was called off at the last moment, so that the hope of getting the delicate matter of naming a committee off their hands fell through.

Most of the leading Republicans think that there should be an organization at once if the Walker man ever hopes to defeat Johnson. They realize that the coming campaign is going to be a hard one, and if there is any chance for success it is in early organization, and "push," from morning until night. The absence of "push" seems to irritate many. It is over two weeks since the convention met, and it is generally admitted that the organization should have been completed in that time.

It is not likely that the Republican party will open headquarters until September, at least, but there is much work, it is understood, to be done before the headquarters are opened, and there should be a state central committee in the field to do this work.

There is already some talk of the organization of the house for next winter. With Julius Schmahl out of the game there will be a lively contest on for chief clerk. There are already two candidates in the field—Adolph Johnson, who has been first assistant clerk for the last two sessions, and John T. Jones, who has been reading clerk for the last four sessions.

The call for the Democratic county conventions to elect delegates to the state convention at Minneapolis has been set for August 25. It is recommended that the primaries be held Aug. 22, although the state committee has no jurisdiction in this matter.

J. R. Morely, who has for many years been member of the house from the Eighth district, has announced himself as a candidate for another term.

Local politicians are attempting to determine what effect the nomination of Cole and the event of his election will have on Hugo's aspirations as speaker of the next house. Two Northern men both working in harmony on the state development platform, it is urged, would aid Cole to make a whirlwind record if elected. The speakership fight, of course, is not being urged very strongly at this time, but it is understood that Hugo is not sleeping.

The Elbow Lake Herald startled the natives the other day by calmly announcing that the Republican party of the stato failed to adopt a platform and that another convention would likely be called to restore the missing link in the anatomy of that political body. The account declares that the convention adjourned while the matter was up in the air. The record of George Simpson, secretary of the convention, shows that the platform was duly endorsed by the convention.

Cole called in Jacobson for advice over the makeup of the state central committee. Evidently, from the subsequent results, Jacobson's appearance did not have a very harmonizing effect on the situation. When he left Cole was as much in the air over the selection of a committee as ever.

NUMBER OF RAILWAYS

Chicago, June 30.—The Railway Age says: The number of railways in the hands of receivers continues to decrease, the few that have been added to the list in recent years being more than offset by the number of receiverships that were ended by foreclosure or by friendly reorganization without sale. In the first six months of this year only five short roads, with a total of 184 miles of lines, were placed in charge of the courts; while five roads, with 175 miles, were restored to their owners by sale, and another, having 34 miles completed, was found solvent and returned to the original company. No receivership has been established this year as a result of financial difficulties of recent origin, and no new insolvencies are in sight or apprehended at the present time.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON JOINS

In Protest Against Sale of Minneapolis Flour at Frisco.

St. Paul, June 30.—Governor Johnson yesterday sent the following telegram to Governor Pardee of California:

"Citizens of Minneapolis donated 50,000 sacks of flour for free distribution among the needy sufferers of the California disaster. They protest against sale or delivery of this flour, and insist on its distribution as intended, and with them I earnestly join in this protest. JOHN A. JOHNSON,

"Governor."

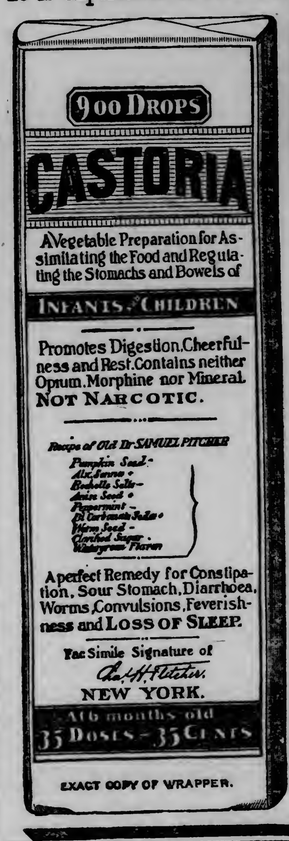

This telegram is the result of a published statement by Chairman Edgar of the Minneapolis California relief committee, which went at length into the manner of the collection of the flour sent to San Francisco and the purpose for which it was intended. The statement claimed that the Red Cross society and Gen. Greely had sold the flour on the ground that "there was sufficient flour on hand to last fourteen years." Mr. Edgar claimed that the committee sent the flour to San Francisco for free distribution and that it did not want the flour sold, but wished it distributed as was originally intended. Mr. Edgar charged the Red Cross with palpable misuse of relief funds. This protest having been brought to the attention of Governor Johnson, the governor immediately took the matter up with Governor Pardee.

A Thoughtless Druggist.

ONLY a thoughtless druggist would offer a preparation without the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher when Castoria is called for; the "delicate, faint and flickering light" that joins baby's life to its devoted parents being too sacred, to the self-respecting druggist, to be trifled with.

For over thirty years Mr. Fletcher has given, and still gives, his personal attention to the preparation of Castoria. It has won the confidence of mothers and physicians everywhere—never harmed the tiniest babe. This cannot be said of Imitations, Counterfeits and the "Just-as-good" rot.

The thoughtless druggist only offers the counterfeit because of a few pennies more profit. Any new preparation can be but an experiment, and they are experiments—mere guess work—irrespective of what their sponsors may say for them. It is experience of over thirty years, against wild and injudicious experiment.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Financial Year Just Closing Greatest in the Nation's History.

New York, June 30.—R. G. Dun & Co's. Weekly Review of Trade says: Today closes the most successful financial year in the nations history thus far and optimism is so general throughout the commercial world that the next twelve months period promises to carry the high water mark still higher. With few exceptions the crops are making good progress and the new year will start with more business on the books of manufacturing concerns and great enterprises and undertakings in contemplation than on any previous July 1. Scarcely any labor struggles exist and there is no inflation of securities through speculative operations with borrowed money. These are some of the reasons for the confidence in the future. Trade reports for the week indicate a reasonable disposition to curtail business, but even the summer influence is less disquieting than usual. More new scales have been signed by which wages will be increased and the pending dispute at textile mills promises amicable settlement. Railway earnings in three weeks of June were 10.3 per cent larger than in 1905, and disbursements for interests and dividends at this center next month are estimated at $160,000,000 which is about $20,000,000 larger than a year ago. One of the adverse reports of the week is the delay to rebuilding San Francisco by the high price of labor and the tardiness of some insurance settlements. Foreign commerce at this port for the last week shows gains of $3,722,441 in imports and $1,249,129 in exports as compared with last year.

Prices of iron and steel products have often been higher than now, but it is doubtful whether the position was ever more wholesome.

Primary markets for textile fabrics are still held back by uncertainty regarding the stability of prices, especially in the cotton goods division. Another case of indifference among buyers is the semi-annual inventory which will be taken before provision is made for July trade.

Exports to South America and other miscellaneous shipments only partially offset the utter lack of contracts from China, which is the least satisfactory feature.

Failures this week were 207 in the United States against 249 last year and twenty-seven in Canada compared with sixteen a year ago.

It is wonderful what a little careful grooming will do for a woman. It's inspiration and sweetness. It's delightful and bewitching. The effects of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

No Coffee War.

Recent published reports of the reduction in price of a certain packaged coffee, have no relation to Arbuckle's "Arlosa" coffee, the standard of coffee values for the past thirty-seven years. In trade parlance the "grade" of "Arlosa" is too high for a price reduction in this market. Its equal in quality could not be retailed competitively except at a pecuniary loss. Only the enormous sales of "Arlosa," exceeding the combined sales of all the other packaged coffees in the United States, and the fact that it is marketed on the narrowest margin of profit, make possible its superlative value for its present price. Loose, mixed coffees sold out of bags and bins cannot be identified, and are no criterion of retail values, offering opportunities for deception and the temptation of excessive profits.

Low Round Trip Home-Seekers' Rates.

The Northwest's most successful and reliable SPECIALIST IN DISEASES OF MEN.

The Neglect of Private Diseases

A Stitch in Time Saves Nine.

Many men have been made miserable by the unfortunate contracting of some poisonous special disease which, through neglect or improper treatment, has completely undermined and shattered the physical strength and mental faculties. No greater mistake can be made than to consider lightly the first evidence of the introduction of any private disease into your system, or to neglect the first symptoms of Nervous Debility, caused by improper and unnatural habits, excesses, dissipation, etc.

Such indifferences and neglect of the first symptoms are responsible for thousands of human wrecks, failures in life and business. Men! why take such desperate chances? The manifestations of the first symptoms of any disease or weakness should be a warning for you to take prompt steps to safeguard your future life and happiness. You should carefully avoid all uncertain, experimental, dangerous or half-way treatment, for upon the first treatment depends whether you will be promptly restored to health again, with all taint of the poisonous disease removed from your system, or whether your disease will be allowed to become chronic and subject you to future recurrences of the disease, with the various resulting complications, etc.

One consultation with us may change your whole life. Delays are dangerous.

If we could but see and treat all men when the first symptoms show themselves there would soon be little need for specialists in chronic diseases, and there would be few men seeking a rejuvenating of their physical, mental and sexual powers, and there would be none marked with the indelible stamp of constitutional Syphilis; and the sufferers from Prostatitis, Varicocele, Gleet, Kidney and Bladder Diseases, would be reduced to a minimum.

The Progressive Medical Association offers every afflicted man the care and attention of a skilled specialist in men's diseases, and a sure cure. Consultation free and confidential. Office hours 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. If you cannot call write Dept. A.

RAIN HAS BAD EFFECT ON REAL ESTATE MARKET

Many Negotiations Under Way, But Wet Weather Makes It Difficult to Close Up Deals—Improvements Are Also Seriously Delayed—Choice Residence Property on Twenty-Third Avenue East Changes Hands.

Another rainy week has had a somewhat quieting effect on the real estate business so far as actual sales are concerned. Quite a little new business in the way of negotiations for purchase, has been started and with the prospect that Duluth may get some fair weather, so that buyers can examine property, some of the deals are likely to be closed within a few days.

Realty prices are as firm as ever, even though wet weather has made the market inactive for a few days, and the brokers are consoling themselves with the thought that it cannot rain forever.

One of the annoying things about the bad weather has been the setback that it has given the improvement work generally. Street and building improvements alike have been seriously delayed and in some instances the work already done will have to be practically done over again. The delay already caused in building operations had made the contractors rather conservative about promising to get out new work.

The largest sale of interest that has come to light this week, was the transfer of the northwest corner of Twenty-third avenue east and Third street from J. L. Washburn to Mrs. D. A. Duncan and A. W. Frick. The sale comprises lots 17, 18, 19 and 20, block 2, Endion Park addition, 20 feet in all, and the consideration was $10,000. It is understood that the buyers intend to improve the property with handsome residences. Twenty-third avenue east has developed into one of the most desirable of the East end localites for building purposes, and the corner bought by Mrs. Duncan and Mr. Frick is considered among the best sites above Superior street.

Among the West end sales of the week was the transfer of a row of six houses at the southwest corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and First street, From L. Massicotti to W. A. Jacobs, the consideration being $6,000. The property is described as lot 402 and the east half of lot 404, block 48, Duith proper, Second division.

Two residence properties have been sold this week on Fifty-sixth avenue west. One, located near Main street, was sold by F. M. Clancy to John Perry for $1,800, and the other, located near Sixth street, was sold by A. J. Carlson to J. A. Adolfson for $1,600.

John Adolfson has sold C. A. Persons a residence property in Crosley Park addition, on Tioga street, near Fiftieth avenue east, for $1,600.

The contract for the additional two stories to the main building of the Lenox hotel, and the four-story wing addition at the rear, was awarded this week to Alex Roberts, who will begin construction work immediately. The improvement is an important one, and will cost in the neighborhood of $65,000. When completed, the hotel will have an additional capacity of about 100 rooms. The additional two stories will give the hotel a total of six stories. It has foundations capable of supporting an eight-story structure. The dining room and lobby space will be doubled. The hotel is owned by Ribenack Brothers, and the plans for the building and its improvements were made by Architect J. J. Wangenstein.

Another improvement planned this season is an additional story to the Haley restaurant building. The building will be done by M. S. Cook and J. B. Cook, who own the restaurant structure and adjoining building, and work will start in a few days. The second story will be occupied by Mr. Haley with a club dining room, and a number of private dining rooms.

M. McHenry is getting plans ready for a $3,000 residence building on East Third street.

The Peavey-Duluth Terminal company took out its building permit this week for an elevator on Rice's Point, to cost $275,000.

A SUBURBAN COTTAGE FOR $3,800

CLYDE S. ADAMS - ARCHITECT

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

This frame two-story dwelling is on the square order design, economical to build and is a good common-sense plan for a medium sized family. This plan makes the house look much larger than it really is. This plan is also quite compact, as every bit of space is utilized to the best advantage.

The hall is of good size and can be used for a reception hall. Upon entering the first floor you have a beautiful view of all the rooms at a glance. Height of stories 10 feet, second floor 9 feet 6 inches. First floor contains the following rooms, hall, diningroom, living room, kitchen and a very convenient pantry. Second floor contains three good-sized chambers. Another chamber could be added to the second floor over the kitchen. On the first floor a vestibule could be had in the hall with very few changes. Estimate cost as shown below:

Digging	$ 75	Millwork	650	Plastering	200
Stonework	175	Hardware	90	Brickwork	225
Cement floor	40	Lumber	800	Hot air heating	140
Carpentering	750	Painting and glazing	275	Plumbing	150
Paper and nails	40	Shingle roof	150		$3,760

AURORA

Aurora, Minn., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—P. M. Johnson, chairman of the building committee, has asked for bids for constructing the proposed new Methodist church here. The Catholic church, the first to be erected in the village, is nearing completion and is a very handsome building.

A game of baseball will be played tomorrow between the employes of McGhee's store and the regular Aurora club. If the championship is not definitely settled at that time, the clubs may play again on the Fourth.

Weiner Bros., the clothiers, have purchased lot 3 in block 4 on Jackson street from D. W. Freeman of Virginia for a consideration of $1,000. The lot adjoins their present place of business and they intend to build a store thereon when their present lease expires.

On July 6 the board of county commissioners will give a hearing on the petition for a county road connecting Aurora with the farming settlement on the St. Louis river to the south. The proposed highway will begin at Aurora on the line between sections 9 and 10, thence south to the corner of sections of 28, 29, 32 and 33, town 58-15, thence southeast, skirting the swamp to a line between sections 9 and 10, 57-15, thence to town line and west to connect with the Vermilion road.

Mrs. Charles R. Hill returned home to Masaba Wednesday.

F. W. Miller has sold his saloon to Tony Pezzuto and C. Paulitto, formerly of Eveleth.

A mass meeting is to be held at the council chamber on the evening of July 1 to consider the question of providing the village with adequate fire protection. A general attendance of property owners is desired.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Abramson will go to Mountain Iron to attend a wedding there tomorrow.

Mrs. S. Milavetz of Virginia was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Abramson on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Village Assessor Charles Olson went to Duluth Thursday with the assessment books to file them with the county auditor.

Olof Helstrom and Albert Darowin made a fishing trip to the Partridge river last Sunday and returned with 262½ pounds of pickerel, it is claimed.

Says Latshaw Did Not Pay Bill.

The board of water and light commissioners filed its answer in the district court this morning in the proceedings instituted by Job Latshaw to compel the department to give him water and gas service at 1714 Jefferson street. The board admits that it refused to make the service, but claims that it acted within its own privileges and rules, in that Mr. Latshaw was delinquent in the matter of settlement of a previous service bill which he refused to pay.

HEIRS WIN THE POINT

Court Permits Testimony Bearing on Value of Clark Mine.

Alleged Fraudulent Deal Will be Aired Next Week.

Captain Joseph Sellwood, who was called yesterday forenoon for the Rogers' heirs in their suit to have set aside the title conveying the title to the Clark mine to the Clark Iron company, was on the witness stand most of the forenoon to give expert testimony as to value of the property.

For two hours during the afternoon there was a fight between the heirs and the defendants as to the admissibility of any evidence as to the values. The issue came up with the question asked of Captain Sellwood if he knew the cost per ton of getting ore out of the Clark mine May 29, 1903. Judge Cant finally overruled the objections of the defendant mining companies and Captain Sellwood said the cost was 75 cents per ton.

Mr. Richards then sought to get the cost of mining in 1904, but on objection of the defendants withdrew the question and by the same witness established the cost per ton during the years 1900,1901, and 1902. Step by step Mr. Richards then established by Mr. Sellwood's testimony that the elements that go to make up the value of ore land are the cost of mining, the transportation charge, the market value and the quantity and quality of the ore. Captain Sellwood opened the Clark mine and his testimony was taken as establishing all these elements, the heirs having produced the records and the defendants having stipulated that 1,303,454 tons had been mined from the Clark mine from Jan. 1, 1900 to Jan. 1, 1906. Of this amount 591,145 tons are claimed to have been removed before May 29, the date of the probate court transaction.

Having established, as the heirs claim, the value of the Clark mine property, Mr. Richards questioned Mr. Sellwood along the same line about the Leonard mine. Captain Sellwood was familiar with some of the cost clements relative to the ore from that mine but claimed that in the matter of market value he could only tell what similar ore was worth as the ore from the Leonard mine was consumed by the steel corporation.

Some surprise was caused during the progress of the trial this afternoon by the statement of John G. Williamson that the Clark Iron company would make no contention that the probate court transaction of May 29, 1903, was a sale, but that it was a settlement of the claim of an interest in the property by the minor heirs of James M. Rogers. Just what bearing this position of the Clark Iron company will have on the case does not yet develop, but it is understood that the heirs regard it as a point in their favor.

William Wallace Fisher, guardian of the minor heirs, and himself the husband of one of the Rogers girls, is in the city with ono of the other children; a boy, that has recently attained his majority. It is expected that these witnesses will be put on for the heirs, with a view to developing the fraud charge made in the complaint.

The heirs have now attacked the Clark Iron company's title obtained from "Uncle Jimmy" Rogers, and have established, or attempted to establish, the value of the ore land. Next week, it is understood, the line of attack will be changed to the tax title, held by Melvin J. Clark, and to the question of fraud in the deal whereby the heirs were induced to relinquish all claims and rights for a comparatively small sum.

REV. ADOLPH KRANTZ.

Rev. Adolph Krantz of Wreto Kloister's parish, Ostergotland, is among the national Swedish Y. M. C. A. singers who will be heard at the First Methodist church on Monday evening. There is considerable interest over his coming here for he has a large number of relatives and friends in Duluth. Plans have been on foot to have Mr. Krantz some here in time to spend Sunday with his friends.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND—
State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, June 16th, 1906.
In the Matter of the Estate of Emma Kirkland Deceased:
On reading and filing the petition of Alexander Kirkland setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences; and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of said real estate

And it appearing, by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay the expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of such debts or expenses, to sell all of said real estate; and that it is for the best interests of all persons interested therein, to sell said real estate.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED, That all persons interested in said estate, appear before this Court on Monday, the 9th day of July, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court House in Duluth, in said County, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Alexander Kirkland to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

AND IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That this Order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said county.

WEATHER IS THE CAUSE

Of Another Slump in Wheat—Prices Are Lower Everywhere.

Flax is Active and Foreigners Good Buyers in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 30.—Favorable weather caused another break in wheat today and the closing prices were lower in all the American markets except Winnipeg. The Northwestern and Southwestern markets were weakest. The market was weak at the opening and there was heavy selling in Chicago on reports of good harvesting weather in the Southwest and a cessation of the unwelcome rains in the Northwest. Liverpool closed ½d to ⅝d lower, Berlin 1⅝c lower and Budapest ⅛c lower.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat for this week at 9,000,000 bus., of which quantity Europe will take about 8,800,000 bus. The actual shipments last week were 9,136,000 bus., and a year ago, 13,104,000 bus.

The July option closed ¾c lower in Duluth and Kansas City, ⅛c in Chicago, 1-⅛c in Minneapolis and St. Louis, ⅝c in New York and ¼c higher in Winnipeg. The September option closed ⅞c lower in Duluth, ¼-⅜c in Chicago, ⅝-¾c in Minneapolis, ½c in New York, ¾c in St. Louis and ½-⅝c in Kansas City. The October option closed ⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

Corn closed ¼-⅜c higher in Chicago and ½d to ¼d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed ⅛-¼c lower in Chicago.

Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 122,000 bus.

Clearances of corn were 33,000 bus.

Wheat was quiet and weak during the entire session of the Duluth market. July wheat opened ½c lower at 82½c, advanced to 82¾c at 10, fell off to 82c by 10:40, rallied to 82¼c at 11:30 and closed at that price, a loss of ¾c from yesterday. September wheat opened ¼c lower at 82¾c, declined to 82⅝c, rallied to 81⅞c, fell off to 81⅝-¾c and closed at 81¾c, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday.

Flax was more active, trading in the July option being particularly brisk. There was a good demand from abroad and a large amount of flax was worked for export in the local market. July flax opened unchanged at $1.13, fell off to $1.12¾-⅞, rallied to $1.13¼, declined to $1.13⅛ and closed at that price, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. September flax opened unchanged at $1.13, declined to $1.12⅜, rallied to $1.13¼ and closed at $1.13⅛, a gal not ⅛c over yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.12, fell off to $1.11⅝, rallied to $1.12⅜ and closed at that price, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday.

Oats and the other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weather Conditions Dominate Wheat and Prices Are Weaker.

Chicago, June 30.—Weather conditions dominated the wheat market today, and prices were weaker. A large number of local holders sold heavily at the opening because of improved weather conditions. Good harvesting weather was reported from the Southwest and rains had ceased in the Northwest. September opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 82¾c to 82¾c and declined to 81⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 265 cars against 265 cars last week and 219 cars a year ago.

The market was weak all day. Low point for September was 81½c. The close was weak with September off ⅞@1¼c at 81⅜c.

The corn market was easier despite firm cables. Local receipts were larger than had been expected and the weather was considered excellen tfor the crop. September opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 62¼c to 62¼c and declined to 62c. Local receipts were 605 cars with 344 of contract grade.

Covering by shorts caused a strong rally. September advanced to 52⅝c. The close was strong with September ½c higher at 52¾c.

Trading was light in oats, but prices were easier. September opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 36¼c to 36⅜c and sold at 36⅜@36¼c. Local receipts were 185 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and steady. September pork opened 5c higher at $16.75. Lard was up 2½c at $8.97½. Ribs were 2½@5c higher at $9.35.

Close: Wheat—July, 80⅞c; Sept., 81⅜c. Corn—July, 52¾c; Sept., 52¾c. Oats—July, 39¼c; Sept., 36⅜c. Pork—July, $16.75; Sept., $16.67½. Lard—July, $8.80; Sept., $8.97½. Ribs—July, $9.47½; Sept., $9.37½@9.40. Rye—Cash, 62@64c; July, 60½c; Sept., 61½@62c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.11; southwestern, $1.07½; Sept., $1.13. Timothy—Sept., $4.75. Clover—Cash, $11.00. Barley—Cash, 42@53c. Cash wheat—2 red, 82¼c; 3 red, 81½@82c; 2 hard, 80½@83½c; 3 hard, 77@81c; 1 northern, 84½c; 2 northern, 81½@84½c; 3 spring, 79@84c. Corn—2, 53¼@½c; 3, 53¼@⅛c. Oats—2, 39c; 3, 38½c.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It is anybody's market in wheat. The bears appeared to have the best of it this morning, with clear weather in the Northwest in their favor. They expected great help also from the continuation of liquidation in July wheat. Before the market closed it was next to impossible to buy any quantity of July wheat without advancing the price, and there was an upturn on a little buying to 81½c, a fraction higher than the close yesterday. The feature of the market was the important buying quoted by several leading interests on the break. There was covering of a good line of wheat around bottom prices by a house which represents the radical bear element of the Northwest. If the weather map continues bright and removes the probabilities of damage to the spring wheat crop, it will take a better volume of business than at present to sustain the market.

Corn—The one big thing in corn today was the persistent buying of July corn, how much short corn is to be covered for July nobody knows, but if the interest is large a scare might run the price for this month up very quickly. The improved temperature over the corn states and very large receipts failed to held the speculative market in check. On breaks the corn looks good.

Oats—May oats alone made a slight gain for the day. Market weakened no doubt in sympathy with wheat. Effect of the recent hot weather is hardly known as yet. There is enough bull sentiment to make oats a buy on the breaks.

Minneapolis: The Northwestern Miller has a cable from its Argentine agent, reading as follows: "Wheat seeding is proceeding slowly under adverse conditions. The growth of seedings is retarded by drouth and they are partly damaged."

SWEDISH CHORUS COMING MONDAY

Great Interest in Concert at the First M. E. Church.

Next Monday evening the Swedish Y. M. C. A. chorus direct from Sweden will give a concert at the First Methodist church, it being an extra number in the Star lecture course. This body of singers is pronounced the finest of its kind in the world. Seven years ago it took the first prize at the Paris festival and was the wonder and enthusiasm of all musicians. It is considered very fortunate that a visit was obtained for Duluth and there is great enthusiasm among the Swedish people of the city of their coming.

The singers will arrive in Duluth Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in a special car on the Great Northern road and will be entertained at luncheon at the Commercial club by the Y. M. C. A. of Duluth.

They have been singing in Minneapolis this week and the Tribune of that city said of them:

"Written words are so indequate to describe sensations, that the reviewer of a musical entertainment who has been thrilled and moved by wondrous beauties of melody and harmonic effects that appeal, through the superficial anatomical machinery to that deeper sense of hearing that for want of a designation is called 'the soul,' despairs of conveying to the reader any true impression of the delight he has experienced.

"The effect produced upon the hearer by the Swedish National choir of the Y. M. C. A. cannot be transposed to paper. One may say that it is in many respects the greatest male chorus in the world; that its volume and body of tone are unequalled; that individually and collectively its voices are magnificent and its blending of tone suggests the diapason of a greater organ than man has ever built; that its crescendos and diminuendos are like a musician's dream of the ultimate possibilities of male chorus achievement; yet after all this has been said there still remains a beauty and charm that no written praise or analysis can convey.

"It is little wonder that the great Swedish Y. M. C. A. chorus took the prize at the great Paris festival seven years ago, and carried the French audience off its feet. That the audience at the Auditorium last evening was enthusiastic is saying too little. It was composed principally of the countrymen of the singers, and not only their music-loving sense, but their patriotism was moved by the splendid program given by the magnificent body of singers. The only criticism possible upon the proxram is that it was too heavy and serious; that it lacked the contrast of humor and the jollity that marked the concerts of the student choruses which have visited Minneapolis in the past. But to the lovers of the serious music of that marvelous Northland whose artistic spirit is still that of the Vikings, and whose melody re-echoes the heroic deeds of the time when Scandinavia ruled the seas, the concert last evening was a pleasure that will be marked with a red letter in the calendar of their lives. It is little short of incredible that such beautiful and finished effects can be produced by blended human voices. Cheers, waving of hankerchiefs and thunderous applause characterized the evening, and the program was more than doubled, by the encores demanded."

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Selling Orders Swept Away Feeble Resistance of the Bulls.

Bank Statement Was Disappointing and Further Decline Occurred.

New York, June 30.—At the opening of the stock market today there was a sprinkling of gains among the prominent leaders, which showed effort at support. There were free offerings at other points, however, causing sharp declines. Great Northern preferred fell 2; Canadian Pacific, 1¼; Atlantic Coast Line, Hide & Leather preferred and Anaconda, a point, and Pennsylvania, Reading, Atchison and American Ice, large fractions. Virginia Iron sold at a decline of 3½ and Chicago Terminal preferred at an advance of 2.

Selling orders swept away the feeble resistance of the buls and prices dipped sharply. Only a few of the prominent stocks, however, sold below the low level of yesterday. United States Steel and Reading established low records for the movement of 33⅞ and 121 respectively. After the forced selling orders had been disposed of the market rallied feverishly. Some stocks sold above yesterday's close, St. Paul and Northern Pacific gaining a point and Anaconda 2. The market was on the down grade again at 11 o'clock.

Bears covered some short lines in anticipation on the bank statement, but that document proved disappointing in the small contractions in loan and prices sold off to the lowest of the day. Pennsylvania, New York Central, Reading, United States Steel preferred and Amalgamated Copper were prominent. New York Central dropped 2¾, Pennsylvania 1⅝, Smelting 1¾, Reading 1⅝, Amalgamated Copper 1⅝ and St. Paul and United States Steel preferred 1. The Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo stocks lost 3, Northwestern 2, Atlantic Coast line 1¾, Atchison 1½, Illinois Central ⅝, Southern railway 1¼, Wells Fargo 5, Tennessee Coal 4, and others a point. Covering again caused rallies which reached 1 in a few stocks. The rally was held in most cases, but the closing was irregular.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Trading in New York stocks was irregular today, with prices in the early trading benerally lower, but towards the close there was considerable short covering, which caused a slight rally. The bank statement was fair and caused a certain amount of covering. The market has had a good break, and it would seem that the feeling is too pessimistic, as general conditions are regarded as sound, and the decline has been caused more by bear raids than unfavorable conditions.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today suffered another decline and theliquidation was very heavy. All the high priced stocks suffered and there seemed to be a total absence of buying orders. Many stop orders were reached and the only buying came from the shorts. We look for sharp rallies from time to time, but do not expect to see any sustained rise for some time.

Miller to Baker: The selling of gilt-edged securities is not to be regarded lightly. The larger interests do not absorb the stocks, and without their aid it is useless, during the temper now displayed, for the street to look for anything but lower prices, barring natural rallies.

The Cotton Market.

New York, June 30.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 4@5 points on the old crop and 2 points lower to 1 point higher on the new crop. Shorts after the opening prices advanced on covering and the strength of July in New Orleans with the general list about 3@4 points higher. July was 9 points higher during the middle of the morning.

Cotton futures closed steady. Closing bids: July, 10.30; August, 10.31; September, 10.32; October, 10.31; November, 10.32; December, 10.37; January, 10.40; February, 10.41; March, 10.48. Spot closed quiet; mid ups, 10.80; mid gulf, 11.05. No sales.

Bank Statement.

New York, June 30.—The statement of the clearing house banks for this week shows that the banks hold $12,055,750 over the legal reserve requirements. This is an increase of $1,142,825 over last week. The statement follows: Loans, $1,056,944,000; decrease, $813,400; deposits, $1,049,617,900; decrease, $144,700; circulation, $48,362,000; decrease, $108,700; legal tenders, $87,275,500; increase, $2,878,300; specie, $187,184,500; decrease, $1,699,300; reserve, $274,460,000; increase, $1,179,600; reserve required, $262,404,250; increase, $36,175; surplus, $12,055,750; increase, $1,142,825; ex-United States deposits, $15,885,025; increase, $1,098,675.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: In spite of the heavy selling and decline in New York market, the copper shares held firm and there is very little pressure to sell and the better class of stocks are in good demand on every little reaction. All the urgent liquidation seems to be over and weak accounts have been sold out or strengthened so that any further drive in New York market will not hurt the copper shares much.

NEW BROKERAGE OFFICE.

Gay & Sturgis to Open Monday---R. G. Hubbell in Charge.

Gay & Sturgis of Boston, members of the Boston Stock exchange will open offices in Duluth Monday morning at 326 West Superior street. Ralph G. Hubbell, who has been with the Duluth office of Paine, Webber & Co., for several years, will have charge of the new Gay & Sturgis office. The firm will deal in Boston and New York stocks and will make its wire service an especial feature. A direct and exclusive wire service with Boston and New York will be maintained and the firm believes that the promptness of the receipt of quotations and the execution of orders will delight its patrons. All of the listed and unlisted copper stocks in which Duluth people are interested and deal will be handled and quoted.

ANOTHER MUTINY IN THE TURKISH ARMY

Hodeika, Turkish Arabia, June 30.—Another mutiny has broken out among the Turkish army reserves serving in Yemen province. Sixteen battalions demanded that they be repatriated and the commander-in-chief, marshal Felzi Pasha, ordered the forts to open fire on the mutineers, who surrendered after a few hundred of them had been killed. The rebel Arab forces are advancing on Amran and an important engagement is reported to have been fought, both sides sustaining heavy losses.

Dies in St. Paul.

Miss Henrietta L. Boggs of St. Paul, daughter of Mrs. James A. Boggs, formerly of Duluth, died Thursday at the home in St. Paul, 700 East Third street. She was 16 years of age. The funeral took place today. Mrs. Boggs is well known to many Duluth people, for during the life of Mr. Boggs she made her home here for some years.

PUT IN BIG DRY DOCK

American Ship Building Company in Need of Repairing Space.

New Place Will be Able to Accommodate Larger Vessels.

The American Shipbuilding company is about to put in a new dry dock at one of the lower lake ports where it has shipyards, and presumably, from the dispatches on the matter, the new dock is likely to go in at Cleveland. It is understood that the new dry dock will be the largest on the lakes and will be able to accommodate even the threatened 700-footers with considerable ease. At least, that is the outlook. President Wallace of the company will not give out anything definite yet in regard to the matter, but says the plans will be announced in due time. Concerning this one of the Cleveland papers says:

Another big dry dock is badly needed at this end of the route in order to take care of the many large freighters that are coming out, and Cleveland, of course, is the best place on Lake Erie for it to be located. All the big docks at Lake Erie ports are occupied at present and some of them have all the business they will be able to take care of for the next two months.

Last week a big steel steamer was damaged at this end of the route and as all the docks were taken, she had to go to the head of Lake Superior for repairs. If she was badly damaged and not in shape to make the trip up the lakes, she would have to wait until repairs on vessels that were in the docks were completed.

Vessels are in the three local dry docks at present. The steamer Zimmermain, which was one of the worst wrecked boats that was ever brought to this port, is in No. 1 dock, and it will be some time before repairs on her are completed. The barge Manda, which was placed in No. 2 dock last night, will be a big job. She was on the rocks in the Detroit river and five of her tanks were punctured.

Repairs on the steamer Crescent City which is in dry dock at Lorain, will not be completed before Aug. 1, and it will take from sixty to ninety days to make repairs on the barge Manila. She is in dry dock at Toledo. The steamer Steel King is in the big dry dock at Buffalo, where she will be for two weeks. The steamer Matsafa, which was wrecked last fall, is still at the head of Lake Superior, but she may be brought here for repairs. If the officials of the American Shipbuilding company decide to build the new plant they will have four dry docks at this port. The new dock at Lorain will be compelted next fall and the company will then have two big docks at that port.

Marine Man in Politics.

The grand president of the Tug Firemen & Linemen's Protective association, John Bourke, will try to go to the legislature from Sault Ste Marie, Mich., and take a hand in electing the United States senator in the interests of union labor. His candidacy for the Republican nomination was announced a few days ago. Bourke says he will support a man for senator who will uphold what he thinks are the rights of the masses. He has the labor vote with him and friends believe he will beat the machine at the primaries. Bourke is one of the most prominent marine men of the Great Lakes.

The Ishpeming Launched.

Detroit, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Ishpeming, second of a trio of 10,000 ton vessels building for the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company by the Great Lakes Engineering company, was launched at the Morse yard at noon today. The vessel was christened by Miss Agnes Hayden of Ishpeming, daughter of a well known attorney of that city. Many prominent people from Ishpeming, Cleveland, Detroit and other places were present. The Ishpeming is 560 feet long, 530 feet keel, fifty-six feet beam and thirty one feet deep. It is a thirty-three hatch boat and is equipped with triple expansion engines and boilers. It will be ready for service in August.

Another Steamer Ordered.

Buffalo, June 30.—The Buffalo & Susquehanna Steamship company yesterday placed an order with the American Shipbuilding company for a 552-foot steamer of 10,000 tons capacity. The boat will come out in April, 1907.

TO INVESTIGATE RENTING OF FARMS

Professor to Study Tenure of Farm Land in Southern Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., June 30.—A study of the cause of the rapid increase of farming on rented land and of the best methods of renting farm land is to be made during the present summer under the direction of the University of Wisconsin by Professor H. O. Taylor of the department of political economy. This investigation is to be undertaken because it has been found that the number of tenant farmers has increased so rapidly in recent years that now more than one-forth of the farmers of southern Wisconsin are renters. It is important that the investigation should be undertaken by the state, for the reason that there is no permanent landlord class. Most of the landlords are retired farmers who, by hard work and careful saving, have managed to become the owners of good farms from which they have a right to expect a fair income in their old age. The tenant farmers, as a rule, are young men who are just getting a start, but who, if they have energy and opportunity, will in many instances become the owners of the farms. The importance of a proper adjustment of relations between these two classes so that the land may be well farmed to the benefit of the owner, the tenant, and the state, is evident.

The purpose of the investigation is two fold; first, to ascertain the cause of the increase of the tenant class; and second, to make a study of the best methods of renting land. Out of the 20,000 men who own farms which they rent to tenants, it is believed that a large number will be found who have given considerable thought to the best methods of letting land. By bringing together the experience of the many, it will be possibly of great interest and value to a large number of men who have had little experience in renting land.

In order to get as complete and accurate information as possible concerning the conditions, Professor Taylor, during the next three months, will visit farmers in all the counties of southern Wisconsin. He has arranged trips through Iowa, LaFayette, Green, Rock, Walworth, Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson, Dodge, and Ozaukee counties. He desires to meet all farmers of these counties who are interested in the renting of land, and will call upon all those who, by sending their names and addresses indicate their desire to furnish information. Dr. Taylor has been studying the subject of land tenury both in Europe and America, and has recently published a monograph on "The Decline of Land Owning Farmers in England." The results of the present investigation of farm land tenure in southern Wisconsin will be published as soon as the material can be compiled.

FAME OF DUELLIST WINS HONORS AT 70.

Paris, June 29.—Though Henri Rochefort, the fire-eating veteran journalist, must be more than seventy years old, he is still one of the most remarkable duellists in France. Few men dare match swords with M. Rochefort, and he is constantly challenging people who find one way or another of not meeting him.

M. Rochefort's latest "antagonist" is M. Buneau-Varilla, son of the engineer who has figured so prominently in the Panama canal negotiations. M. Bunau-Varilla is also a journalist, and M. Rochefort took exception to an article written by him and sent his seconds to M. Varilla's house. They were told that Monsieur was "out of town," but would return in a week.

At the expiration of that time Rochefort's seconds called again, but were told that M. Varilla had not returned. They then left a letter, saying they would await a reply until noon the next day, but as no answer came the incident has been considered closed, and the redoubtable marquis-communard, Henri Rochefort, counts one more to the list of his bloodless victories.

Your corpuscles are hungry.

If you are indolent, tired lacking in ability to push to the front in the game of business, it's because your blood corpuscles are hungry!

They want iron.

Give it to them and they'll multiply so as to give you increased strength and energy and a renewed interest in life. Eat and you'll feel the steady day-in-and-day-out glow of health as never before. Eat Apitezo and you won't spend half of your mornings "getting your wits together."

Apitezo is a delicious, crisp cereal that you eat with milk or cream. It tastes good and it does good because it contains a proper proportion of every food element that your system needs.

Apitezo Biscuits, 15c the package. Apitezo Grains, 10c the package.

Sold by grocers everywhere.

The genuine comes in a sealed package bearing the signature of Arbuckle Bros., and contains one pound full weight. Any reliable grocer can easily obtain it but if yours is misguided enough to offer an imitation or tries to substitute his own loose grocery store coffee, send to us direct.

Neither circumstances nor combinations shall prevent your having Arbuckles' Ariosa coffee if you want it. For your convenience, if you cannot obtain it from a nearby store, we will send ten full pounds from our nearest depot, packed in a strong wood box, transportation paid to your freight station. Price will be $1.80. There will be nothing more to pay. You can send express or postal money order. Price fluctuates and is not guaranteed for any period.

The coffee will come in the original wrappers bearing the signature of Arbuckle Bros., which entitles you to presents. Ten pounds mean ten signatures to start with! You don't have to sell anything to get the presents—there is no work for you to do; the presents are simply given free for signatures. If your friends save signatures for you that will help. You get a choice of nearly 100 useful articles—all of them illustrated in colors in a book we will send you free if you write for it.

The presents are all right. We distributed 4,000,000 presents in twelve months. But it is the quality of Ariosa—the fact that it is the greatest coffee value in the world for the money, that makes its sales for 37 years greater than the sales of all other packaged coffees in the United States combined. It is a blend of Brazilian coffee of delicious flavor and aroma, that increases the power and ambition to work. We drink it ourselves with the best coffee in the world to choose from.

Don't buy loose coffee. You may be sure that it collects the dust of the store and freely absorbs impurities. You never know where it comes from, where it has been or how much it has been handled. There is nothing to identify it except the price—no way to know positively that you are actually receiving what you pay for—the grocer doesn't know for he has to trust somebody who trusts somebody else. Insist upon Arbuckles' Ariosa Coffee and if your grocer refuses to sell it to you write to us.

By the original mother's process of coating the bean patented by this firm, the delightful flavor and aroma characteristic of our skilled coffee blending and roasting is preserved to you intact wherever you may be—and it is not to be compared with crude and primitive methods on a small scale. It is best to grind at home as used, warming slightly to develop flavor and make it grind easily.

LABOR DOINGS IN UNIONISM

Unions Elect Their Officers—Shartel on Political Committee.

UNION MEETINGS:

Tomorrow — Typographical Labor hall; Theatrical Stage Employes, Lyceum theater.

Monday—Building Structural Alliance, Labor World hall; Barbers, Labor World hall; Stone Masons, Axa hall.

Tuesday—Carpenters, Rowley hall; Musicians, Kalamazoo hall; Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Labor World hall.

Wednesday—Tailors, Axa hall; Cigarmakers, Labor World hall; Steamfitters' Helpers, Labor World hall.

Thursday—Steam Engineers, Axa hall; Electrical Workers, Labor World hall; Stationary Engineers, Axa hall.

Friday—Leather Workers, Labor World hall; Iron Moulders, Sloan hall; Bricklayers, Axa hall; Ship Carpeners, Sloan hall.

Saturday—Bakers and Confectioners, Kalamazoo hall; Boilermakers, Axa hall; Brewery Workers, Kalamazoo hall.

Generally speaking, the chief matter before the unions of the city is the matter of acquiring grounds and a pavillion of their own in order that they may have a place for celebrations, picnics, etc., and also a place which they can rent and make money out of. The matter is now up for a referedum vote in the unions and will be reported at the trades assembly meeting on July 20. The vote will be in by July 15 and it is said to seem likely that the matter will be adopted and the necessary $3,000 subscribed.

Duluth Typographical union No. 136 will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow afternoon in Labor World hall. The installation of officers for the ensuing year will take place. Organizer Devereaux of St. Paul is expected to be present at the meeting and this will undoubtedly bring out a large attendance. The printers of the city are very well satisfied with the condition of the strike here which has been in progress since last October. The latest bulletin received from the headquarters of the union is most encouraging and it is believed here among the printers that the outlook is that the strike all over the country will soon be settled.

The Typothetae which is the organization of boss printers will be held in Buffalo on July 16, which is about four weeks ahead of the annual convention of the Typographical union which will be held at Colorado Cprings, Colo., in August. This is rather unusual, for the Typothetae generally meets after the Typographical union has held its annaul. The Typothetae is to act on the agreement of the printing pressmen and assistants. It is likely that the present eight-hour day strike of the typos will come up also. The question is: What will be done?

Last Tuesday evening the Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers elected the following officers for the ensuing six months: President, Andrew Johnson; vice president, William Perry; recording secretary, James Powers; financial secretary, M. Oiseth; treasurer, H. A. Diars; delegates to the trades assembly, Henry DeRoche, T. G. Freshney and James Powers.

The Cigarmakers have elected the following officers for the present new term: President, J. Patshknowski; vice president, A. Schade; recording secretary, John Oakes; financial secretary, M. Ettinger.

The officers of the Carpenter's union, recently elected for the new term are: President, George Burkher; vice president, J. F. Roberts; recording secretary, James Fencil; financial secretary, J. L. Mork; delegate to the trades assembly, J. Wiles.

Riley Hartley, financial secretary of the Electrical Workers local union is a candidate for the office of inspector of wiring for the city. He is being pushed by his union and will likely have quite a following in the trades union movement for the place. The appointment is to be made by the city engineer as soon as the two telephone companies and the electric light company sign agreements guaranteeing to pay the wages of such an inspector up to the first of the year after which the city must pay it. The office will pay $150 per month and will be a position of responsibility, in view of the fact that the city is determined to have wires so run that there will be a minimum of danger of high voltage wires crossing telephone wires and perhaps causing the death to some user of the talking machines.

The State Federation Council met at Federation hall, St. Paul last Sunday with all present except Garfield Morrison of Mankato. President McElroy and Secretary-Treasurer McEwen were also present. The question of raising the per capita tax was put to a refereudum vote of the unions, and will undoubtedly be carried. The political committee of unionists in St. Paul were present and requested that the council committee act in conjunction with them as far as politics went, as they had already done much work on that line themselves. As their work has been in line with the Federations' policy there will be no conflict on that point. President McElroy announced a portion of the political committee as follows:

First district, H. W. Libby of Winona; second district, Garfield Morrison of Mankato; fourth district, J. J. McHughes of St. Paul; fifth district, John Walqust of Minneapolis; eighth district, Joseph Shartell of Duluth. Deacon of Minneapolis, and Ives of St. Paul have been named as committeemen at large and the first meeting of the political committee will be held in St. Paul tomorrow.

THE WESTERN COAL INDUSTRY

Chicago, June 30.—The Black Diamond says: Features of anything like what might be called a striking character seem to be entirely lacking in connection with the Western coal trade this week. The only market change in actual market conditions is to be noted in the anthracite trade, where the approaching end of the month has produced an effect in increasing the number of orders for immediate shipment or delivery. Prices of the various Eastern bituminous coals have remained steady, with production held fairly proportionate to demand. In most grades and kinds the demand has been light. On Western bituminous coals the market has continued weak. The demand has been light, with a superfluity of bargain hunters in some quarters, shopping around in an effort to take advantage of existing conditions to bear the market still further. While this class of buyers, by their alertness, have been able to pick up an occasional bargain in car service coal, which the owner was willing to sacrifice rather than risk further loss from demurrage charges, they have found the proposition entirely different when they have tried the same tactics for forcing matters in connection with the securing of low rates on contracts. Sales agents and jobbers who would yield a point or two on a single sale, have for the most part been standing firmly against all attempts to alter established or circular prices on long-term business.

RICH BACHELOR PEER FOOLS MATCHMAKERS.

London, June 29.—Lord Howard de Walden, the richest bachelor peer, is still uncaptured, although matchmaking mothers have been stalking him for five or six seasons. He is twenty-six years of age and has an agreeable personality. The following admirable sketch of him accompanies a cartoon in Vanity Fair:

"He is a tall young man with a good figure, an eyeglass and a philosophic temperament. He was educated at Eton.

"He is well known to the racing world, yet he is not enamored of the turf, and is said to have been discovered reading poetry after the big race of the day had started.

"He is a fine fencer, and he is an authority on armor. He smokes a meerschaum pipe and loathes politics. He is devoted to motor boats, is a benevolent friend to literary men and artists with ambitions, and is believed to write blank verse of considerable merit."

Lord Howard de Walden's property in London is as extensive as the Astor estate in New York, and, altogether, he is the most eligible young man in England.

Low Rates to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

From June 25th to July 7th, inclusive, agents of the Northern Pacific railway will sell round trip tickets to San Francisco and Los Angeles at exceptionally low rates. The round trip from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and Superior for $61.90. Tickets are good until Sept. 15th, 1906. Liberal stopover privileges. Enjoy a delightful journey and visit Yellowstone Park en route. Side trip rate to park, $49.50, including rail and stage transportation and five and a half days at the park hotels. For full information, write or call on City Ticket office, 334 West Superior street, Duluth, Minn.
